ALLIES HIT REDS' MAIN DEFENSES

Johnston Will Decide Wage Formula

Labor 'Gripes' Are Heard By ESA Director

Senators Would Propose Hearings

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston asserted today he would shatter the deadlock over a wage formula for the immediate emergency without further notice to labor leaders.

Concluding a three-hour meeting with the four chiefs of the United Labor Policy Committee, Johnston said he had heard "all their gripes" and had learned a lot.

But he told reporters he would make his own decision, notify Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson what it was, and then announce it. But he made it clear that under the Defense Mobilization Act he considers he is the one to settle the impasse.

Would Propose Hearings

Meanwhile, two senators offered to propose public hearings if it would help solve a dispute in which labor leaders have challenged the handling of the mobilization program as unfair.

Chairman Murray (D-Mont.) of the Senate Labor Committee and Chairman Humphrey (D-Minn.) of the Senate Labor Committee and Chairman Humphrey (D-Minn.) of the subcommittee on labor-management relations, said in a joint statement that the situation threatened the stabilization already achieved in such relations during the emergency.

The snarl followed the resignation of the three labor members of the Wage Stabilization Board, acting on orders of the ULPC last Thursday night, after the public and industry members adopted a formula limiting wage increases to 10 per cent above the Jan. 15, 1950, levels.

That formula is subject to Johnston's approval, modification, or rejection.

There was a possibility the stabilizer would assemble another Wage Stabilization Board and ask it to take another look at the formula, so that it would not be necessary for him to impose a one-man decision controlling wages of millions of American workers.

Assembles Information

He said he was assembling "technical information" on wages and prices in the next day or so, indicating that his decision would be delayed at least for the balance of this week.

The labor leaders will meet tomorrow morning to discuss their several conferences with Johnston, President Truman, and White House Special Counsel Charles S. Murphy.

The policy committee also will discuss possible action on a motion by Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers proposing that the AFL, CIO and railroad unions in the ULPC withdraw their participation entirely from the mobilization program.

Member Of Pillsbury Family, Two Others Killed In Plane Crash

PAXTON, Neb., Feb. 22 (AP)—A member of the Pillsbury Milling Company family and two other prominent Minnesotans were killed today in a plane crash here.

The victims:

Edmund P. Pillsbury, 37, Minneapolis, vice president of Pillsbury Mills, Inc.

Alfred D. Lindley, 47, Minneapolis attorney, former Olympic skier and recently an unsuccessful Republican candidate for Congress from Minnesota's Fifth District.

Dexter L. Andrews, 38 secretary and director of the Earl Partridge Co., general merchandise wholesale firm at Minneapolis.

The men were en route from Minneapolis to Aspen, Colo., to ski.

Canadians See First Korean War Action

Tramping in rain-sodden clothing over slippery mountain passes, the Canadians jumped off at 8 a. m. and by 5:45 p. m. they were firmly entrenched after having reached their objective.

M'Keldin Names Munshower State Police Head; Shipley Confirmed As Parole Chief

NOMINATED — Mayor Elmer F. Munshower (above), of Frederick, 65-year-old citizen-soldier, yesterday was nominated by Gov. Theodore McKeldin to be superintendent of the Maryland State Police. (AP Wirephoto).

Maryland Governor Unwraps "Greenbag"

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 22 (AP)—Gov. McKeldin unwrapped his "greenbag" of nominations to hundreds of public offices today and won immediate confirmation for one of his major choices.

Then Senate approved A. Earl Shipley, Westminister attorney and former state senator from Carroll County, as director of parole and probation.

Shipley succeeds F. Murray Benson, a Democrat, as head of the office which weighs all bids for freedom from state penal institutions.

As a former senator, Shipley was eligible for immediate consideration. His confirmation was unanimous, Chairman Sybert (D-Howard) of the Committee on Executive Nominations reported.

Besides Shipley McKeldin nominated:

1. Mayor Elmer F. Munshower of Frederick as superintendent of state police, to succeed Col. Carey Jarman.

Stockbridge Named

2. Enos Stockbridge of Baltimore County as director of the Department of Correction, to succeed Reuben Oppenheimer.

3. Dr. Oliver Collins, Baltimore pastor, to the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, to serve the unexpired term of William Mason Shehan, now senator from Talbot County.

4 John L. Estes, Cumberland labor leader, to the Employment Security Board, to succeed Joseph P. McCurdy.

As a whole, the list fulfilled Republican ambitions for a strong voice in the state and many localities which had been denied for the 14 years in which the party lacked the appointive power of a governor.

If McKeldin's nominees are eventually confirmed by the Senate, Republicans will hold a majority for the first time in years on the Tidewater Fisheries Commission. And for as long as the oldest department employe could recall, none of the three commissioners would be associated with the seafood industry.

Munshower Must Resign

In addition to Dr. Collins, the Governor nominated John P. Tawes of Crisfield to replace Allen A. Sollers, another Republican whose six-year term expires in June. Dr. Collins, who would serve for two years, is pastor of the First Methodist Church in Baltimore. Tawes, nominated to a full six-year term, is an automobile dealer.

Munshower will have to resign as mayor of Frederick to become state police chief. An Army colonel who served as superintendent for more than two years under the late Gov. Harry W. Nice, Munshower was reluctant to give up his municipal office. He accepted only after "I insisted that I wanted and needed him," McKeldin said.

Senators Report Alaska Defense Would Halt Reds

Could Invade But Not Capture Vital Areas

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP) — Russia can invade Alaska and the Aleutian islands because some areas must be left undefended on the ground, a Senate subcommittee said today.

But the Reds cannot capture the critical areas of the vital northern territory.

Reaching this conclusion, the senators lauded the "present state of alertness and vigilance" of American forces on guard against a surprise onslaught.

With such a defense, the group said, "there can be no Pearl Harbor in Alaska."

Nevertheless "it appears that additional combat troops and possible additional aviation is required," the senators said.

They spoke sharply of the nation's "austerity" allotment of troops for the territory. They said that despite "changing conditions throughout the world" there had been no upward "revaluation" in the Alaskan defense forces.

There is much lacking in the defense program there, according to the report made by the Senate Armed Services Preparedness Subcommittee, based on a study by a three-man task force. This inquiry panel was headed by Sen. Hunt (D-Wyo) and included Morse (R-Ore) and Saltonstall (R-Mass).

Posthumous Caesarian Operation Saves Baby

NASHVILLE, Ill., Feb. 22 (AP) — An expectant mother died today in an ambulance bound for a hospital 27 miles away and the family doctor ordered the ambulance turned back to his office, where the baby was saved.

A six-pound, nine-ounce boy, one month premature, was delivered in the posthumous Caesarian operation. It was the second child for the woman, Mrs. Mabel Haake, 33, Nashville. Her husband, Paul Haake, is employed by a coal mine shovel firm.

Lost Trio Guests Of Mo. Governor

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 22 (AP)—Three strangers appeared at the door of the Governor's manson last night.

The doorman thought they were members of the Legislature and let them in.

The strangers thought they were in a hotel and inquired about the possibilities of something to eat soon.

They wound up as guests of Gov. Forrest Smith at turkey dinner.

What did the guests, identified only as farm machinery salesmen, have to say?

"Well," commented the Governor, "they advised me to buy farm machinery while I still can get it."

Police, Court Should Know "Clothes Make The Man"

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 22 (AP)—Police and municipal court know well today that "clothes make the man."

They should. Police booked a woman as a man, questioned her as a man, locked her up in the men's section of the city jail and municipal court sentenced her as a man—to the workhouse, an all male institution.

It wasn't until she reached the workhouse and was ordered, along with other new arrivals, to "shower down," that officials returned to the proper gender. The "he" protested she was a "she."

And all the time the principal in the case, Carrie Bliss, 31, Pennington, Minn., made no attempt to hide her sex. A first offender, Carrie just wasn't acquainted with police procedure.

The hitch came because of Carrie's appearance. Everyone assumed she was a man because she wore blue trousers, a white shirt and mackinaw jacket, had a short, mannish haircut and a deep tan. Her hands were work-hardened.

Carrie explained she always wears men's clothes, because she does farm work and during World War II was a welder in Seattle ship yards.

Carrie was arrested Monday for writing two bad checks totaling $26.98.

K-F Told Right Man Could Aid In Getting Loan

Official Assumed Boyle Was The Man

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—An executive of Kaiser-Frazer Corp., borrowers of $69,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, told Senate investigators today his firm had been tipped it could get better terms on its loans by hiring the right man to handle them.

The story came from Chad Calhoun, vice president of the automobile company, testifying at a hearing called by a Senate Banking sub-committee which has charged that political favoritism and influence has affected the RFC's landing policy.

But who the right man might be was not established clearly at today's hearing.

Calhoun said that he understood from a conversation with Edgar Kaiser, president of his company, that the man to employ was William M. Boyle Jr., Kansas City, Democratic national chairman.

RFC Director Helped Friend

However, Calhoun based his assumption on a report of a conference Kaiser had with another Detroit industrialist, Rex Jacobs, in December, 1949.

Jacobs testified later that he did not recall that Boyle's name was mentioned in his conversation with Kaiser. But he said the name of Max Siskind, a former law partner of Boyle's, was mentioned as a man who might be helpful to Kaiser-Frazer. He suggested that might have led to an impression that he was recommending Boyle.

Kaiser himself did not mention Boyle's name when he testified. He remarked that Calhoun "probably drew certain conclusions" after he had talked with him and prepared a memorandum of the conversation.

The subcommittee's inquiry helped an old friend of his obtain a, $300,000 RFC loan by personally assigning the RFC examiner who made the recommendations on the application.

"Unusual" Procedure

The friend is C. Edward Rowe, principal owner of the Harrington and Richardson Arms Company of Worcester, Mass. Rowe subsequently joined the RFC directorate and is now vice chairman of the board.

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill) asked Willett if he had not departed from regular procedure in personally assigning the examiner.

"Yes sir, it is very unusual," Willett said, "x x x I did it as a personal favor to Judge Rowe. Judge Rowe has been a personal friend of mine for years."

The loan was made to Harrington and Richardson last April 10. Willett said it was a good loan and already had been repaid in full.

Atomic Airplane Is Step Nearer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—New strides toward development of the first atom-powered airplane—a craft that might fly 80 times around the world on one pound of fuel—were disclosed today.

Climaxing four years of intensive research, the Air Force and the Atomic Energy Commission announced that the first phase in the program to produce an atomic plane has now been completed.

This was the top-secret "NEPA" project. The initials stand for "Nuclear energy for propulsion of aircraft."

Informants said the completion of "NEPA" marks the transition from slide-rule theory to the drafting board where blueprints will be drawn for construction of an experimental model of the atom-powered airplane engine.

Until now, the work has centered almost entirely on mathematical computations and theoretical possibilities.

Duchess Of Windsor's Condition Satisfactory

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP)—The Duchess of Windsor today underwent an operation, described as minor. Her condition was reported satisfactory.

She is the former Wally Warfield of Baltimore, for whom King Edward VIII gave up the British throne.

Spaatz Urges U. S. Air Force Of 250 Groups

Whitehead Calls For More Bombers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP) — A huge American air force of 250 groups should be built up quickly Gen. Carl (Tooey) Spaatz said today, because if war comes Russia "must be strangled by air."

Such a force would be more than twice the size of the 95-100 groups now being formed. It would be about the number the United States had in World War 11, but the planes would be more powerful.

Spaatz, retired Air Force chief of staff and famous World War II leader, testified to the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee, studying the subject of troops for Europe and related issues.

Any war with Russia, he testified, would be won by air power, with the support of the Army and Navy, rather than by surface forces with the backing of air power. He said the present Air Force goal is "too low and the pace is too slow."

However, he backed the administration plan to bolster the defenses of Western Europe by sending four divisions of ground troops to join the two now there.

Spaatz said he thought the four divisions might produce the courage to build up strength over the next four of five years to a point where Western Europe ground and air forces would more nearly approximate the forces Russia now has.

He made it plain that he considered the main function of ground troops in Europe would be to guard U.S. air bases "so we can bring the mass of air power against the heart of Russia."

In addition to Spaatz, two other air generals took the witness chair, testifying that long-range bombers should be given priority in the nation's defense buildup because "they are the only thing that can deliver a knockout blow to Russia."

Lt. Gen. Ennis Whitehead, chief of the Air Defense Command, told senators that both the long-range striking arm and this country's own aerial defense forces need to be "beefed up."

Whitehead joined with Lt. Gen. Harold George, retired, former assistant chief of staff for war plans, in testifying before the committee.

Presidential Tenure Amendment Needs 3 More States' Approval

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP) — Approval of only three more states is needed to limit presidents to two elective terms in the White House. It may come within the next few weeks.

The Texas Legislature, the 33rd state to do so, completed ratification today of the 22nd Amendment to the U. S. Constitution. The amendment limits presidential tenure to 10 years.

Ratification by three-fourths of the states—36—is required.

Cars To Be Chained Until Fines Paid

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Feb. 22 (AP)—The old hitching post, or something akin to it, is scheduled for a comeback in Grand Island.

Hereafter, the City Council decided, cars found in the post-office service zone will be chained to rings anchored in the curbing and held until payment is made of a $2 impounding fee and a $1 parking fine.

Compromise Bill To Lower Draft Age Introduced

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP) — Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee today introduced a compromise bill calling for drafting boys of 18½ years. It bears tentative committee sanction.

However, another round of hearings on the bitterly debated subject opens up Monday. Final committee action is expected early next month. The present draft law expires in July.

The bill is designed to prevent any youth being sent into combat or overseas before his 19th birthday. It provides four months basic training. Leave and travel time is presumed to occupy the other two months.

Like a bill approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee and awaiting action in the Senate, the proposed House measure would stretch the present period of draft service from 21 to 26 months.

The Senate bill permits induction of youths of 18, provided all available young men in the 19 through 25 years bracket are called first.

Both bills differ from the original Pentagon proposal which called for lowering the draft age to 18, without restrictions, and providing for a system of universal training.

The problem of lowering the draft age has received gingerly handling by the legislators. Their mail has been flooded with angry protests. The floor debate will reflect this, but leaders expect some kind of 18-year-old draft to be approved.

Churchill Wants Briton To Head Pact Sea Forces

Conservative Leader Stirs Commons Storm

LONDON, Feb. 22 (AP) — Winston Churchill stirred the House of Commons today by charging Britain had been "brushed out of the way" with the nomination of an American admiral to command Atlantic pact sea forces.

The Conservative leader asked Prime Minister Attlee indignantly: "Was there not a British admiral capable of discharging these functions?"

Churchill's sharp questioning of Attlee roused the house to fever pitch. Other Conservatives and some Laborite members shouted queries across the chamber, cheered and booed.

Fechteler Is Nominee

The Prime Minister declined to disclose the man named, but it has been known here for some time that Adm. William N. Fechteler, now commander-in-chief of the U. S. Atlantic Fleet with headquarters in Norfolk, Va., is the nominee.

Churchill was Britain's first lord of the Admiralty at the outset of both world wars. Although he assured the house of his friendly feelings toward the United States, he could not resist the opportunity to compare the anti-submarine records of the British and American navies.

Will Reconsider Position

"It was possible not very long ago for one country to sink 525 German U-boats, compared to 174 by the United States," he said.

Obviously taken back by the storm his announcement created, Attlee finally had to promise Britain's position with regard to Fechteler's appointment would be reconsidered.

Churchill, at the top of his form, stormed that the Labor Government had allowed Britain to be treated like a stepchild.

New Hormone Grows Hair On Bald Pates In 5 Weeks

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP)—A new hormone has grown hair on two men who had been bald for five years, it was reported here today.

Starting five weeks ago, the hormone was rubbed on in a cream, daily for several days, and then intermittently.

Today, it was said, each man has hair about an inch long on the bald area—not fuzz but apparently normal hair—with a total of about 20,000 hairs on each head and signs that more may come. This count is about one-sixth of the normal amount for an average young man.

The report on the hormone's work was made at a news conference by Albert Roberts, president of the United Research Laboratories, Philadelphia. This is a family company, established about 10 years ago.

An earlier report was made in Philadelphia about two months ago, telling of the discovery of the new hormone and effects on white rats.

Roberts said today that two other research institutions are experimenting with the hormone on humans. He said these other experiments are favorable but did not further identify them.

Roberts reported that he discovered the hormone while extracting the new hormone, ACTH, about two years ago.

Battle Raging Near Road Hub Of Hoengsong

U. N. Drive Slowed After 12-Mile Gain

TOKYO, Friday, Feb. 23 (AP)— A 100,000-man Allied offensive last night hit the main Chinese Red defense line in Central Korea and fierce fighting broke out.

Earlier the six-nation Allied forces had rolled ahead up to 12 miles at some points against little resistance.

The enemy's main defenses were found around the road hub of Hoengsong. One American force drove to the town's southwest edge, the U. S. Eighth Army's communique said.

A central front dispatch reported stiff enemy resistance against the U. S. Ninth Corps along a line east and west of Hoengsong.

The road hub, 10 miles north of Wonju, is a key objective of the Allies' "Operation Killer" because an estimated 15,000 Chinese are believed to be committed there under orders to hold or die.

West of Hoengsong, other Allied troops crossed the vital lateral supply road from Hongchon to Seoul at several points. Hongchon is 15 miles northwest of Hoengsong, and is an enemy massing point.

Fighting Near Chipyong

Two of the four U. S. divisions in the offensive, which opened Wednesday along a 55-mile front, battled in the Hoengsong area.

There was more heavy fighting northwest of Chipyong, the central front town saved last week by an encircled French and American combat team. Chipyong is 20 miles west of Hoengsong.

The Eighth Army communique reported "a heavy concentration" of enemy troops near Chipyong.

Air observers said there also were big enemy concentrations 10 miles west of Wonju and about an equal distance southeast of Chipyong.

The Allied troops, tanks and self-propelled guns moved along muddy roads or over rain-drenched mountains.

An Eight Army briefing officer said that despite the fighting there were signs that the main enemy forces still were withdrawing.

South Koreans of the U. S. 10th Corps engaged in a six-hour battle last night about 15 miles southeast of Hoengsong.

Allies Drive On Pyongchang

Farther east, American infantrymen and tanks today drove close to Pyongchang, a war-wrecked town which air observers earlier reported was being abandoned by the Reds. Pyongchang, 25 miles southeast of Hoengsong, is on the eastern flank of the 55-mile-long central front drive.

"Operation Killer" sent an estimated 60,000 American troops slogging northward through the Korean mud, together with Allied forces from Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

The first two days of the renewed U. N. attacks cost the Reds more than 2,000 casualties, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters announced.

The Eighth Army announced that Communist casualties Wednesday were 1,718 dead, wounded or captured in ground action alone. This brought the cumulative total of Red casualties from Jan. 25 through Feb. 21 to a staggering 117,575 through ground action alone.

Britain Opposes N. Korean Drive

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—Britain is reported to have told the United States that it opposes any attempt by United Nations forces to reconquer North Korea.

But the British government, in expressing this view, has taken what amounts to a flexible position regarding the crossing of the 38th parallel.

Its views on the parallel may be roughly summarized this way:

The commander on the scene must have discretion to send troops across it as the military situation warrants. The line must not be regarded as one that cannot be crossed at all. It is conceivable that military requirements might be such as to cause a fixed front in some sectors would be north of the parallel.

The important consideration in the British view, informed diplomats said, is that United Nations forces should not again undertake a major operation designed for the conquest of all North Korea up to the Manchurian border. This would require troop commitments which the British with their emphasis on Western Europe obviously oppose and it would also, in their view, tend to lessen the chances for a negotiated settlement which they are anxious to get.

K-F Told Right Man Could Aid In Getting Loan

Official Assumed Boyle Was The Man

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—An executive of Kaiser-Frazer Corp., borrowers of $69,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, told Senate investigators today his firm had been tipped it could get better terms on its loans by hiring the right man to handle them.

The story came from Chad Calhoun, vice president of the automobile company, testifying at a hearing called by a Senate Banking sub-committee which has charged that political favoritism and influence has affected the RFC's landing policy.

But who the right man might be was not established clearly at today's hearing.

Calhoun said that he understood from a conversation with Edgar Kaiser, president of his company, that the man to employ was William M. Boyle Jr., Kansas City, Democratic national chairman.

RFC Director Helped Friend

However, Calhoun based his assumption on a report of a conference Kaiser had with another Detroit industrialist, Rex Jacobs, in December, 1949.

Jacobs testified later that he did not recall that Boyle's name was mentioned in his conversation with Kaiser. But he said the name of Max Siskind, a former law partner of Boyle's, was mentioned as a man who might be helpful to Kaiser-Frazer. He suggested that might have led to an impression that he was recommending Boyle.

Kaiser himself did not mention Boyle's name when he testified. He remarked that Calhoun "probably drew certain conclusions" after he had talked with him and prepared a memorandum of the conversation.

The subcommittee's inquiry helped an old friend of his obtain a, $300,000 RFC loan by personally assigning the RFC examiner who made the recommendations on the application.

"Unusual" Procedure

The friend is C. Edward Rowe, principal owner of the Harrington and Richardson Arms Company of Worcester, Mass. Rowe subsequently joined the RFC directorate and is now vice chairman of the board.

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill) asked Willett if he had not departed from regular procedure in personally assigning the examiner.

"Yes sir, it is very unusual," Willett said, "x x x I did it as a personal favor to Judge Rowe. Judge Rowe has been a personal friend of mine for years."

The loan was made to Harrington and Richardson last April 10. Willett said it was a good loan and already had been repaid in full.

Atomic Airplane Is Step Nearer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—New strides toward development of the first atom-powered airplane—a craft that might fly 80 times around the world on one pound of fuel—were disclosed today.

Climaxing four years of intensive research, the Air Force and the Atomic Energy Commission announced that the first phase in the program to produce an atomic plane has now been completed.

This was the top-secret "NEPA" project. The initials stand for "Nuclear energy for propulsion of aircraft."

Informants said the completion of "NEPA" marks the transition from slide-rule theory to the drafting board where blueprints will be drawn for construction of an experimental model of the atom-powered airplane engine.

Until now, the work has centered almost entirely on mathematical computations and theoretical possibilities.

Duchess Of Windsor's Condition Satisfactory

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP)—The Duchess of Windsor today underwent an operation, described as minor. Her condition was reported satisfactory.

She is the former Wally Warfield of Baltimore, for whom King Edward VIII gave up the British throne.

Spaatz Urges U. S. Air Force Of 250 Groups

Whitehead Calls For More Bombers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP) — A huge American air force of 250 groups should be built up quickly Gen. Carl (Tooey) Spaatz said today, because if war comes Russia "must be strangled by air."

Such a force would be more than twice the size of the 95-100 groups now being formed. It would be about the number the United States had in World War 11, but the planes would be more powerful.

Spaatz, retired Air Force chief of staff and famous World War II leader, testified to the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee, studying the subject of troops for Europe and related issues.

Any war with Russia, he testified, would be won by air power, with the support of the Army and Navy, rather than by surface forces with the backing of air power. He said the present Air Force goal is "too low and the pace is too slow."

However, he backed the administration plan to bolster the defenses of Western Europe by sending four divisions of ground troops to join the two now there.

Spaatz said he thought the four divisions might produce the courage to build up strength over the next four of five years to a point where Western Europe ground and air forces would more nearly approximate the forces Russia now has.

He made it plain that he considered the main function of ground troops in Europe would be to guard U.S. air bases "so we can bring the mass of air power against the heart of Russia."

In addition to Spaatz, two other air generals took the witness chair, testifying that long-range bombers should be given priority in the nation's defense buildup because "they are the only thing that can deliver a knockout blow to Russia."

Lt. Gen. Ennis Whitehead, chief of the Air Defense Command, told senators that both the long-range striking arm and this country's own aerial defense forces need to be "beefed up."

Whitehead joined with Lt. Gen. Harold George, retired, former assistant chief of staff for war plans, in testifying before the committee.

Presidential Tenure Amendment Needs 3 More States' Approval

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP) — Approval of only three more states is needed to limit presidents to two elective terms in the White House. It may come within the next few weeks.

The Texas Legislature, the 33rd state to do so, completed ratification today of the 22nd Amendment to the U. S. Constitution. The amendment limits presidential tenure to 10 years.

Ratification by three-fourths of the states—36—is required.

Cars To Be Chained Until Fines Paid

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Feb. 22 (AP)—The old hitching post, or something akin to it, is scheduled for a comeback in Grand Island.

Hereafter, the City Council decided, cars found in the post-office service zone will be chained to rings anchored in the curbing and held until payment is made of a $2 impounding fee and a $1 parking fine.

Compromise Bill To Lower Draft Age Introduced

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP) — Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee today introduced a compromise bill calling for drafting boys of 18½ years. It bears tentative committee sanction.

However, another round of hearings on the bitterly debated subject opens up Monday. Final committee action is expected early next month. The present draft law expires in July.

The bill is designed to prevent any youth being sent into combat or overseas before his 19th birthday. It provides four months basic training. Leave and travel time is presumed to occupy the other two months.

Like a bill approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee and awaiting action in the Senate, the proposed House measure would stretch the present period of draft service from 21 to 26 months.

The Senate bill permits induction of youths of 18, provided all available young men in the 19 through 25 years bracket are called first.

Both bills differ from the original Pentagon proposal which called for lowering the draft age to 18, without restrictions, and providing for a system of universal training.

The problem of lowering the draft age has received gingerly handling by the legislators. Their mail has been flooded with angry protests. The floor debate will reflect this, but leaders expect some kind of 18-year-old draft to be approved.

New Hormone Grows Hair On Bald Pates In 5 Weeks

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP)—A new hormone has grown hair on two men who had been bald for five years, it was reported here today.

Starting five weeks ago, the hormone was rubbed on in a cream, daily for several days, and then intermittently.

Today, it was said, each man has hair about an inch long on the bald area—not fuzz but apparently normal hair—with a total of about 20,000 hairs on each head and signs that more may come. This count is about one-sixth of the normal amount for an average young man.

The report on the hormone's work was made at a news conference by Albert Roberts, president of the United Research Laboratories, Philadelphia. This is a family company, established about 10 years ago.

An earlier report was made in Philadelphia about two months ago, telling of the discovery of the new hormone and effects on white rats.

Roberts said today that two other research institutions are experimenting with the hormone on humans. He said these other experiments are favorable but did not further identify them.

Roberts reported that he discovered the hormone while extracting the new hormone, ACTH, about two years ago.

Conservative Leader Stirs Commons Storm

LONDON, Feb. 22 (AP) — Winston Churchill stirred the House of Commons today by charging Britain had been "brushed out of the way" with the nomination of an American admiral to command Atlantic pact sea forces.

The Conservative leader asked Prime Minister Attlee indignantly: "Was there not a British admiral capable of discharging these functions?"

Churchill's sharp questioning of Attlee roused the house to fever pitch. Other Conservatives and some Laborite members shouted queries across the chamber, cheered and booed.

Fechteler Is Nominee

The Prime Minister declined to disclose the man named, but it has been known here for some time that Adm. William N. Fechteler, now commander-in-chief of the U. S. Atlantic Fleet with headquarters in Norfolk, Va., is the nominee.

Churchill was Britain's first lord of the Admiralty at the outset of both world wars. Although he assured the house of his friendly feelings toward the United States, he could not resist the opportunity to compare the anti-submarine records of the British and American navies.

Will Reconsider Position

"It was possible not very long ago for one country to sink 525 German U-boats, compared to 174 by the United States," he said.

Obviously taken back by the storm his announcement created, Attlee finally had to promise Britain's position with regard to Fechteler's appointment would be reconsidered.

Churchill, at the top of his form, stormed that the Labor Government had allowed Britain to be treated like a stepchild.

Battle Raging Near Road Hub Of Hoengsong

U. N. Drive Slowed After 12-Mile Gain

TOKYO, Friday, Feb. 23 (AP)— A 100,000-man Allied offensive last night hit the main Chinese Red defense line in Central Korea and fierce fighting broke out.

Earlier the six-nation Allied forces had rolled ahead up to 12 miles at some points against little resistance.

The enemy's main defenses were found around the road hub of Hoengsong. One American force drove to the town's southwest edge, the U. S. Eighth Army's communique said.

A central front dispatch reported stiff enemy resistance against the U. S. Ninth Corps along a line east and west of Hoengsong.

The road hub, 10 miles north of Wonju, is a key objective of the Allies' "Operation Killer" because an estimated 15,000 Chinese are believed to be committed there under orders to hold or die.

West of Hoengsong, other Allied troops crossed the vital lateral supply road from Hongchon to Seoul at several points. Hongchon is 15 miles northwest of Hoengsong, and is an enemy massing point.

Fighting Near Chipyong

Two of the four U. S. divisions in the offensive, which opened Wednesday along a 55-mile front, battled in the Hoengsong area.

There was more heavy fighting northwest of Chipyong, the central front town saved last week by an encircled French and American combat team. Chipyong is 20 miles west of Hoengsong.

The Eighth Army communique reported "a heavy concentration" of enemy troops near Chipyong.

Air observers said there also were big enemy concentrations 10 miles west of Wonju and about an equal distance southeast of Chipyong.

The Allied troops, tanks and self-propelled guns moved along muddy roads or over rain-drenched mountains.

An Eight Army briefing officer said that despite the fighting there were signs that the main enemy forces still were withdrawing.

South Koreans of the U. S. 10th Corps engaged in a six-hour battle last night about 15 miles southeast of Hoengsong.

Allies Drive On Pyongchang

Farther east, American infantrymen and tanks today drove close to Pyongchang, a war-wrecked town which air observers earlier reported was being abandoned by the Reds. Pyongchang, 25 miles southeast of Hoengsong, is on the eastern flank of the 55-mile-long central front drive.

"Operation Killer" sent an estimated 60,000 American troops slogging northward through the Korean mud, together with Allied forces from Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

The first two days of the renewed U. N. attacks cost the Reds more than 2,000 casualties, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters announced.

The Eighth Army announced that Communist casualties Wednesday were 1,718 dead, wounded or captured in ground action alone. This brought the cumulative total of Red casualties from Jan. 25 through Feb. 21 to a staggering 117,575 through ground action alone.

Britain Opposes N. Korean Drive

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—Britain is reported to have told the United States that it opposes any attempt by United Nations forces to reconquer North Korea.

But the British government, in expressing this view, has taken what amounts to a flexible position regarding the crossing of the 38th parallel.

Its views on the parallel may be roughly summarized this way:

The commander on the scene must have discretion to send troops across it as the military situation warrants. The line must not be regarded as one that cannot be crossed at all. It is conceivable that military requirements might be such as to cause a fixed front in some sectors would be north of the parallel.

The important consideration in the British view, informed diplomats said, is that United Nations forces should not again undertake a major operation designed for the conquest of all North Korea up to the Manchurian border. This would require troop commitments which the British with their emphasis on Western Europe obviously oppose and it would also, in their view, tend to lessen the chances for a negotiated settlement which they are anxious to get.

Effect Of Ceilings On Used Cars Won't Be Seriously Felt At Once

By DAVID J. WILKIE

DETROIT—(AP)—Ceilings on used car prices have been expected in automotive trade quarters for several weeks.

Their effect on used car dealers and individual car buyers and sellers probably will not be seriously felt for another couple of months when used car buying normally moves upward.

Some trade sources said the new ceilings imposed by the government probably will enable used car dealers to advertise their cars "at below ceiling prices." Most used car sales right now, they added, are being made at under the top figures in the guide books.

Trade quarters do not deny some new cars have been put on sale in used car lots at prices higher than the retail delivered listing. They do question, however, that the practice has been as widespread as indicated in the Office of Price Stabilization statement.

Most such vehicles, trade authorities add, have come from individuals rather than from franchised dealers. They explained that since new car prices were rolled back the factories have done more than the usual amount of policing of retail trade practices.

No passenger cars were made during the last war—at least not from February 1942 until July 1945—so none of them were sold on the used car lots. Bona fide used cars were under rigid price ceilings during that time also.

However, immediately following the war, after price ceilings were lifted, a lot of new cars appeared on the used car lots and brought fancy prices. The industry, short of materials and plagued by labor disputes, had trouble getting into volume production.

That automatically stepped up the demand for used cars, too, and late prewar models in many instances brought prices higher than the original 1940 or 1941 listing. Some car owners, with influential dealer connections, were able to obtain delivery of two, three and more new cars in one year—and sell them at premium prices.

The present situation doesn't nearly approach that of the immediate postwar days, auto trade analysts say. They point out that 6,326,438 new cars were sold at retail last year and that dealers now have on hand or en route from the factories about 435,000 new vehicles. Only the fear of a car shortage later this year, they say, is stimulating demand at this time.

Kelly Workers To Be Furloughed

Federal orders curbing production of white sidewall tires will take its toll of Kelly Springfield Tire Company employes this week.

Plant officials said 35 or 40 employes will be furloughed.

The federal ban on white sidewalls was issued Saturday and went into effect Monday. The government said the action would save about ten per cent of the supply of natural rubber which must be used in the white sidewall. The order should not cut down the amount of regular tires available to consumers, it was added.

At the Celanese plant, Harrison C. Givens, Jr., said yesterday that CA Department production went back to normal last week. Yarn production he said is being increased when possible but is still below normal.

Both the Kelly and Celanese were hit by the recent strike of railroad switchmen which tied up raw materials.

Osage Indians Bury Their Chief In Colorful Rites

HOMINY, Okla.—(AP)—Oklahoma's oil-rich Osage Indians this week buried their chief in colorful tribal rites.

John Oberly, 71, died of a heart attack Sunday after serving as leader of the tribe for only two years.

The burial, in conformance with the Indian's Peyote religion, was held at high noon. Oberly's body, clothed in purple shirt, black and red blanket, buckskin leggings and moccasins, was laid so it faces to the east and the rising sun.

The venerable chieftain's hair was carefully braided and the face painted with zig-zagged white, red and black lines on cheek-bones and forehead.

"We are now orphans," intoned the Rev. George Pitts, who preached the funeral oration. "We are without a leader."

Pitts himself wore his hair in braids. A flowered handkerchief was tied about his neck and a pink-bordered blue blanket hung from his shoulders.

After the services, more than 300 mourners feasted on barbecue steer, chicken and turkey.

Tribesmen said a new chief will be selected by a tribal council in the near future.

A single train long enough to carry a year's output of coal in the United States would stretch six times aound the earth.

The first patent for a refrigerating machine was granted to Dr. John Gorie, Apalachicola, Fla., in 1851.

Young German Anti-Reds Play Daring Underground Game In Russian Sector

By TOM REEDY

BERLIN—(AP)—The Russian zone of Germany is pimpled with daring bands of young anti-Communists playing a reckless game of tag against despotism.

The bands are organized like the old French Maqui which plagued Hitler's occupation chiefs and pecked at Laval's puppet Vichy regime a decade ago.

The young East Germans are set up in cells of three or four. They operate under false names. Few know their comrades by anything except the "cover names." This winter they have distributed a half million leaflets urging the German population to resist Communism and Soviet policies.

They leave their "sign" at times, just to irk the security police. The big "F" for "Freiheit" (freedom) painted on walls has appeared even on Russian troop installations.

The movement, which has its headquarters in West Berlin and in Frankfurt, calls itself the League of German Youth. It claims 25,000 members on both sides of the iron curtain.

East German Communist authorities acknowledge existance of the movement. They claim, however, that the young opponents of their regime are former Hitler Jugend or SS officers trying to "revive fascism."

The East Berlin press recently charged the anti-Red underground was headquartered in a house near the Berlin residence of U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy.

The report was almost accurate but missed the location by about two city blocks. Nevertheless, the young league officers moved to a new spot quickly for safety's sake.

A 22-year-old leader of the league, whose parents still live in the Russian zone, said in an interview:

"We want West German youth to see Communist terror in the Soviet zone as it is. We have organized ourselves in such a way that any East German youth who wants to oppose dictatorship knows he has some support."

A so-called youth parliament held in West Berlin two months ago touched off the movement. The leader said 60 delegates represented the Soviet zone and upon their return to their homes created the "cells" for the underground.

The biggest weapons the 60 carried back, he said, were the knowledge delegates were informed of actual political conditions in the east.

"This chance to compare hits the Communists where they are weakest. If the comparison is made by one German to another, the first German is ready and eager to believe it. They are interested in truth, not propaganda.

"We have comrades in all the bigger communities of the East German republic," the leader said. "They correspond with a cover address in West Berlin and receive information material by courier."

Funds have been provided by German industrialists on a voluntary contribution basis. The leader indicated some of the donors are in East Germany.

The young adventurers are living dangerous existences. The new Soviet zone law to "protect the peace" is the most formidable weapon yet contrived against them. It is so broadly worded that any member of the organization can be indicted immediately as an enemy of the state and is, therefore, subject to long prison sentences or even death.

Hermann Josef Flade, the 18-year-old Dresdener who was sentenced to death for passing leaflets against the Communist elections, is believed an active member of the league. A world protest against the death sentence apparently impressed the East German courts, for they commuted it to 15 years imprisonment.

Tax On A Wife's Salary

Married women without young children are being counted on to relieve much of the manpower shortage in the present defense emergency. Even the wife whose husband gets a good salary could be attracted by the high wages and salaries open to women these days. At the same time, the working wife will keep in mind how much of a cut the federal income tax will take out of her pay envelope or salary check.

Here, for instance, is a wife who takes a job that pays her $67.50 a week. Suppose that her husband earns $5500 a year, that neither of them has any other income or a dependent, and that they file a joint return taking the standard deductions.

Well, the income tax under the new rates proposed by the Administration would be $900 a year if the only family income were the husband's salary. The tax would rise to $1700—$800 ($15.25 a week) more —after the wife takes that job. In other words, the higher tax reduces her $67.50 gross to $52.25 a week, net, as far as the total family income is concerned.

Here is a wife who takes a part-time job at $40 a week. If her husband has an excellent position paying $8900 a year, the income tax under the Administration-proposed rates would be $550 more because of the wife's income. Her $40 a week is reduced to a little less than $30 net. Then if the part-time job develops into a full-time one paying $4000 a year, the additional income tax reduces the $4000 to about $2700. net. And all this takes no account of any state income tax.

Also, the working wife has outlays for transportation, lunch, probably clothing and laundry, perhaps some additional maid service, that she would not have as a stay-at-home wife. So if she decides to take a job in this emergency she will probably be influenced not only by the money but also by the patriotic principle of the thing.

Time For Economy

From the standpoint of consumer income 1950 was the best year in the nation's history. Receipts by individuals from all sources, as reported by the Department of Commerce, rose to the fantastic figure of $223,000,000. This exceeded the previous record set in booming 1948 by $13,000,000,000, and was an increase of $17,000,000,000 over the previous year.

Last year closed with income at a high level, with the figure for the month of December much higher than that for the previous month. Year-end payments of dividends, which reflected high corporate earnings for the year, boosted the total.

However, principal factors in the December increase were wage and salary increases, which were general throughout the nation. Military pay was boosted by the war and the preparedness program. Consumer incomes also include net income from unincorporated business, farming operations, rents, government and private pension receipts, relief payments and other sources.

All this indicates 1950 was an unusually prosperous year for the nation on a dollars-and-cents basis. To be sure, more than $2,000,000,000 of the income reported came from insurance refunds to veterans. Government spending was also a factor.

The unhappy feature of the entire situation is the fact that the total consumer income for the year did not equal the national debt by more than $30,000,000,000. The nation is still solvent, but the time has arrived when there is need for economy in government to keep it that way.

Twisted Thinking

Madame Kusum Nair, head of a publishing house in India, says:

"India is not convinced that the democracies are worth fighting for as against Russia or communism. India does not identify communism with Russian imperialism. The Indian does not believe that every country that goes communist must necessarily become a satellite of Russia or ape Russhia's obvious shortcomings.

"India interprets Red revolutions in Asiatic countries as inevitable national upsurges, mainly agrarian in nature, resulting from and directed against domestic reaction and foreign imperialism. Most Indian intellectuals believe Marxism to be peculiarly suitable to Asiatic conditions."

The belief is widely held in India, the woman leader continues, that the United States is not only helping to bolster old imperialist interests but is evolving a new inmperialism. Donating 2,000,000 tons of wheat to India is a manifestation of this imperialism, no doubt.

After what has happened in China, it is beyond comprehension that anyone can reason as this woman does. Here was a proclaimed "agrarian" revolution. But the Chinese Communists wound up in the arms of Russia. Russia and Red China are working together now to subjugate the remainder of Asia, including India.

If the Indian woman thinks India would be allowed to pursue its own Communist course without Russian overlordship she certainly can't be very smart.

New York Divorce Law

Gov. Dewey of New York has been asked by a committee of the New York City Bar Association to endorse a bill introduced in the state legislature by one of its women members. Her bill calls for a 23-member commission to study and report on the state's divorce law. But the Empire State legislators have backed away from every similar proposal in recent years as though it were the plague.

The only legal ground for absolute divorce in New York is adultery. In almost all the other states additional grounds are desertion or cruelty or conviction of felony or habitual drunkenness. South Carolina, which until 1949 was the only state where divorces were not granted, now sanctions them for adultery, physical cruelty, desertion, or drunkenness.

Collusion in obtaining divorces in New York is admittedly widespread. Past investigations have even revealed professional co-respondents, who for a fee will furnish the make-believe evidence of adultery which is sufficient for many judges as support for a divorce action. The New York "Herald Tribune" recently called the situation an "edifice of sham and racket" and a "scandal exposed to public nausea every few years."

Those who defend the present New York divorce law point out that grounds other than adultery are sufficient for annulment of marriage or for legal separation. The opponents of the law argue that it leads to collusion and fraud also in obtaining annulments.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

A Modern Parable

IN A RECENT issue of the Medical Annals of the District of Columbia, there appeared a poem by Dr. Walter Freeman called "Psychological Plagues." These verses tell the story of the Master of Evil and the men of the machine age. The Master of Evil sees that Man is content with his power over all living beings and proceeds to plague him with germs that cause disease. Thru the tree of knowledge Man learns to conquer these "invisible enemies" with the antibiotics and other remedies, improvements in sanitation and the practice of cleanliness.

" . . . And he created machines
Whereby the strength and speed of his limbs were multiplied,
And his eyes and ears made keener;
And he fortified himself against the weather
And secured himself against hunger,
And depended no longer upon the sun alone for light."

• — • — •

Such progress perturbed the Master of Evil, so he called together his three sons, Hurry, Flurry, and Worry. He asked them to suggest measures to defeat Man's advances and "turn his prowess into misery." Hurry had a plan whereby he could make Man hasten to such an extent that he would lose the power of relaxation.

"'Tis well," said the Master of Evil.
"Go thou upon the earth and cause Man to speed and speed
And mayhap some of his best and fastest may kill or maim themselves in accidents.
Pay heed to his brain
That he work it faster and longer.
Let him resume work before digestion begins and before elimination,
That his bowels may be clogged and his body burdened."

Flurry decided that he, too, could vex Man by working thru his intestinal tract and other organs by making his heart beat faster, raising his blood pressure, and twisting his stomach. All this would harden Man's arteries and soften his brain.

• — • — •

Worry was the greatest of all the three sons and the Master of Evil knew it.

"Then said Worry unto him: 'All this of which my brothers have spoken can I do,
And more also in addition.
For I can work upon Man's imagination,
That same power with which he develops his theories and his machines.'"

Worry was an expert in his work. He could make Man suspicious of the actions of his friends, his family, and his wife. Moreover, he could cause him to fear to make decisions, to brood over mistakes, and make him lose sleep. As a result of the spade work of Hurry, Flurry, and Worry the Master of Evil says:

"Thus shall ye compensate for the lowly esteem in which we are fallen since Man gained power over natural forces.
Himself
He has not learned to control."

PAINFUL BACK

H. W. writes: Are there any exercises that will prevent arthritis of the back from becoming worse?

REPLY

It helps to keep the back muscles strong and in this respect, exercise is of value. But, because the majority of exercises include bending, care must be taken not to overdo or use too much force. This is avoided by increasing exertion gradually. Whenever soreness returns, this means that the gymnastics have been too vigorous. When backache is severe, rest is always preferred to activity.

This is a diagnostic problem that requires the services of a physician. Among the many possibilities are neuritis, the scalenus anticus syndrome, angina pectoris, myasthenia gravis, and anxiety.

Fighting Reported Between Chinese Communists And North Koreans; White House Intimates Note Change In Truman; Little Business Gets A Break

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Only fragramentary details have been cabled to the Pentagon, but open fighting has been reported between the Chinese Communists and North Koreans.

Generally these skirmishes have been discounted by American intelligence as accidental. It isn't unusual for trigger-happy troops to open fire on their own men by mistake.

However, at least one incident has been reported as a revolt against the Chinese. This was a shooting scrape between Chinese Communists and North Koreans on January 19 behind enemy lines. The Chinese quickly crushed the revolt after killing 150 North Koreans.

Meanwhile, hints of friction among our enemies continue to filter across the 38th Parallel. American intelligence officers do not believe a serious rift is imminent. However, they have detected a strange inferiority complex toward the Chinese among the Koreans—a combination of fear and hatred.

This is particularly true of South Korean troops, who fight fiercely against the North Koreans but seem to crumble under Chinese attack. Except for the South Korean wing that has advanced up the East Coast under the supporting guns of the U. S. Navy, the South Koreans have not won a major victory against the Chinese.

As a result, Lt. Gen. Matt Ridgway has now assigned South Korean patrols to count the Chinese dead. The psychological effect is to convince them that the Chinese are not supermen. Ridgway is also rotating South Korean units, integrating them with American units for a few weeks. The purpose is to bolster their confidence by experiencing victory over the Chinese.

Tense President

White House insiders are privately concerned by a dramatic change in Harry Truman. Once easygoing and warm-hearted, he is now tense and irritable. They attribute the change to the understandable strain of near war and the terrific burden placed on every President of the United States.

The President always had occasional moods of anger and bitterness. But, according to insiders, these have increased steadily in the past six months.

A visit with Mr. Truman used to be a real treat for a congressman or a visiting Elk. The President would greet him with a warm smile, put him at ease with a friendly comment, and listen sympathetically. Today, however, Mr. Truman is likely to drum the desk impatiently and break into the conversation with a savage denunciation of a real or imagined foe.

Recent visitors have been startled by the vigor and bluntness of his venom at Sen. Bill Fulbright, who hit at White House favoritism in the RFC.

The President's physician, Dr. Wallace Graham, is also worried by Mr. Truman's inability to relax and take those refreshing naps which helped him so much in the past.

Since the attempt on his life Mr. Truman has also shown an understandable reluctance to get out before the public. Congressional leaders and Democratic chieftains have been begging him to stump the country in support of his foreign policy. To this he recently replied:

"It's not up to me to go out. It's the responsibility of the Democratic party and our congressmen. They're laying down on the job and expect me to do everything."

Close friends of the President lay his irritability and tenseness to three factors:

1. The assassination attempt of the two Puerto Rican Nationalists. This left a deep scar. The President often talks among his intimates of this assassination attempt and what he would do if another attempt were made on his life.

2. The recent period of continued American defeats in Korea and the mass evacuation was more trying on Mr. Truman than even he cares to admit. The responsibility for this has weighed heavily on his mind.

During the critical days of the evacuation, the President slept little. On one particular evening he was told that Russian submarines and airplanes might menace most of the U. S. Fleet. Friends say it was at this time that all the pent-up feeling came out in the President's stinging letter to music critic Paul Hume.

3. The loss of Press Secretary Charley Ross was a heavy blow to Mr. Truman. Ross was an old and completely devoted friend who could soothe the President or give him common-sense advice.

This change in the President has convinced Democratic bigwigs that he definitely will not run again, but will retire in 1953.

Army Orders

This writer, who has sometimes griped about Army inefficiency, would like to congratulate Assistant Secretary of the Army Archibald Alexander for his efficient handling of the Army's procurement and munitions program.

Placing orders for armament is not an easy job. Furthermore, Congress was a little slow in allocating money. However, once the Army got its hands on a sizable appropriation, around the first of the year, it placed actual orders for 2½ billion dollars between January 2 and January 23.

Despite this record in January, it will probably be broken in February.

For example, within seven days after January 2, the Army had committed though had not drawn up all the contracts for 3½ billion dollars for heavy vehicles. This is the entire heavy-vehicle program up to now. Of the $12,530,000,000 that the Army has been authorized to spend for "logistical business," the Army has already committed $8,362,000,000.

Alexander should be especially congratulated for insisting that little business get a fair share of the contracts. While the figures are only available through November, at that time 75 per cent of all Army contracts — numerically — had gone to small business—defined as unaffiliated firms with 500 or fewer employes. Of course, only 30 per cent of the actual volume went to little business, because the heavy orders must go to firms big enough to handle them. Yet through subcontracts small business also gets a share of what the Army considers contracts for big business. For example, the average tank manufacturer lets out 3,000 sub-contracts and handles only 15 per cent of the dollar volume himself.

MATTER OF FACT

By JOSEPH And STEWART ALSOP

After The Victory

WASHINGTON.

SOBRIETY is a good mood in a war, and it is too early to ring the church bells because Lieutenant General Ridgway and the UN forces have now inflicted a bloody defeat on the enemy in Korea. Yet it is important to recognize that this defeat of the Communist offensive is a great and stirring event, which may prove to be a major turning point. To understand why, it is only necessary to consider the unhappy position of the Sino-Soviet high command in Korea.

The first thing to understand is that the Communist armies have suffered fearful casualties. The air force habit of counting corpses from the air, and making foolishly detailed claims, has given rise to skepticism on this point. Yet careful testing of the day-to-day claims, both of the air and ground forces, has revealed that current casualty estimates are, if anything, too low. There have by now been many such episodes as that at Namdae, where the air force claimed 75 enemy killed on January 16, and the next day advancing ground forces counted over 800 dead.

All kinds of evidence from within China have also confirmed that combat attrition, cold, hunger and disease are rapidly crippling the Communist armies. As of January 1, the enemy is believed to have had rather more than 450,000 men at the front, with another 450,000 to 500,000 men in reserve or in the original jump-off positions on the Yalu river. This overall total of almost a million men is now thought to be reduced to about 600,000.

Appalling Losses

In short, the enemy has been losing men at the staggering rate of 200,000 a month, and has seen one-third of his whole force melt away in this manner in the short period since the new year. These appalling losses are largely due to the fact that Chinese and North Korean armies have been fighting without tanks, without artillery and without air cover.

The North Koreans must recall with a certain bitterness the fact discovered from government papers captured at Pyongyang—that the Russians made the poverty-stricken North Korean state pay hard cash for every Russian weapon. The Chinese too must be embittered by the very limited help they have received from their Russian senior partners.

The Communist commanders tried to end their terrible losses by launching their great offensive, which was designed decisively to defeat the UN armies. It has failed, with even more terrible losses. There is little reason to believe that another such enemy offensive could succeed.

There are three ways out for the Communist high command, if the foregoing analysis is correct. The first is to attempt a different sort of offensive, using modern weapons to match ours. Tanks and artillery can be secured from Soviet Far Eastern stocks. But the Communists cannot bring them to the battlefield, and they cannot supply them with fuel and ammunition, unless they get air cover.

Two Alternatives

It is highly probable that the Mig jet fighters which have appeared near the Manchurian borders are actually flown by Russians, despite the Chinese markings. This is the most rational explanation of why these planes have not appeared directly over the battlefield. If the enemy's air problem is to be solved, this policy of caution must be changed. The Kremlin must order its Siberian air force to enter the Korean fighting, directly over the battlefield. In short, the first alternative open to the enemy is to

Developments In Moscow Ease Washington Tension

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—There's an easing of tension hereabouts. It isn't due to any one thing but to a number of circumstances—all of them, however, emanating from Moscow.

Beginning with the Stalin interview in Pravda, the world generally became aware that the Soviet Union wasn't thinking in terms of immediate war. But even before this —for several weeks now — officials have been wondering just why the Russian government has been so eager to bring about the four-power conference about which notes have been exchanged.

At first, at the instance of Russia, the scope of the conference was to be narrow. Then the Western Powers to whom the note was sent asked that the subjects be broadened so as to include all the major points in controversy. Instead of balking at this, the Russians have agreed to changes, and now it looks as if the conference will discuss not merely German rearmament but just about everything else that has been causing friction with Russia.

Not For Propaganda

In one breath, on the other hand, the spokesmen of the allied powers say they are glad to have such a meeting and in another they express dubt whether anything constructive can be accomplished. When it is asked what reason they have to explain why the Russians have insisted on the holding of the conference, the usual answer is that the Communists have in mind some sort of propaganda drive.

This explanation does not seem to fit the case. For the Communists have plenty of vehicles for propaganda. They could make speeches at the UN or they could start more propaganda blasts on the peace front and achieve as much publicity.

The real reason might well be sought in some other direction. The Russian dictatorship is fearful of the tension being created in the Western world. News of the program for rearmament of Germany must inevitably percolate through the iron curtain countries. Certainly it is being talked about in the satellite states.

While the "Great Debate" in the United States Senate is primarily domestic in its origin, the fact remains that any public discussion of how many American divisions are to be sent to Europe brings up the question of how many divisions the European countries are about to mobilize. And when there's any mobilization going on, European nations always feel nervous — and dictators particularly so.

The probability is that the Politburo is aware of the apprehensions being stirred among their own people generally as a result of the rearmament planning of the Western allies. To offset this, the Russian government must reassure its people that certainly there is no intention on its part to start a war. This means that more emphasis must be placed by the Russian rulers on the "peaceful intentions" of the Soviet regime, and no better way can be devised than to call a formal conference with the other powers and let the Russian people learn of the efforts to achieve peace which the Moscow envoys will try to make. Anyway, the record will soon show the Russian people, to the satisfaction of the Soviet government, that it is striving for peace.

It could mean that at the forthcoming conference some agreements might be made. Some minor points may be disposed of, and the conference may agree to meet at a later date. This might satisfy Russian public opinion.

May Slow Drastic Controls

The interview Stalin gave to Pravda stresses the belief that, at present, war is inevitable and places the blame for ultimate war on the aggressive groups in the allied countries. But, in the same statement, the Russian chieftain points out that the peoples of the Western countries do not want war either.

Despite the fact that these utterances are regarded as in the nature of propaganda designed perhaps to slow down our rearmament program, there is nevertheless a relaxing of pressure here. This does not imply any expected curtailment of the program as to size or scope, but it does mean that drastic controls may be slower in coming. Nobody is in a hurry, except in a crisis.

There still is a basic desire to impose the armament program on a civilian economy that is to be disturbed as little as possible. There is also talk of such increased capacity by 1952 as to meet both military and civilian needs.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

In The Family

PERHAPS you will permit me to say that mine is a very mixed family. We have in our home several regilions which are taken seriously. On the Passover, my family goes along with me at the traditional seder; and then we all go along with my wife to her Easter service. We maintain our differences, yet live a peaceful and even, if I may say so, a happy family life.

What brings that to mind is that religion plays so real a role in our lives and through it all pass our spiritual mentors, Rabbi Jonah B. Wise of Central Synagogue, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, minister of the Marble Collegiate Church, Bishop William A. Scully of Albany, Dr. Wilbur K. Thomas of the Congregational Church in Otis, Massachusetts. We somehow have accumulated a host of spiritual advisors and each exercises his influence upon some member of the family. Wilbur Thomas, who is a Quaker, has, for instance, made a lasting impression on a young son.

Perhaps we have found in our little family the secret of cooperation without compromise, a recognition that unity is under God but that each must be truly himself. While each moves in his own direction, we all do go together.

So, this week we shall all be celebrating a birthday on my side of the house—that of Rabbi Jonah Wise, who buried my first wife, a Chinese lady of rare nobility of character, and married me to the mistress of our home.

I can only know the quality of a man by his kindliness. I do not like secular or, if you please, civil marriages. I feel that marriages are not just contracts between two persons; that always a third party is present at a marriage and that makes it perfect, for the third party is God.

So when I asked my Rabbi whether he would unite us who are of different faiths, he not only was willing but invented a beautiful ritual for the occasion out of the Book of Ruth. It has not been forgotten by us because it was so graceful an introduction to the creation of a family.

Rabbi Jonah Wise was born in Cincinnati; his father being the distinguished founder of Reformed Judaism in this country. Isaac M. Wise, although an immigrant from Bohemia, loved this country and sought to establish here a ritual and a Jewish way of life that would be a union of the philosophy of his faith and the philosophy of America. He surely believed that so much of the feeling of America came from the Old Testament that we were here spiritually one people.

Out of his labors came the many reformed synagogues and temples throughout this country, the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, the Union prayer book in Hebrew and English, and the Americanization of the ancient ritual—an attempt to hold on to the hard core of tradition yet recognizing that the new world has a way of its own.

One of his daughters married an enthusiastic young newspaperman of Chattanooga, Tennessee, Adolph S. Ochs, who in time purchased the then faltering "New York Times" and made of it the most important newspaper in this country and perhaps in all the world. One of his sons is my rabbi, now celebrating his 70th birthday.

Our synagogue was founded in 1846 and its leader for a quarter of a century has been Jonah Wise, but that has been a small part of his career. For since Hitler came upon the scene, Dr. Wise has devoted himself to the rebuilding of wrecked lives through the United Jewish Appeal of which he is the national chairman. Trip after trip he took to Germany before the war, seeking means to rescue the frightened and hungry and broken in spirit. He risked much on these visits to Hitler's Germany.

Each year, on Thanksgiving Day, our synagogue holds union services with Christ Church Methodist and the Central Presbyterian Church, the three clergymen, Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, Dr. Theodore Cuyler Speers, and Dr. Wise, standing together in a union of gratitude for God's mercy.

Some clergymen are famous for their sermons; some are renowned as scholars; some are wonder-workers in public affairs. Jonah Wise is beloved. Little more can be said of any man who is moving into his seventies after a life of labor for humanity.

Fellowship Of Prayer

Daily Lenten Devotional

THE FELLOWSHIP GIVES

For they gave according to their means.
2 Corinthians 8:3 (R. S. V.).
Read Ephesians 4:28—32

We are continuing this subject one more day because upon the matter of giving depends the work which the Church is set to do. A church is rich, not because it has in it one or two or more rich members upon whom the people place the responsibility of keeping the institution financially solvent, but when every member from the least to the greatest gives according to his means.

The difference between a church moving out into a section of a city where it can build itself out of the community, and a church that builds itself into a run-down section of a city, is the difference between giving and not giving. All too many churches are moving away from their responsibility because changing conditions removed the well-to-do members, leaving behind the rank and file who were never taught how to give of their small means. Many downtown churches would not have folded their tents and moved elsewhere had the men and women of small means been trained in the grace of stewardship. No man is responsible for giving what he does not have, but only for what he has. It is the willingness that counts.

Let Us Pray: O Lord, teach us that we cannot hide in a napkin what we have, without peril to ourselves and to the kingdom of love and righteousnes which thy Son came to build. Amen.

Tax On A Wife's Salary

Married women without young children are being counted on to relieve much of the manpower shortage in the present defense emergency. Even the wife whose husband gets a good salary could be attracted by the high wages and salaries open to women these days. At the same time, the working wife will keep in mind how much of a cut the federal income tax will take out of her pay envelope or salary check.

Here, for instance, is a wife who takes a job that pays her $67.50 a week. Suppose that her husband earns $5500 a year, that neither of them has any other income or a dependent, and that they file a joint return taking the standard deductions.

Well, the income tax under the new rates proposed by the Administration would be $900 a year if the only family income were the husband's salary. The tax would rise to $1700—$800 ($15.25 a week) more—after the wife takes that job. In other words, the higher tax reduces her $67.50 gross to $52.25 a week, net, as far as the total family income is concerned.

Here is a wife who takes a part-time job at $40 a week. If her husband has an excellent position paying $8900 a year, the income tax under the Administration-proposed rates would be $550 more because of the wife's income. Her $40 a week is reduced to a little less than $30 net. Then if the part-time job develops into a full-time one paying $4000 a year, the additional income tax reduces the $4000 to about $2700, net. And all this takes no account of any state income tax.

Also, the working wife has outlays for transportation, lunch, probably clothing and laundry, perhaps some additional maid service, that she would not have as a stay-at-home wife. So if she decides to take a job in this emergency she will probably be influenced not only by the money but also by the patriotic principle of the thing.

Time For Economy

From the standpoint of consumer income 1950 was the best year in the nation's history. Receipts by individuals from all sources, as reported by the Department of Commerce, rose to the fantastic figure of $223,000,000. This exceeded the previous record set in booming 1948 by $13,000,000,000, and was an increase of $17,000,000,000 over the previous year.

Last year closed with income at a high level, with the figure for the month of December much higher than that for the previous month. Year-end payments of dividends, which reflected high corporate earnings for the year, boosted the total.

However, principal factors in the December increase were wage and salary increases, which were general throughout the nation. Military pay was boosted by the war and the preparedness program. Consumer incomes also include net income from unincorporated business, farming operations, rents, government and private pension receipts, relief payments and other sources.

All this indicates 1950 was an unusually prosperous year for the nation on a dollars-and-cents basis. To be sure, more than $2,000,000,000 of the income reported came from insurance refunds to veterans. Government spending was also a factor.

The unhappy feature of the entire situation is the fact that the total consumer income for the year did not equal the national debt by more than $30,000,000,000. The nation is still solvent, but the time has arrived when there is need for economy in government to keep it that way.

Twisted Thinking

Madame Kusum Nair, head of a publishing house in India, says:

"India is not convinced that the democracies are worth fighting for as against Russia or communism. India does not identify communism with Russian imperialism. The Indian does not believe that every country that goes communist must necessarily become a satellite of Russia or ape Russhia's obvious shortcomings.

"India interprets Red revolutions in Asiatic countries as inevitable national upsurges, mainly agrarian in nature, resulting from and directed against domestic reaction and foreign imperialism. Most Indian intellectuals believe Marxism to be peculiarly suitable to Asiatic conditions."

The belief is widely held in India, the woman leader continues, that the United States is not only helping to bolster old imperialist interests but is evolving a new inmperialism. Donating 2,000,000 tons of wheat to India is a manifestation of this imperialism, no doubt.

After what has happened in China, it is beyond comprehension that anyone can reason as this woman does. Here was a proclaimed "agrarian" revolution. But the Chinese Communists wound up in the arms of Russia. Russia and Red China are working together now to subjugate the remainder of Asia, including India.

If the Indian woman thinks India would be allowed to pursue its own Communist course without Russian overlordship she certainly can't be very smart.

New York Divorce Law

Gov. Dewey of New York has been asked by a committee of the New York City Bar Association to endorse a bill introduced in the state legislature by one of its women members. Her bill calls for a 23-member commission to study and report on the state's divorce law. But the Empire State legislators have backed away from every similar proposal in recent years as though it were the plague.

The only legal ground for absolute divorce in New York is adultery. In almost all the other states additional grounds are desertion or cruelty or conviction of felony or habitual drunkenness. South Carolina, which until 1949 was the only state where divorces were not granted, now sanctions them for adultery, physical cruelty, desertion, or drunkenness.

Collusion in obtaining divorces in New York is admittedly widespread. Past investigations have even revealed professional co-respondents, who for a fee will furnish the make-believe evidence of adultery which is sufficient for many judges as support for a divorce action. The New York "Herald Tribune" recently called the situation an "edifice of sham and racket" and a "scandal exposed to public nausea every few years."

Those who defend the present New York divorce law point out that grounds other than adultery are sufficient for annulment of marriage or for legal separation. The opponents of the law argue that it leads to collusion and fraud also in obtaining annulments.

A Modern Parable

IN A RECENT issue of the Medical Annals of the District of Columbia, there appeared a poem by Dr. Walter Freeman called "Psychological Plagues." These verses tell the story of the Master of Evil and the men of the machine age. The Master of Evil sees that Man is content with his power over all living beings and proceeds to plague him with germs that cause disease. Thru the tree of knowledge Man learns to conquer these "invisible enemies" with the antibiotics and other remedies, improvements in sanitation and the practice of cleanliness.

" . . . And he created machines
Whereby the strength and speed of his limbs were multiplied,
And his eyes and ears made keener;
And he fortified himself against the weather
And secured himself against hunger,

• — • — •

Such progress perturbed the Master of Evil, so he called together his three sons, Hurry, Flurry, and Worry. He asked them to suggest measures to defeat Man's advances and "turn his prowess into misery." Hurry had a plan whereby he could make Man hasten to such an extent that he would lose the power of relaxation.

" 'Tis well," said the Master of Evil.
"Go thou upon the earth and cause Man to speed and speed
And mayhap some of his best and fastest may kill or maim themselves in accidents.
Pay heed to his brain
That he work it faster and longer.
Let him resume work before digestion begins and before elimination,
That his bowels may be clogged and his body burdened."

Flurry decided that he, too, could vex Man by working thru his intestinal tract and other organs by making his heart beat faster, raising his blood pressure, and twisting his stomach. All this would harden Man's arteries and soften his brain.

• — • — •

Worry was the greatest of all the three sons and the Master of Evil knew it.

"Then said Worry unto him: 'All this of which my brothers have spoken can I do,
And more also in addition.
For I can work upon Man's imagination,
That same power with which he develops his theories and his machines.' "

Worry was an expert in his work. He could make Man suspicious of the actions of his friends, his family, and his wife. Moreover, he could cause him to fear to make decisions, to brood over mistakes, and make him lose sleep. As a result of the spade work of Hurry, Flurry, and Worry the Master of Evil says:

"Thus shall ye compensate for the lowly esteem in which we are fallen since Man gained power over natural forces.
Himself
He has not learned to control."

It helps to keep the back muscles strong and in this respect, exercise is of value. But, because the majority of exercises include bending, care must be taken not to overdo or use too much force. This is avoided by increasing exertion gradually. Whenever soreness returns, this means that the gymnastics have been too vigorous. When backache is severe, rest is always preferred to activity.

Fighting Reported Between Chinese Communists And North Koreans; White House Intimates Note Change In Truman; Little Business Gets A Break

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Only fragmentary details have been cabled to the Pentagon, but open fighting has been reported between the Chinese Communists and North Koreans.

Generally these skirmishes have been discounted by American intelligence as accidental. It isn't unusual for trigger-happy troops to open fire on their own men by mistake.

However, at least one incident has been reported as a revolt against the Chinese. This was a shooting scrape between Chinese Communists and North Koreans on January 19 behind enemy lines. The Chinese quickly crushed the revolt after killing 150 North Koreans.

Meanwhile, hints of friction among our enemies continue to filter across the 38th Parallel. American intelligence officers do not believe a serious rift is imminent. However, they have detected a strange inferiority complex toward the Chinese among the Koreans—a combination of fear and hatred.

This is particularly true of South Korean troops, who fight fiercely against the North Koreans but seem to crumble under Chinese attack. Except for the South Korean wing that has advanced up the East Coast under the supporting guns of the U. S. Navy, the South Koreans have not won a major victory against the Chinese.

As a result, Lt. Gen. Matt Ridgway has now assigned South Korean patrols to count the Chinese dead. The psychological effect is to convince them that the Chinese are not supermen. Ridgway is also rotating South Korean units, integrating them with American units for a few weeks. The purpose is to bolster their confidence by experiencing victory over the Chinese.

Tense President

White House insiders are privately concerned by a dramatic change in Harry Truman. Once easygoing and warm-hearted, he is now tense and irritable. They attribute the change to the understandable strain of near war and the terrific burden placed on every President of the United States.

The President always had occasional moods of anger and bitterness. But, according to insiders, these have increased steadily in the past six months.

A visit with Mr. Truman used to be a real treat for a congressman or a visiting Elk. The President would greet him with a warm smile, put him at ease with a friendly comment, and listen sympathetically. Today, however, Mr. Truman is likely to drum the desk impatiently and break into the conversation with a savage denunciation of a real or imagined foe.

Recent visitors have been startled by the vigor and bluntness of his venom at Sen. Bill Fulbright, who hit at White House favoritism in the RFC.

The President's physician, Dr. Wallace Graham, is also worried by Mr. Truman's inability to relax and take those refreshing naps which helped him so much in the past.

Since the attempt on his life Mr. Truman has also shown an understandable reluctance to get out before the public. Congressional leaders and Democratic chieftains have been begging him to stump the country in support of his foreign policy. To this he recently replied:

"It's not up to me to go out. It's the responsibility of the Democratic party and our congressmen. They're laying down on the job and expect me to do everything."

Close friends of the President lay his irritability and tenseness to three factors:

1. The assassination attempt of the two Puerto Rican Nationalists. This left a deep scar. The President often talks among his intimates of this assassination attempt and what he would do if another attempt were made on his life.

2. The recent period of continued American defeats in Korea and the mass evacuation was more trying on Mr. Truman than even he cares to admit. The responsibility for this has weighed heavily on his mind.

During the critical days of the evacuation, the President slept little. On one particular evening he was told that Russian submarines and airplanes might menace most of the U. S. Fleet. Friends say it was at this time that all the pent-up feeling came out in the President's stinging letter to music critic Paul Hume.

3. The loss of Press Secretary Charley Ross was a heavy blow to Mr. Truman. Ross was an old and completely devoted friend who could soothe the President or give him common-sense advice.

This change in the President has convinced Democratic bigwigs that he definitely will not run again, but will retire in 1953.

Army Orders

This writer, who has sometimes griped about Army inefficiency, would like to congratulate Assistant Secretary of the Army Archibald Alexander for his efficient handling of the Army's procurement and munitions program.

Placing orders for armament is not an easy job. Furthermore, Congress was a little slow in allocating money. However, once the Army got its hands on a sizable appropriation, around the first of the year, it placed actual orders for 2½ billion dollars between January 2 and January 23.

Despite this record in January, it will probably be broken in February.

For example, within seven days after January 2, the Army had committed though had not drawn up all the contracts for 3½ billion dollars for heavy vehicles. This is the entire heavy-vehicle program up to now. Of the $12,530,000,000 that the Army has been authorized to spend for "logistical business," the Army has already committed $8,362,000,000.

Alexander should be especially congratulated for insisting that little business get a fair share of the contracts. While the figures are only available through November, at that time 75 per cent of all Army contracts — numerically — had gone to small business—defined as unaffiliated firms with 500 or fewer employes. Of course, only 30 per cent of the actual volume went to little business, because the heavy orders must go to firms big enough to handle them. Yet through subcontracts small business also gets a share of what the Army considers contracts for big business. For example, the average tank manufacturer lets out 3,000 sub-contracts and handles only 15 per cent of the dollar volume himself.

MATTER OF FACT

By JOSEPH And STEWART ALSOP

After The Victory

WASHINGTON.

SOBRIETY is a good mood in a war, and it is too early to ring the church bells because Lieutenant General Ridgway and the UN forces have now inflicted a bloody defeat on the enemy in Korea. Yet it is important to recognize that this defeat of the Communist offensive is a great and stirring event, which may prove to be a major turning point. To understand why, it is only necessary to consider the unhappy position of the Sino-Soviet high command in Korea.

The first thing to understand is that the Communist armies have suffered fearful casualties. The air force habit of counting corpses from the air, and making foolishly detailed claims, has given rise to skepticism on this point. Yet careful testing of the day-to-day claims, both of the air and ground forces, has revealed that current casualty estimates are, if anything, too low. There have by now been many such episodes as that at Namdae, where the air force claimed 75 enemy killed on January 16, and the next day advancing ground forces counted over 800 dead.

All kinds of evidence from within China have also confirmed that combat attrition, cold, hunger and disease are rapidly crippling the Communist armies. As of January 1, the enemy is believed to have had rather more than 450,000 men at the front, with another 450,000 to 500,000 men in reserve or in the original jump-off positions on the Yalu river. This overall total of almost a million men is now thought to be reduced to about 600,000.

Appalling Losses

In short, the enemy has been losing men at the staggering rate of 200,000 a month, and has seen one-third of his whole force melt away in this manner in the short period since the new year. These appalling losses are largely due to the fact that Chinese and North Korean armies have been fighting without tanks, without artillery and without air cover.

The North Koreans must recall with a certain bitterness the fact discovered from government papers captured at Pyongyang—that the Russians made the poverty-stricken North Korean state pay hard cash for every Russian weapon. The Chinese too must be embittered by the very limited help they have received from their Russian senior partners.

The Communist commanders tried to end their terrible losses by launching their great offensive, which was designed decisively to defeat the UN armies. It has failed, with even more terrible losses. There is little reason to believe that another such enemy offensive could succeed.

There are three ways out for the Communist high command, if the foregoing analysis is correct. The first is to attempt a different sort of offensive, using modern weapons to match ours. Tanks and artillery can be secured from Soviet Far Eastern stocks. But the Communists cannot bring them to the battlefield, and they cannot supply them with fuel and ammunition, unless they get air cover.

Two Alternatives

It is highly probable that the Mig jet fighters which have appeared near the Manchurian borders are actually flown by Russians, despite the Chinese markings. This is the most rational explanation of why these planes have not appeared directly over the battlefield. If the enemy's air problem is to be solved, this policy of caution must be changed. The Kremlin must order its Siberian air force to enter the Korean fighting, directly over the battlefield. In short, the first alternative open to the enemy is to

Developments In Moscow Ease Washington Tension

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—There's an easing of tension hereabouts. It isn't due to any one thing but to a number of circumstances—all of them, however, emanating from Moscow.

Beginning with the Stalin interview in Pravda, the world generally became aware that the Soviet Union wasn't thinking in terms of immediate war. But even before this—for several weeks now — officials have been wondering just why the Russian government has been so eager to bring about the four-power conference about which notes have been exchanged.

At first, at the instance of Russia, the scope of the conference was to be narrow. Then the Western Powers to whom the note was sent asked that the subjects be broadened so as to include all the major points in controversy. Instead of balking at this, the Russians have agreed to changes, and now it looks as if the conference will discuss not merely German rearmament but just about everything else that has been causing friction with Russia.

Not For Propaganda

In one breath, on the other hand, the spokesmen of the allied powers say they are glad to have such a meeting and in another they express dubt whether anything constructive can be accomplished. When it is asked what reason they have to explain why the Russians have insisted on the holding of the conference, the usual answer is that the Communists have in mind some sort of propaganda drive.

This explanation does not seem to fit the case. For the Communists have plenty of vehicles for propaganda. They could make speeches at the UN or they could start more propaganda blasts on the peace front and achieve as much publicity.

The real reason might well be sought in some other direction. The Russian dictatorship is fearful of the tension being created in the Western world. News of the program for rearmament of Germany must inevitably percolate through the iron curtain countries. Certainly it is being talked about in the satellite states.

While the "Great Debate" in the United States Senate is primarily domestic in its origin, the fact remains that any public discussion of how many American divisions are to be sent to Europe brings up the question of how many divisions the European countries are about to mobilize. And when there's any mobilization going on, European nations always feel nervous — and dictators particularly so.

The probability is that the Politburo is aware of the apprehensions being stirred among their own people generally as a result of the rearmament planning of the Western allies. To offset this, the Russian government must reassure its people that certainly there is no intention on its part to start a war. This means that more emphasis must be placed by the Russian rulers on the "peaceful intentions" of the Soviet regime, and no better way can be devised than to call a formal conference with the other powers and let the Russian people learn of the efforts to achieve peace which the Moscow envoys will try to make. Anyway, the record will soon show the Russian people, to the satisfaction of the Soviet government, that it is striving for peace.

It could mean that at the forthcoming conference some agreements might be made. Some minor points may be disposed of, and the conference may agree to meet at a later date. This might satisfy Russian public opinion.

May Slow Drastic Controls

The interview Stalin gave to Pravda stresses the belief that, at present, war is inevitable and places the blame for ultimate war on the aggressive groups in the allied countries. But, in the same statement, the Russian chieftain points out that the peoples of the Western countries do not want war either.

Despite the fact that these utterances are regarded as in the nature of propaganda designed perhaps to slow down our rearmament program, there is nevertheless a relaxing of pressure here. This does not imply any expected curtailment of the program as to size or scope, but it does mean that drastic controls may be slower in coming. Nobody is in a hurry, except in a crisis.

There still is a basic desire to impose the armament program on a civilian economy that is to be disturbed as little as possible. There is also talk of such increased capacity by 1952 as to meet both military and civilian needs.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

In The Family

PERHAPS you will permit me to say that mine is a very mixed family. We have in our home several regilions which are taken seriously. On the Passover, my family goes along with me at the traditional seder; and then we all go along with my wife to her Easter service. We maintain our differences, yet live a peaceful and even, if I may say so, a happy family life.

What brings that to mind is that religion plays so real a role in our lives and through it all pass our spiritual mentors, Rabbi Jonah B. Wise of Central Synagogue, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, minister of the Marble Collegiate Church, Bishop William A. Scully of Albany, Dr. Wilbur K. Thomas of the Congregational Church in Otis, Massachusetts. We somehow have accumulated a host of spiritual advisors and each exercises his influence upon some member of the family. Wilbur Thomas, who is a Quaker, has, for instance, made a lasting impression on a young son

Perhaps we have found in our little family the secret of co-operation without compromise, a recognition that unity is under God but that each must be truly himself. While each moves in his own direction, we all do go together.

So, this week we shall all be celebrating a birthday on my side of the house—that of Rabbi Jonah Wise, who buried my first wife, a Chinese lady of rare nobility of character, and married me to the mistress of our home.

I can only know the quality of a man by his kindliness. I do not like secular or, if you please, civil marriages. I feel that marriages are not just contracts between two persons; that always a third party is present at a marriage and that makes it perfect, for the third party is God.

So when I asked my Rabbi whether he would unite us who are of different faiths, he not only was willing but invented a beautiful ritual for the occasion out of the Book of Ruth. It has not been forgotten by us because it was so graceful an introduction to the creation of a family.

Rabbi Jonah Wise was born in Cincinnati; his father being the distinguished founder of Reformed Judaism in this country. Isaac M. Wise, although an immigrant from Bohemia, loved this country and sought to establish here a ritual and a Jewish way of life that would be a union of the philosophy of his faith and the philosophy of America. He surely believed that so much of the feeling of America came from the Old Testament that we were here spiritually one people.

Out of his labors came the many reformed synagogues and temples throughout this country, the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, the Union prayer book in Hebrew and English, and the Americanization of the ancient ritual—an attempt to hold on to the hard core of tradition yet recognizing that the new world has a way of its own.

One of his daughters married an enthusiastic young newspaperman of Chattanooga, Tennessee, Adolph S. Ochs, who in time purchased the then faltering "New York Times" and made of it the most important newspaper in this country and perhaps in all the world. One of his sons is my rabbi, now celebrating his 70th birthday.

Our synagogue was founded in 1846 and its leader for a quarter of a century has been Jonah Wise, but that has been a small part of his career. For since Hitler came upon the scene, Dr. Wise has devoted himself to the rebuilding of wrecked lives through the United Jewish Appeal of which he is the national chairman. Trip after trip he took to Germany before the war, seeking means to rescue the frightened and hungry and broken in spirit. He risked much on these visits to Hitler's Germany.

Each year, on Thanksgiving Day, our synagogue holds union services with Christ Church Methodist and the Central Presbyterian Church, the three clergymen, Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, Dr. Theodore Cuyler Speers, and Dr. Wise, standing together in a union of gratitude for God's mercy.

Some clergymen are famous for their sermons; some are renowned as scholars; some are wonder-workers in public affairs. Jonah Wise is beloved. Little more can be said of any man who is moving into his seventies after a life of labor for humanity.

Fellowship Of Prayer

Daily Lenten Devotional

THE FELLOWSHIP GIVES

For they gave according to their means.
2 Corinthians 8:3 (R. S. V.).
Read Ephesians 4:28—32

We are continuing this subject one more day because upon the matter of giving depends the work which the Church is set to do. A church is rich, not because it has in it one or two or more rich members upon whom the people place the responsibility of keeping the institution financially solvent, but when every member from the least to the greatest gives according to his means.

The difference between a church moving out into a section of a city where it can build itself out of the community, and a church that builds itself into a run-down section of a city, is the difference between giving and not giving. All too many churches are moving away from their responsibility because changing conditions removed the well-to-do members, leaving behind the rank and file who were never taught how to give of their small means. Many downtown churches would not have folded their tents and moved elsewhere had the men and women of small means been trained in the grace of stewardship. No man is responsible for giving what he does not have, but only for what he has. It is the willingness that counts.

Let Us Pray: O Lord, teach us that we cannot hide in a napkin what we have, without peril to ourselves and to the kingdom of love and righteousnes which thy Son came to build. Amen.

To the Editor of The Cumberland News

Sir:

It has come to our attention that, in the January 31, 1951, issue of "The Cumberland News," there appeared on page 14 an article about the Somerset County Maple Festival. In this article, a Mr. Herman E. Basehore, co-chairman of the festival, makes certain questionable claims regarding maple syrup. In his statement, Mr. Basehore seems to have allowed his enthusiasm for Pennsylvania to carry him somewhat beyond the realms of reality.

We appreciate Mr. Basehore's love for the State of Pennyslvania. We freely concede that it is a fine state. On the other hand, comparing Somerset County maple syrup in the same sentence . . . . nay, the same newspaper . . . . with Vermont maple syrup makes icky-sticky goo of the gilded lily!

Vermont producers did at one time purchase maple syrup from Pennsylvania. As a matter of fact, we understand they still do. But inasmuch as our town of St. Johnsbury is widely known as The Maple Center of the World, we believe our manufacturers of maple products should be in a position to know what happens to various grades of maple syrup. Pennsylvania syrup is never used by Vermont producers for candy or table use. Pennsylvania syrup, processed by Vermont maple companies, is used commercially only, in tobacco and similar products.

We do agree with Mr. Basehore when he deplores the uneducated taste of the thousands who purchase a so-called "blended product" which is only 15 per cent maple. However, such products made in Vermont use 15 per cent Vermont maple syrup . . . . the best maple syrup in the world. When it comes to that incomparable, unforgettable real maple flavor in syrup, Vermont takes a back seat to no one. We have the best, and laboratory tests have conclusively proved that the more northerly located sugar maples have a finer-flavored syrup.

In closing, though, may we strike a more friendly note? We salute Pennsylvania and Somerset County. We are sure you are all very nice people, and we admire enthusiasm for one's own community and community products wherever it may exist. But when it comes to maple syrup, one's thoughts synonymize Vermont. Our maple festivals may not be staged in the grand Pennsylvania manner . . . . our queens may or may not be less queenly. . . . and our lure may not hook anything more important than an assistant Secretary of Agriculture. In Vermont, we may have to take a back seat in some things. But in maple syrup, we ride in front.

Perhaps Mr. Basehore would like to share the seat with us . . . . but he'll have to come to Vermont to do it!

Yours truly,

ROBERT S. WEBSTER,

Coal Field Violence

February 22, 1951

To the Editor of The Cumberland News,

Sir:

I am writing to give you some information on the . . . activities which have been going on in the western section of Garrett County and Preston County, W. Va. Roving pickets have taken the law into their own hands in preventing the miners from going to work at the non-union mines. Violence and mob rule have dominated the scene for the past four weeks.

The buses, cars and trucks, which carry the miners to work at the mines near Kingwood, have been stoned until nearly all the glass in the windows has been shattered; men have been injured so badly with the large stones that they have been treated by physicians. The size of the stones indicated that the throwers, who are supposed to be representing the United Mine Workers of America, intended to do more than scare. Furthermore, the pickets have gone to the homes of the miners who want to work, issuing threats of violence to them and their families if they come out to work. The company officials, in order to protect their employes who want to earn an honest day's living, have had to resort to placing corrugated steel over their bus windows and steel grills over their windshields. This is happening in America, I am sorry to admit.

For several days, the law seemed to close their eyes to the violence that was going on. Now, the state police have been traveling with some of the pickets. However, threats of violence are still going on. One case of mistaken identity was reported by a salesman who was stopped on the highway by this mob. If he would have been the company official he was first mistaken for, who knows how far their lawlessness would have gone? Personal violence and injury was undoubtedly their intention.

The FBI was called in after two railroad cars were derailed. B. and O. detectives were called in when the pockets were opened on three drop-bottom hoppers. An attempt to burn a barn which housed mine ponies also took place at a mine near Kingwood. A diesel motor owned by the B. and C. Coal Company, was also damaged when sand was poured into it. Appeals have been made to the judge and prosecuting attorney to take the necessary steps to stop this lawlessness at once. There have been about 25 arrests on felonious charges but this only represents a few of those men who have been behaving like gangsters.

I am not saying that miners do not have the right to negotiate, but I do say that they should do it peacefully. Pickets are not special citizens who are allowed to beat up their neighbors who want to work. Law must rule if we are to preserve our freedom. Each miner who wants to work should have the privilege of going to work without fear of his life. About 2,000 miners work in the non-union mines in Preston County and this roving band of pickets represents only about 300 out of this number. This minority should not be allowed special privileges to scare the majority into doing what they do not want to do. The tactics displayed in the past four weeks are gangster tactics. No one who knows the facts can deny this. Unpaid bills, cars being returned to dealers and hungry children, are but a few of the results of this mob violence. . . which has put fear into the lives of these American citizens.

The following quotation from a letter to the Preston County Journal, in Kingwood, W. Va., expresses the sentiments of many of us who believe in the constitutional rights of every citizen:

> "We speak with bated breath, and horror of the dictators of foreign countries, of the atrocities committed; the subjugation of the little countries by Hitler, Mussolini and Joseph Stalin; and are spending billions of dollars and thousands of our sons in trying to preserve liberty abroad and at home, and this sacrifice will have been in vain if we permit. . .domination of our own lives at home. If this display of force and total disregard of human rights represents the policy of the UMWA, then the organization should be branded subversive and subjected to careful scrutiny of the federal government. If it is not, then the organization should clean house, stop its organizers from instructing its mob of hoodlums to stop the non-union workers regardless of law or decency."

If you think this is just a letter to be ignored, please check my story with the Oakland, Md., Republican, the Pittsburgh Press, the Preston County Journal of Kingwood and the Dominion News of Morgantown. A lot of miners who are being threatened are subscribers to your paper, so I do hope you will have the courage to print this.

Let's hope that law will see that these men are made to realize that mob rule and violence are not allowed in a democracy.

Yours truly,

About Higher Taxes

(The following letter submitted to The Cumberland News was written as an open letter to Eric Johnston, U. S. economic stabilizer.)

Sir:

I read in The Cumberland News that you propose higher taxes to drain off the surplus buying power. I wonder how much surplus buying power you would have if like me you were working four days a weeks, and keeping a family on the earnings, paying rent, fuel, light and all the other necessary expenses connected to a home. How much surplus buying power do I have?

If Truman hadn't wasted billions, throwing the money to the four corners of the earth, perhaps we would not need an increase in taxes. Truman said we must all sacrifice. I wonder how much is he and his cronies sacrificing?

Where I work there is a shortage of rubber to work with. There seems that there is a shortage of everything, but the biggest shortage of all is the shortage of brains in Washington. Too many round pegs in square holes.

Delta Theta Chi Has Talk On Styles

To be better dressed, the importance of choosing a dress suitable to one's personality and colors complimentary to one's coloring rather than following a fad were stressed by Miss Ruth Colly in her talk to members of Delta Theta Chi sorority Wednesday evening. The sorority entertained with a dinner at Happy Hills Restaurant.

Miss Colly, member of the faculty of Fort Hill High School, talked on "Clothing," giving hints of what combinations to wear and how to make the best of what one has. She also discussed the Spring styles in shoes, dresses, coats, suits, pocketbooks, accessories and jewelry.

There are always high points and high lights in fashions every season, the speaker pointed out and they can neither be ignored or adopted entirely. She suggested buying clothing suitable and practical rather than extreme. The pyramidal shoulder coat is popular and practical to wear over a suit she said, and reminded her audience that if the American people will not accept extremes those styles will be thrown out. She urged being moderate in thinking and buying.

Miss Colly showed many ways to make large white collars to brighten a blue dress which is always good for spring as black is for fall. In concluding the evening she assisted members in cutting out patterns.

Thirteen members attended. Plans for April will be made at the March 14 meeting, at Central YMCA.

Home Group Hears Talk On Furniture

The historical background of the American Federal period furniture was given by Miss Ruth Clauson at the meeting of the American Home Group of the Woman's Civic Club, yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alvin B. Storey, Buckingham Road.

Miss Clauson explained that the period extended from 1790 to 1840, and the pieces are among the most cherished today, because of the beautiful lines. She said it reflects both the French and English influence and can be noted in the furniture of Hepplewhite and Sheraton, the two outstanding designers.

Speaking of the changes due to various crowned heads of Europe, Miss Clauson showed how the influence of Marie Antoinette was to get away from the types of both Louis XIV and Louis XV, and George IV of England was responsible for being the patron of the great English designers.

Miss Clauson exhibited two small tables, one of original Sheraton, made in 1790, which she brought with her from Europe; and a Hepplewhite reproduction. She went into detail about the authentic pieces and reproductions.

During the afternoon several piano selections were played by Mrs. R. C. Lord.

Mrs. Shorey presided and announced that the next meeting would be held at the home of Mrs. Alvin H. Wilson, Bedford Road, at 2 o'clock, April 26. There will be no March meeting.

Tea was served by the hostess at the conclusion of the program. Spring flowers were used throughout the house and centering the table. Approximately 50 members attended.

Demo Delegates Will Back Party Districting Plan

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 22 (AP) — Democrats of the House of Delegates pledged today that they will vote for a party plan to redistrict the state to provide a constituency for a seventh congressman.

Senate Democrats attempted to do the same thing in caucus, but two Baltimore City senators, Dippel of the Third and Preston of the Fifth, declined to go along until they gave the measure more study.

It is possible they may put in a redistricting bill of their own next week.

Maryland is entitled to seven congressmen because of its population gain in the last decade. It now has six.

Both the Republicans and Democrats are agreed that a new district should be formed, rather than elect a representative at-large in 1952.

Bills incorporating the plans of the two parties were introduced today.

As Democrats greatly outnumber Republicans in both houses, their party plan is the one likely to become law.

Under it, Baltimore City would get three districts entirely within its boundaries, leaving the other four to the counties.

The House marked Washington's birthday by giving tentative approval to a joint resolution which would ratify the 22nd Amendment to the federal Constitution.

Thirty-three states so far have ratified the amendment to limit the President to two elective terms.

The resolution may come up for a final House vote tomorrow or Monday. The Senate has yet to act on it.

The House Agricultural and Natural Resources Committee returned unfavorable reports on three bills which would give the State Game and Inland Fish Commission complete power to set fish and game seasons and bag limits.

Boys' Home Gets $1,200 In Bills Pinned Up In Bar

BISMARCK, N. D., Feb. 22 (AP)—Because patrons of a Bismarck bar pinned 1,192 greenbacks to the ceiling during the past year, Father Cassedy's "Home On The Range For Boys" soon will be $1,200 richer.

Al Klein, manager of the bar, plucked the money from the ceiling. The money, mostly $1 bills, was donated by visitors to the bar. It had been understood that the bills would be given to the "Home On The Range" when each piece of the ceiling tile had a bill fastened to it.

Two Students Jailed In Extortion Plot

PIKESVILLE, Md., Feb. 22 (AP) — Two university men were in jail tonight involved in a $2,500 extortion plot that blew apart in a carefully laid police trap.

The men, identified by Col. Carey Jarman, state police superintendent, as Edwin C. Riggin, 21-year-old University of Maryland student, and Warren Jackson Gore, 22, Johns Hopkins University engineering graduate. Both are from Baltimore.

No specific state charges have been placed against them. But they are to be arraigned tomorrow before the U. S. commissioner on a federal charge involving using the mails to send a blackmail letter.

The men were arrested last night by state police officers who accompanied the intended victim, Christopher C. Campbell of nearby Boring, Md., on the payoff ride.

Police Bullets Shatter Windshield Of Auto During Race With Stork

DETROIT, Feb. 22 & — A young salesman rushing his wife to a maternity hospital had the windshield of his automobile shattered by two police bullets today.

Donald Odom, 26, said he was "running all the red lights because I knew I was going to be a father any second."

Patrolmen Gene Gullion and Allan Cummings sa wthe speeding car, couldn't overtake it, and Cummings fired twice because he said he thought it was someone fleeing from a crime. The bullets went through the rear window and out the windshield.

Mrs. Odom was lying down on the back seat.

Odom stopped, shouted why he was speeding and the policemen escorted hi mto the hospital. They arrived five minutes ahead of the stork which brought an infant girl.

Attractive Salesgirl Halts Runaway Truck

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 22 (AP) — A 23-year-old salesgirl leaped aboard a driverless runaway truck today, stamped hard on the brake and halted its downhill course barely ten feet from busy Main St.

Afterward Miss Theresa Sullivan, an attractive brunette who works behind a hosiery counter, couldn't account for her deed.

"Why did I do it? I don't know," she said. "I just did it. And I'm still shaking."

Freedom Can't Lose–Bradley

VALLEY FORGE, Pa., Feb. 22 (AP) – Gen. Omar N. Bradley said today the United States and the other freedom-loving nations of the world have the strength—morally, politically and industrially—to "assure ultimate victory over Communism."

The five-star General, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, declared in a Washington's birthday address " there is little chance that the march toward freedom will ever falter."

Bradley came to Calley Forge—the historic field where Gen. Washington's tattered Colonial Army spent the bitter winter of 1776-77—to present the 2nd annual Freedoms Foundation awards for "outstanding contributions to freedom" in 1950.

The U. S. has "ample strength," Bradley declared, to share its production with its allies until they become "self-sufficient and independent of our aid."

The foundation awarded $100,000 to 416 individuals and organizations. Three hundred others received gold honor medals while an additional 200 received certificates of merit—all for voluntarily striving for freedom "and the American way of life" by what they wrote, did or said.

Chinese Red Official Calls For Peace Pact

BERLIN, Feb. 22 (AP)—A deputy prime minister of Communist China today called for a peace pact between his nation, the United States, Soviet Russia, France, and Great Britain.

In the same breath the Communist official, Kuo Mo-Jo, told the pro-Soviet World Peace Council the United States is the "deadly foe of the Chinese and Korean people, as well as of the world peace movement" which the council claims to represent.

Kuo did not define the exact nature of the five-power treaty he had in mind, but his proposal was linked to yesterday's suggestion by Italy's Pietro Nenni that these nations meet to work out a peaceful settlement of Far Eastern difficulties.

Demo Delegates Will Back Party Districting Plan

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 22 (AP) — Democrats of the House of Delegates pledged today that they will vote for a party plan to redistrict the state to provide a constituency for a seventh congressman.

Senate Democrats attempted to do the same thing in caucus, but two Baltimore City senators, Dippel of the Third and Preston of the Fifth, declined to go along until they gave the measure more study.

It is possible they may put in a redistricting bill of their own next week.

Maryland is entitled to seven congressmen because of its population gain in the last decade. It now has six.

Both the Republicans and Democrats are agreed that a new district should be formed, rather than elect a representative at-large in 1952.

Bills incorporating the plans of the two parties were introduced today.

As Democrats greatly outnumber Republicans in both houses, their party plan is the one likely to become law.

Under it, Baltimore City would get three districts entirely within its boundaries, leaving the other four to the counties.

The House marked Washington's birthday by giving tentative approval to a joint resolution which would ratify the 22nd Amendment to the federal Constitution.

Thirty-three states so far have ratified the amendment to limit the President to two elective terms.

The resolution may come up for a final House vote tomorrow or Monday. The Senate has yet to act on it.

The House Agricultural and Natural Resources Committee returned unfavorable reports on three bills which would give the State Game and Inland Fish Commission complete power to set fish and game seasons and bag limits.

Boys' Home Gets $1,200 In Bills Pinned Up In Bar

BISMARCK, N. D., Feb. 22 (AP)—Because patrons of a Bismarck bar pinned 1,192 greenbacks to the ceiling during the past year, Father Cassedy's "Home On The Range For Boys" soon will be $1,200 richer.

Al Klein, manager of the bar, plucked the money from the ceiling. The money, mostly $1 bills, was donated by visitors to the bar. It had been understood that the bills would be given to the "Home On The Range" when each piece of the ceiling tile had a bill fastened to it.

Two Students Jailed In Extortion Plot

PIKESVILLE, Md., Feb. 22 (AP) — Two university men were in jail tonight involved in a $2,500 extortion plot that blew apart in a carefully laid police trap.

The men, identified by Col. Carey Jarman, state police superintendent, as Edwin C. Riggin, 21-year-old University of Maryland student, and Warren Jackson Gore, 22, Johns Hopkins University engineering graduate. Both are from Baltimore.

No specific state charges have been placed against them. But they are to be arraigned tomorrow before the U. S. commissioner on a federal charge involving using the mails to send a blackmail letter.

The men were arrested last night by state police officers who accompanied the intended victim, Christopher C. Campbell of nearby Boring, Md., on the payoff ride.

Police Bullets Shatter Windshield Of Auto During Race With Stork

DETROIT, Feb. 22 & — A young salesman rushing his wife to a maternity hospital had the windshield of his automobile shattered by two police bullets today.

Donald Odom, 26, said he was "running all the red lights because I knew I was going to be a father any second."

Patrolmen Gene Gullion and Allan Cummings sa wthe speeding car, couldn't overtake it, and Cummings fired twice because he said he thought it was someone fleeing from a crime. The bullets went through the rear window and out the windshield.

Mrs. Odom was lying down on the back seat.

Odom stopped, shouted why he was speeding and the policemen escorted hi mto the hospital. They arrived five minutes ahead of the stork which brought an infant girl.

Attractive Salesgirl Halts Runaway Truck

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 22 (AP) — A 23-year-old salesgirl leaped aboard a driverless runaway truck today, stamped hard on the brake and halted its downhill course barely ten feet from busy Main St.

Afterward Miss Theresa Sullivan, an attractive brunette who works behind a hosiery counter, couldn't account for her deed.

"Why did I do it? I don't know," she said. "I just did it. And I'm still shaking."

Freedom Can't Lose–Bradley

VALLEY FORGE, Pa., Feb. 22 (AP) – Gen. Omar N. Bradley said today the United States and the other freedom-loving nations of the world have the strength—morally, politically and industrially—to "assure ultimate victory over Communism."

The five-star General, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, declared in a Washington's birthday address " there is little chance that the march toward freedom will ever falter."

Bradley came to Calley Forge—the historic field where Gen. Washington's tattered Colonial Army spent the bitter winter of 1776-77—to present the 2nd annual Freedoms Foundation awards for "outstanding contributions to freedom" in 1950.

The U. S. has "ample strength," Bradley declared, to share its production with its allies until they become "self-sufficient and independent of our aid."

The foundation awarded $100,000 to 416 individuals and organizations. Three hundred others received gold honor medals while an additional 200 received certificates of merit—all for voluntarily striving for freedom "and the American way of life" by what they wrote, did or said.

Meat Is Carted Away After Railroad Wreck

LOCKPORT, Ill., Feb. 22 (AP) — There was free meat all over the place today when 17 Santa Fe Railroad refrigerator cars were wrecked.

Witnesses said that before police arrived, residents of the vicinity had carted away hundreds of pounds of whole hams, beef quarters and canned lunch meats. Some even brought large meat hooks to assist them in the work.

WASHINGTON

THIS town may be full of unpleasant characters—but its also full of happy marriages . . . For that reason we're particularly glad to welcome the theatre's most successfully married couple—The Lunts . . . Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, co-stars for 26 years, will bow behind the footlights in S. N. Behrman's comedy of romance, "I Know My Love," which tells the story of a marriage that survived through 50 years. . . .

AUSTINE

She should be able to play "how a woman keeps her man" better than any other actress. Because her own marriage has stuck . . . Interviewed on her ideas about how to be happy though married, Miss Fontanne doesn't mince matters:

"Happiness or unhappiness in marriage depends entirely on the details of daily living. A wife likes to have her husband tell her on the way home from the party that her dress was the best looking!

"A husband likes to have his wife express admiration for the suit he's just had tailored." And she added the tip that two people ought to give each other plenty time to be alone. That was important, too. To have and respect separate interests . . . She spoke frankly about how she and Alfred worked their lives in the theatre.

"We've always been careful to separate our personal and professional lives. Offstage we're together practically all the time. Once we enter the stage door, we're like polite strangers. There's no visiting between dressing rooms. We have work to do until the curtain falls at 11 o'clock. After that we always take up our other life. Generally go straight home to a supper of cereal and milk.

She believed also that too much party-going is bad for a marriage.

"We spend our summer holidays on our farm in Wisconsin. We enjoy reading, sometimes aloud. We like to take long walks, to work in our garden, to just sit and talk. We like nothing better than having a quiet dinner together. And we never have come to that unfortunate state where you run out of conversation. It sometimes happens to people who have been married a quarter of a century."

They don't see the same people over and over, either, so they're not hedged in by one little group. "Many of our friends are outside the theatre, as well in it," says Miss Fontanne.

"And beyond all this," she says, "a happy marriage is one of confidence and affection."

Rep. Albert Morano noting that the two pretty parakeets in his office make more noise in winter than they do in summer! . . .

Morano, formerly Clare Luce's secretary when she was in Congress, kept up one tradition his beautiful boss had started . . . When he came to Congress this January, he installed a pair of love birds just as lovely Clare had done back in 1943 . . . The new birds are nameless, so if you can think of a good name for a pair of chattering but loving parakeets, write or get in touch with Rep. Morano's office . . . Whoever thinks up the best names will get a surprise prize!

Speaking of prizes and contests, I initiated a contest in my column to find for Mr. Ralph S. Damon, president of TWA, a name for his new airline passenger club . . . The contest drew many suggestions . . . One reader, Mr. T. F. Marble of Olive Street Road, Chesterfield, Missouri, suggested "TWA — The Wherever Ambassadors" . . . The suggestion appeared in my column the week of June 7, 1949.

The idea that airline passengers are ambassadors of their own communities wherever they travel appealed to the name-judging group . . . For brevity's sake they shortened Mr. Marble's suggestion to "Ambassadors Club" . . . Apparently the airlines are slow about deciding these things.

Twenty months later I put in a long-distance call to Mr. Marble to tell him he's won a $100 U. S. Saving Bond and the No. One membership in the Ambassador's Club. He took the whole thing very calmly . . . Could hardly remember entering the contest . . . A machine operator for the Sterling Aluminum Company in St. Louis, 45-year-old Mr. Marble said he entered a lot of contests . . . Said he wasn't at all surprised he'd won one . . . Seems entering contests was sort of a hobby with this Marble man . . . So maybe he'll come across with a name for the love birds. . .

At the dinner former Sen. "Curly" Brooks and popular Mary gave for some of his ex-Republican colleagues in the Senate, belly laughs circled the table as well as world affairs . . . One GOP senator back from making Lincoln Day speeches in his home town said a craze had just hit his community. Now everybody could be divided into three classes.

2. Those who are being psychoanalyzed.
3. Those who are saving up to be.

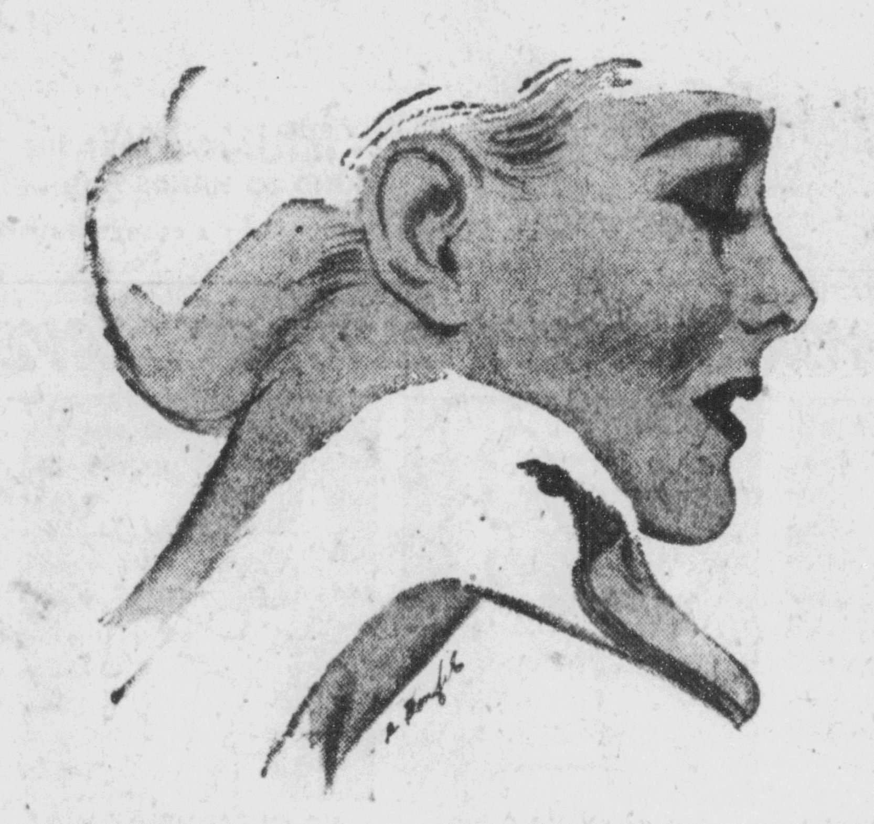
SECRETS OF CHARM

By John R. Powers



With cosmetics you can make a too-long and too-thin neck look perfectly proportioned. Here are directions.

IS anyone more admirable than the woman who recognizes her imperfections and seeks knowledge to turn them into assets? Because of such honesty and serious application, far more women appear perfect than ever were born so.

This is why I am happy, whenever I can, to answer reader requests such as this one which laments, "There are no two ways about it—my neck is too long and it's scrawny besides. Is there anything I can do about it?"

Transform with Cosmetics

Make-up can do wonders to disguise a neck that looks too thin and long. Simply use a foundation on your neck that is two shades lighter but with the same undertones as the one you use on your face.

The artifice will never be apparent to the critical eye nor on the dark collar, if you practice until your application is expert. All that will be noticed is a lovely head poised on a swan-like neck.

Apply a very sparing layer of the lighter foundation from your collar bones outward and upward to blend along the underside of the jaw bones and into the regular foundation already applied to your face. Be sure to get it well up behind the ears.

In the back, start at the top vertebra and work outward and upward to the hairline. Be very careful not to smear the hair with color. When you have the foundation evenly distributed all around, systematically smooth the entire area with the flat of your hands to make certain there is no line of demarcation anywhere. A rear-view mirror is a handy gadget at a moment like this.

Now, powder your entire neck very lightly and brush off the residue. Use the same powder you apply to your face. Because your face powder should be a close match to the skin tones of your face, it will naturally be some darker than the foundation you use on your neck—just what you need to blend the two foundations together.

When you wear a decolletage, include your shoulders in your powdering. Usually they are a shade lighter than your face except at tan time, and your face powder will bring the whole exposed area into a one-tone relationship.

Members of Roberts' office staff will include Harold Butler, and John E. Morgan, both of Fairmont; James L. Thompson, Morgantown, Betty Martin Elsey, Kingwood, and Bittie Hoffman, Cadell.

Miss Cumberland

"It is wonderful here at school and I never dreamed there was so much to learn after graduating from high school," she said. "I new feel that when I finish this course I'll be able to take my place in the world and follow any career I choose."

Scholarship Worth $400

She laughingly admitted she "can't even buy a pencil here—they won't let me. This scholarship is worth approximately $400 and covers everything in my tuition."

Remembering the many guest appearances she made on television, radio and at clubs and organizations Barbara remarked how the poise she learned while training for the contest helped her "meet the public, make many friends and travel anywhere without fear."

"I've been on television, met girls from all over the state, traveled to Baltimore, Annapolis and New York and met the President of the United States at Friendship International Airport in New York. My picture was taken with Governor Lane who presented me with a bouquet of flowers at the Elks convention here in Cumberland and I've enjoyed every association I have had since winning the title. It's been fun and glamorous and I liked it," Barbara noted.

Advising all girls who would like to enter future contests to work hard and early on their program, especially talent, Barbara said she believed it worth while for every girl to enter if just to earn a scholarship and learn poise and personality and meet people. All contestants should remember the judges try to choose an all-around girl who is attractive, with poise, personality and talent, she said.

To Study Modeling

Admitting she has gained some modeling experience and already has offers of several jobs, Barbara said she plans to take a course at the John Powers Modeling School in New York when she finishes her present schooling but beyond that her future is undecided.

Praising the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce for their work during the contest Barbara said she plans to help in any future pageant the organization might sponsor.

She noted the Maryland Jaycees are sponsoring this year's Miss Maryland review and said she believes it will be an excellent affair.

Improperly Secured Switch Caused WM Train Wreck

The derailment of a coach on Western Maryland Railway Train No. 2 on February 14 near River Avenue in the South End was caused by an improperly secured switch, according to Joseph M. Miller, superintendent of the Elkins Division of the line.

Miller said an exhaustive investigation has been conducted in an effort to learn the cause for the mishap and the reason for the improperly secured switch has not been determined.

Damage in the derailment is estimated at $10,000 by Miller, who said approximately $9,000 of this total was due for batteries beneath the car. These batteries are used in working the air conditioning unit on the coach.

Ten persons were injured when the coach, attached to the end of the two-car unit hauled by a steam locomotive, ran upright for some distance after being derailed only to topple down a 20-foot embankment.

The train, traveling eastward to Baltimore had left Cumberland a short time before. It crossed a bridge over the Potomac River and then a short distance further on passed over the switch. The locomotive did not leave the tracks, but a mail car was derailed although still coupled to the engine.

The injured were treated in Memorial Hospital, where they were taken by four ambulances. The derailment brought hundreds of spectators to the scene.

Power Plant Advance Crew Due To Arrive

Work On Albright Station To Begin

KINGWOOD, W. Va.—With the start of construction on the new Albright power station only a few weeks off, temporary offices will be opened next Monday by the builders, Monongahela Power Company and the Potomac Edison Company.

The offices will be located in the Albright National Bank building in Kingwood.

A skeleton force will be assigned to the office, with more to be added once ground is broken for the $25 million project.

First arrivals will include R. S. Harp, general construction superintendent, and W. P. Robert, office manager and assistant purchasing agent, Harp comes to the Monongahela-Potomac Edison organization from a recent construction assignment in Baltimore.

Roberts, a veteran of Monongahela, transfers to Albright from Rivesville where he had similar duties in connection with the construction of a new generating unit at Monongahela's power station there. Harp will establish his residence near Kingwood.

Members of Roberts' office staff will include Harold Butler, and John E. Morgan, both of Fairmont; James L. Thompson, Morgantown, Betty Martin Elsey, Kingwood, and Bittie Hoffman, Cadell.

Permanent offices will be set up at the plant site when weather conditions permit construction there.

Date for actual start of work has not yet been set. The plant is scheduled for completion by the end of 1952, with the first of two 75,000-kilowatt units going into service about August, 1952.

"It is wonderful here at school and I never dreamed there was so much to learn after graduating from high school," she said. "I new feel that when I finish this course I'll be able to take my place in the world and follow any career I choose."

Scholarship Worth $400

She laughingly admitted she "can't even buy a pencil here—they won't let me. This scholarship is worth approximately $400 and covers everything in my tuition."

Remembering the many guest appearances she made on television, radio and at clubs and organizations Barbara remarked how the poise she learned while training for the contest helped her "meet the public, make many friends and travel anywhere without fear."

"I've been on television, met girls from all over the state, traveled to Baltimore, Annapolis and New York and met the President of the United States at Friendship International Airport in New York. My picture was taken with Governor Lane who presented me with a bouquet of flowers at the Elks convention here in Cumberland and I've enjoyed every association I have had since winning the title. It's been fun and glamorous and I liked it," Barbara noted.

Advising all girls who would like to enter future contests to work hard and early on their program, especially talent, Barbara said she believed it worth while for every girl to enter if just to earn a scholarship and learn poise and personality and meet people. All contestants should remember the judges try to choose an all-around girl who is attractive, with poise, personality and talent, she said.

To Study Modeling

Admitting she has gained some modeling experience and already has offers of several jobs, Barbara said she plans to take a course at the John Powers Modeling School in New York when she finishes her present schooling but beyond that her future is undecided.

Praising the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce for their work during the contest Barbara said she plans to help in any future pageant the organization might sponsor.

She noted the Maryland Jaycees are sponsoring this year's Miss Maryland review and said she believes it will be an excellent affair.

Marean Refuses Engineering Job

William L. Marean, special assistant city engineer, has turned down the position of building engineer offered him by order of the Mayor and Council on February 12.

Marean reported yesterday that he informed the Mayor and Council by letter yesterday morning of his refusal to accept the post.

On February 12, the Mayor and Council unanimously amended the City Building Code Ordinance to empower the city fathers to appoint either the city engineer or the special assistant city engineer as building engineer.

City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer has been acting as building engineer since the ordinance was amended on July 6, 1948, combining the duties of the two positions.

At the meeting two weeks ago, Marean, in a council order, was made building engineer at a salary of $341 monthly. In another order, Rizer was given just the duties of city engineer at a monthly salary of $363.

Several applications for building permits have been hanging fire pending Marean's acceptance of the position.

Improperly Secured Switch Caused WM Train Wreck

The derailment of a coach on Western Maryland Railway Train No. 2 on February 14 near River Avenue in the South End was caused by an improperly secured switch, according to Joseph M. Miller, superintendent of the Elkins Division of the line.

Miller said an exhaustive investigation has been conducted in an effort to learn the cause for the mishap and the reason for the improperly secured switch has not been determined.

Damage in the derailment is estimated at $10,000 by Miller, who said approximately $9,000 of this total was due for batteries beneath the car. These batteries are used in working the air conditioning unit on the coach.

Ten persons were injured when the coach, attached to the end of the two-car unit hauled by a steam locomotive, ran upright for some distance after being derailed only to topple down a 20-foot embankment.

New Role For Hamburger

BARBECUED MEAT BALLS . . . Thrifty and satisfying

Here's a new recipe for thrifty beef and pork. These meat balls come with a savory barbecue sauce that rings a change on the old hamburger flavor. Accompany them with plenty of mashed potatoes, a big salad, and bread and butter, and your family will have a hearty delicious meal that won't be too hard on your budget.

If your salad is to be a tossed green one add some carrot curls for taste and color. If you use a razor-like kitchen slicing gadget you'll be able to shave the carrot strips very thin; then soak the strips in a little ice water and they'll curl a bit. Drain the carrot curls well before adding them to the salad. Use a French dressing with which to toss the salad. A particularly good French dressing I tasted at a friend's house recently was made the standard way but had some dried dill seeds soaked in it for an hour or so to add a delectable flavor. Strain out the seeds before using the dressing on the salad.

BARBECUED MEAT BALLS

Ingredients: ½ pound chopped beef, ½ pound chopped pork, 2 tablespoons finely diced onion, ¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ⅛ teaspoon thyme, 1 egg, ¼ cup milk, 2 tablespoons fat, 1 teaspoon kitchen bouquet, 1 cup water, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 tablespoon prepared mustard, 2 tablespoons tomato paste, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, ½ teaspoon chili powder, 1 tablespoon savory brown meat sauce, 1 small clove garlic (minced)

Method: Place beef and pork in mixing bowl. Add onion, crumbs, salt, pepper, thyme, egg, and milk. Mix together thoroughly. Shape into 12 rounds. Arrange in shallow greased baking dish. Blend together fat and kitchen bouquet. Brush mixture over the tops of the meat balls. Bake in moderate (350° F.) oven until meat is lightly browned. Meanwhile, mix water, vinegar, mustard, tomato paste, brown sugar, chili powder, savory brown meat sauce, and garlic. Bring to boil and pour over meat. Continue baking until meat balls are thoroughly done and sauce has cooked down, about 30 minutes longer. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Braised Lamb Steaks

2 lamb shanks
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon fat
¾ cup water
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon crumbled rosemary
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon onion salt
4 whole carrots
4 medium cooked potatoes
1 cup cooked peas

Dredge shanks with flour. Brown in fat in large heavy frying pan. Add water, salt, pepper, rosemary, garlic and onion salt. Cover and simmer until meat is tender—about 1½ hours. Add carrots and simmer ½ hour longer. Remove shanks and slice meat from bones. Place in center of serving platter. Arrange carrots and potatoes around edge. Make gravy from stock in pan — adding more water and thickening with flour if necessary. Add peas. Pour over meat. Serves 3-4.

America produced enough clay tile during 1948 to tile more than 1,000,000 average-size bathrooms.

Korean Dish Adaptation For Leftovers

Perhaps you are one of those homemakers who has always marveled at the manner in which the Oriental peoples put the tiniest morsel of meat to such taste tempting use. If you are, you will want to serve San Francisco Spaghetti at the first opportunity. It uses that little remnant of roast pork in a most delightful manner.

The recipe for San Francisco Spaghetti is adapted from a Korean dish. A bit of shredded cooked pork along with a small amount of ground beef and vegetables is simmered to perfection in a soy sauce. At the last minute canned bean sprouts and shreds of fresh pear are added to the mixture for just the right amount of pleasing crispness. Characteristically, the meat combination is served over a food from the grain group. This time spaghetti is the carrier for the meat and vegetables.

Three corner cutters are included in San Francisco Spaghetti to help you put a little "give" in your food dollar—a wise use of leftover meat, inexpensive spaghetti, and thrifty fortified margarine.

San Francisco Spaghetti

3 tablespoons fortified margarine; ¼ cup mushroom pieces; ¼ pound ground beef; ½ cup shredded cooked pork; ½ cup chopped onion; 1 garlic clove, minced; ½ cup shredded celery; Dash Worcestershire sauce; 2 tablespoons soy sauce 1 teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; 1 tablespoon sugar; 1 cup spaghetti, 3-inch pieces; 1 cup canned bean sprouts; 1 firm pear, shredded.

Melt margarine in saucepan over low heat. Add mushrooms and brown slightly. Add ground beef, shredded pork, onion, garlic, celery, Worcestershire sauce, soy sauce, salt, pepper and sugar. Cook until beef is well done, stirring occasionally. Cook spaghetti in raipdly boiling salted water until just tender. Drain. Place spaghetti in large platter. Add bean sprouts and shredded pear to hot meat mixture. Arrange meat mixture over spaghetti.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

New Role For Hamburger

BARBECUED MEAT BALLS . . . Thrifty and satisfying

Here's a new recipe for thrifty beef and pork. These meat balls come with a savory barbecue sauce that rings a change on the old hamburger flavor. Accompany them with plenty of mashed potatoes, a big salad, and bread and butter, and your family will have a hearty delicious meal that won't be too hard on your budget.

If your salad is to be a tossed green one add some carrot curls for taste and color. If you use a razor-like kitchen slicing gadget you'll be able to shave the carrot strips very thin; then soak the strips in a little ice water and they'll curl a bit. Drain the carrot curls well before adding them to the salad. Use a French dressing with which to toss the salad. A particularly good French dressing I tasted at a friend's house recently was made the standard way but had some dried dill seeds soaked in it for an hour or so to add a delectable flavor. Strain out the seeds before using the dressing on the salad.

BARBECUED MEAT BALLS

Ingredients: ½ pound chopped beef, ½ pound chopped pork, 2 tablespoons finely diced onion, ¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ⅛ teaspoon thyme, 1 egg, ¼ cup milk, 2 tablespoons fat, 1 teaspoon kitchen bouquet, 1 cup water, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 tablespoon prepared mustard, 2 tablespoons tomato paste, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, ½ teaspoon chili powder, 1 tablespoon savory brown meat sauce, 1 small clove garlic (minced)

Method: Place beef and pork in mixing bowl. Add onion, crumbs, salt, pepper, thyme, egg, and milk. Mix together thoroughly. Shape into 12 rounds. Arrange in shallow greased baking dish. Blend together fat and kitchen bouquet. Brush mixture over the tops of the meat balls. Bake in moderate (350° F.) oven until meat is lightly browned. Meanwhile, mix water, vinegar, mustard, tomato paste, brown sugar, chili powder, savory brown meat sauce, and garlic. Bring to boil and pour over meat. Continue baking until meat balls are thoroughly done and sauce has cooked down, about 30 minutes longer. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Braised Lamb Steaks

2 lamb shanks
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon fat
¾ cup water
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon crumbled rosemary
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon onion salt
4 whole carrots
4 medium cooked potatoes
1 cup cooked peas

Dredge shanks with flour. Brown in fat in large heavy frying pan. Add water, salt, pepper, rosemary, garlic and onion salt. Cover and simmer until meat is tender—about 1½ hours. Add carrots and simmer ½ hour longer. Remove shanks and slice meat from bones. Place in center of serving platter. Arrange carrots and potatoes around edge. Make gravy from stock in pan — adding more water and thickening with flour if necessary. Add peas. Pour over meat. Serves 3-4.

America produced enough clay tile during 1948 to tile more than 1,000,000 average-size bathrooms.

Korean Dish Adaptation For Leftovers

Perhaps you are one of those homemakers who has always marveled at the manner in which the Oriental peoples put the tiniest morsel of meat to such taste tempting use. If you are, you will want to serve San Francisco Spaghetti at the first opportunity. It uses that little remnant of roast pork in a most delightful manner.

The recipe for San Francisco Spaghetti is adapted from a Korean dish. A bit of shredded cooked pork along with a small amount of ground beef and vegetables is simmered to perfection in a soy sauce. At the last minute canned bean sprouts and shreds of fresh pear are added to the mixture for just the right amount of pleasing crispness. Characteristically, the meat combination is served over a food from the grain group. This time spaghetti is the carrier for the meat and vegetables.

Three corner cutters are included in San Francisco Spaghetti to help you put a little "give" in your food dollar—a wise use of leftover meat, inexpensive spaghetti, and thrifty fortified margarine.

San Francisco Spaghetti

3 tablespoons fortified margarine; ¼ cup mushroom pieces; ¼ pound ground beef; ½ cup shredded cooked pork; ½ cup chopped onion; 1 garlic clove, minced; ½ cup shredded celery; Dash Worcestershire sauce; 2 tablespoons soy sauce 1 teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; 1 tablespoon sugar; 1 cup spaghetti, 3-inch pieces; 1 cup canned bean sprouts; 1 firm pear, shredded.

Melt margarine in saucepan over low heat. Add mushrooms and brown slightly. Add ground beef, shredded pork, onion, garlic, celery, Worcestershire sauce, soy sauce, salt, pepper and sugar. Cook until beef is well done, stirring occasionally. Cook spaghetti in raipdly boiling salted water until just tender. Drain. Place spaghetti in large platter. Add bean sprouts and shredded pear to hot meat mixture. Arrange meat mixture over spaghetti.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

New Main Dish Interest

Try this tasty combination of shrimp with a creole sauce baked in a casserole and topped with puffy mashed potatoes—all you need to complete the meal is a beverage, bread and butter, a tossed salad, and a simple dessert.

Lenten Dish Cheese Soufflé

A cheese souffle is a menu must during Lent, as it is on other important occasions through the year, and you can be sure of success with your souffle if you follow a time-tested successful recipe.

The recipe we're giving will turn out a perfect "top-hatty", velvety textured souffle if you follow it—a souffle that will set off a chorus of appreciative "ohs" and "ahs" when you bring it in, and an encore of admiration when it is tasted.

There are three keys to its success. First, pasteurized process sharp flavored cheese for perfect melting and blending, and for tantalizing flavor. Second, the spoon trick that makes the top hat effect—running the tip of a teaspoon around the mixture in its baking dish, one inch in from the edge. And third, the long, slow baking time.

Cheese Souffle (4-egg)

2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 2 tablespons flour, ¾ cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of cayenne, ½ pound sharp pasteurized process cheese, sliced, 4 eggs.

Make a sauce with the butter or margarine, flour, milk and seasonings. When thickened and smooth add the sliced cheese, and stir until the cheese is melted. Remove from the heat and add the beaten yolks of the eggs; mix well. Slightly cool the mixture, then pour it slowly onto the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs, cutting and folding the mixture thoroughly together.

Pour into an ungreased 1½ quart casserole. Run the tip of a teaspoon around in the mixture one inch in from the edge of the casserole, making a slight "track" or depression. This forms a "top hat" on the souffle as it bakes and puffs up. Bake one hour in a slow oven, 275 degrees. Serve at once.

New potatoes contain less starch than old potatoes. New potatoes contain more moisture, and hence supply less starch.

Plentiful Pork For Buffet Supper

A breath of spring in midwinter menus is sweet-sour pork served in fluffy white rice nests. The tender chunks of flavor-rich pork combined with golden pieces of pineapple make a taste treat you can't afford to miss. The pieces of green pepper and the subtle seasoning of soy sauce add intriguing flavor, too.

Sweet-sour pork is a good way to make use of the plentiful pork on the market. If you're one of the smart homemakers who has a special love for buffet supper entertaining

Sweet-Sour Pork

1 pound lean pork shoulder
Fat, salt, pepper
1 cup bouillon
2 medium sized green peppers
3 tablespoons chopped onion
4 slices canned pineapple
3 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup vinegar
2 teaspoons soy sauce
½ cup pineapple sirup (from canned pineapple)
4 cups boiled rice

Heat a little fat in a skillet and in it thoroughly brown the pork which has been cut in ½ inch cubes. Sprinkle well with salt and pepper. Add bouillon and cook, covered, over low heat for 20 minutes. Cut green peppers into 1 inch pieces and add; also add onions and pineapple slices cut into eighths. Cook another 10 minutes. Blend cornstarch with sugar, vinegar, soy sauce and pineapple sirup and add to mixture. Stir constantly until thickened. Cook 5 minutes longer, and add extra salt and pepper, if necessary. Serve in individual rice rings, or nests of boiled rice. For a buffet supper party, use one large bed of rice. Serves 4.

Keep the present good supply of pork and juicy pork shoulder staks, tender roasts such as pork loin and the less expensive Boston Butt, should be included often.

Speaking of pork chops, have you ever tried them ranch style? Westerners like to brown thick chops, place them in a shallow baking dish, cover with sliced onions, pour lots of chili sauce (mixed with a little water) over the top and bake, covered, in a 325 degree F. over for about 1½ hours.

Meat pies always inspire hearty eating and a pork pie is another attractive way to serve nutritious pork (with all its wonderful B vitamins). To prepare this cozy, old fashioned favorite, simmer cubed lean pork until tender and reserve the broth. Then cook diced carrots, potatoes, celery and onions. Make a gravy using the meat stock. Mix this with the meat and vegetables, adding some drained canned peas or string beans. Season with a little minced parsley, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Pour into a greased casserole and top with biscuit dough to which a little poultry seasoning and curry powder has been added, also a few drops of tabasco sauce. Make a few slits for the escape of steam and bake in hot oven, 450 degree F., for 20 minutes.

A good way to use up leftover pork is in a casserole with sweet potatoes and an orange honey glaze.

4 cups boiled rice

Heat a little fat in a skillet and in it thoroughly brown the pork which has been cut in ½ inch cubes. Sprinkle well with salt and pepper. Add bouillon and cook, covered, over low heat for 20 minutes. Cut green peppers into 1 inch pieces and add; also add onions and pineapple slices cut into eighths. Cook another 10 minutes. Blend cornstarch with sugar, vinegar, soy sauce and pineapple sirup and add to mixture. Stir constantly until thickened. Cook 5 minutes longer, and add extra salt and pepper, if necessary. Serve in individual rice rings, or nests of boiled rice. For a buffet supper party, use one large bed of rice. Serves 4.

Keep the present good supply of pork and juicy pork shoulder staks, tender roasts such as pork loin and the less expensive Boston Butt, should be included often.

Speaking of pork chops, have you ever tried them ranch style? Westerners like to brown thick chops, place them in a shallow baking dish, cover with sliced onions, pour lots of chili sauce (mixed with a little water) over the top and bake, covered, in a 325 degree F. over for about 1½ hours.

Meat pies always inspire hearty eating and a pork pie is another attractive way to serve nutritious pork (with all its wonderful B vitamins). To prepare this cozy, old fashioned favorite, simmer cubed lean pork until tender and reserve the broth. Then cook diced carrots, potatoes, celery and onions. Make a gravy using the meat stock. Mix this with the meat and vegetables, adding some drained canned peas or string beans. Season with a little minced parsley, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Pour into a greased casserole and top with biscuit dough to which a little poultry seasoning and curry powder has been added, also a few drops of tabasco sauce. Make a few slits for the escape of steam and bake in hot oven, 450 degree F., for 20 minutes.

A good way to use up leftover pork is in a casserole with sweet potatoes and an orange honey glaze.

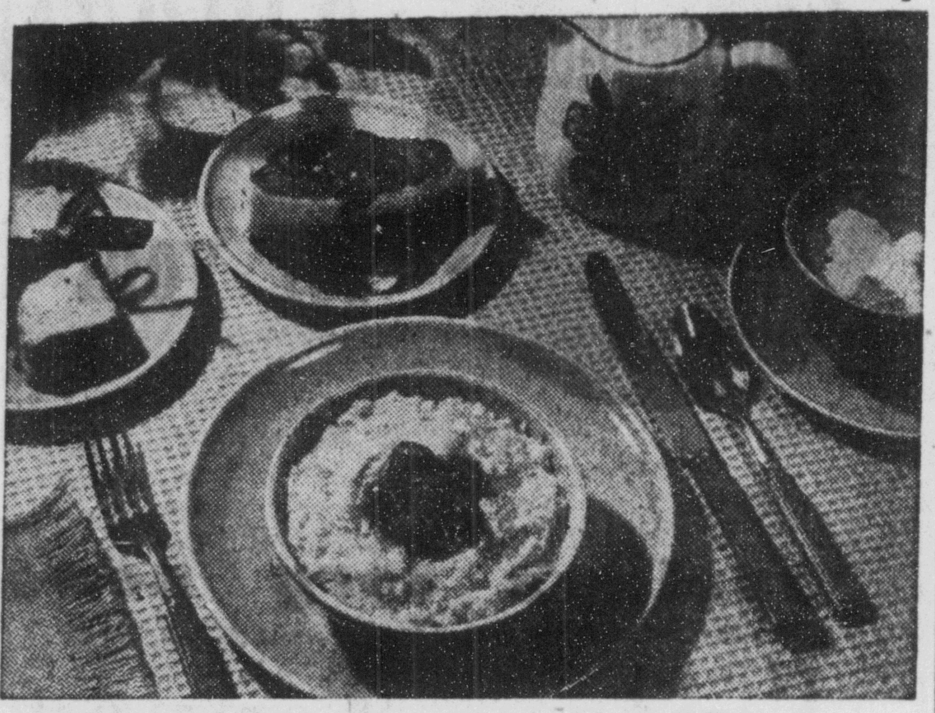
Frozen Foods OK

While it's recommended that canned foods be kept from freezing, there's no truth to the notion that freezing makes them unwholesome. Some canned foods of creamy consistency look curdled after freezing, but heating usually restores their normal appearance. However, repeated freezing and thawing injures the texture of delicate fruits, berries, and vegetables.

The controversy persists regarding the value of antihistaminic drugs in controlling the common cold. Proponents contend that these drugs are helpful only during the first 24 to 48 hours of the cold and that they must be given in sufficiently large amounts. According to reports, the antihistaminics certainly do not cure colds, but they may be helpful to check them if properly used.

Cereal Breakfast Makes A Good Party



Breakfast is a party any time you want to make it one. It's an easy party, too, and thrifty when you make it a cereal breakfast party.

Build your menu around a basic breakfast pattern of fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter. Add other items, if you like. But for a well-balanced meal include each one of these basic foods. They lend themselves to party dress and they offer wide variety. There are over a hundred different breakfast foods to use in this pattern. Your main dish—the cereal serving—is the leader for versatility. You have more than two dozen distinctly different varieties of breakfast cereals to choose from. There are rich corn breakfast cereals and mellow wheat ones; you have rice cereals and many made from oats. You can serve this main dish hot, with just a few minutes preparation, or pour crisp ready-to-eat breakfast cereals from the package into your party cereal bowls.

Because of their bland flavors, breakfast cereals lend themselves to all sorts of delicious toppings. Today's suggestion is to top brown granular wheat cereal with a red cherry sauce. To make this topping, you need 2 cups of canned red cherries, 2 tablespoons of cornstarch, and 1 tablespoon of sugar. Drain the syrup from the cherries and heat to the boiling point. Thicken with cornstarch blended with sugar. Boil gently over low heat for 10 to 12 minutes, stirring to prevent burning, until mixture becomes very thick. Cool the syrup to warm and pour over the drained cherries a half hour before serving. The cherries become plump and rich as they absorb the sauce.

The fruit course of this cereal breakfast party is a banana boat filled with tokay grapes. For bread, make melba toast bars and tie with a red ribbon. Or, slice very fresh bread in thin narrow strips and tie into loose knots. Toast in the oven until lightly browned. The party dress for your hot chocolate is a malt-flavored whipped cream topping.

Diet And Eat According To Simple Rules

You can eat three complete meals a day and still be on a diet, losing weight without your family ever being aware of what's going on, according to the "Never-Hungry" diet. The new diet is based on omission of certain foods within the framework of six simple rules:

1. Broil hamburgers and chops. Don't coat them with flour. Make gravy for the family, but don't eat any yourself.

2. When making stew trim all fat from the meat before cooking. Don't brown it. Cover it with water and cook very slowly. Serve in the broth. If the family likes thickened gravy, take out your portion and thicken the rest. Whenever a sauce is needed for variety, a portion of food for the person on a diet can be set aside and served plain.

3. Poach, boil, or steam fish. Don't coat it with batter and fry; don't bake it in a rich sauce. Serve it simply with lemon, parsley, or egg garnish.

4. Cook vegetables in a covered pan in a little water. Remove cover, let water boil almost off. Add skim milk to your portion, if you like, and bring almost to a boil.

5. Serve fruit as dessert. It is best for those trying to lose weight. The family can have ice cream, cake, cookies, sauces for variety.

6. Mix a quart of dried skim milk just for yourself. Keep in the refrigerator and use generously whenever milk is part of the meal. In addition, there are five general health suggestions for a guide in losing weight:

1. Don't skip any meals. Eat three meals every day. This will keep you from wanting to nibble between meals.

2. Get eight hours of restful sleep every night.

3. Drink plenty of water and juices.

4. Get plenty of exercise. Walk at least a half-hour every day.

5. Do your marketing with your diet in mind.

Cultivate a taste for the non-fattening foods. However, if you are suffering from an illness, do not attempt any diet without first consulting your doctor.

The giblets, neck, wing tips and back of a broiler make good stock. Cook them in a cup or two of water with bay leaf, peppercorns, salt, a whole clove, a slice of onion and some celery leaves.

Iron Curtain Queries For Radio's Answer Man Help Tell Of U. S. Aims

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK—(AP)—The "answer man" of American radio has become international in scope and has discovered that asking questions is even popular behind the iron curtain.

Bruce Chapman, boss of a long-time favorite program currently broadcast in 30 U. S. cities, reports that 40 per cent of the questions received by an "answer man" program in Germany come from the Russian zone. A heavy volume of mail also turns up with return addresses in Poland and Czechoslovakia.

The European operation was started some months ago in cooperation with the Economic Cooperation Administration as an aid in telling the story of America and its aims. Forty transmitters, including Armed Forces Radio Service stations, broadcast the question and answer sessions across Europe in English, French, German, Dutch, Austrian, Polish, Turkish and Greek.

Each of the programs is specialized, as in the U. S., to answer queries received from a particular region in order to intensify its appeal.

The questions, many of which reflect Europe's different standards of living, concern household matters, life in general, social problems, governmental matters, world problems and much curiosity about America. Some skepticism is expressed, too, as in this question: "How do the working men in America get automobiles, if they really do?"

Bruce Chapman's New York headquarters in a midtown skyscraper is crammed to the ceiling with books, files and other sources of information. He has recourse to something like 20,000 authorities on almost any subject as well as public and private libraries.

Chapman has been on this job close to 14 years. The idea was originated by Albert Mitchell, now in retirement at Tucson, Ariz. The New York staff is made up of about 40 to 50 girls and women. They do most of the researching, letter writing and program preparation.

In the actual broadcasts, in both this country and Europe, local announcers take the parts of questiner and answer man, most of the programs being put on live to keep them as up to date as possible. European programs are in the language of the particular zone to which they are directed.

Headquarters for Europe is in Paris which, because of the many languages used in the daily processing of the questions, takes on the atmosphere of a United Nations. For instance, a question in Turkish will be translated into English, or even German, and then back to Turkish. Paris has about the same size staff as New York. Other offices are in London, Berlin, Vienna, the Hague, Ankara, and Athens.

Mail that comes from the eastern zone of German and other nearby Soviet-controlled territory gives evidence, Chapman said, of having been carried across the borders before mailing. In sending replies, the answers are put on plain paper and otherwise safeguarded in the hope they will be passed on to the right persons through the allowable mailing facilities.

Even obviously planted questions, Chapman said, always get an answer, often over the air. But the replies are phrased to give a true picture and avoid propaganda traps.

Last-Minute Rush To Build Or Buy Homes Sends Prices Over Boom Record Peaks

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK—(AP)—A last minute rush to build or buy homes is speeding construction to boom peaks in many parts of the country.

Bankers and observers see families, who have waited in vain for building costs to come down, now rushing in convinced that higher prices are here to stay.

Fears of building materials shortages and further credit curbs are inspiring a demand for houses that is pushing up prices of all dwellings, new and old, in most communities.

A national survey by the Associated Press shows home building activity now at record levels in 29 major areas where credit restrictions, which require larger cash payments and shorter mortgage terms have had no noticeable effect.

In several states, home building for the first six months of this year is expected to exceed the all-time highs set a year ago.

On the other hand, residential construction is slowing down in 20 important districts, including all of New York State, where it is off 50 per cent from a year ago.

Yet the need for homes built up by the stoppage of construction during World War II and the increase in marriages in the last decade remains far from satisfied.

This is reflected in prices being paid for older houses. A man in Hartford, Conn., paid $3,500 for a house in 1930. When he offered it for sale recently the lowest of six bids was $9,000.

A Long Island house purchased from the builder in 1938 for $13,800 now brings $40,000. Almost every community offers similar examples.

Backlogs of mortgage commitments, arranged before credit curbs became effective, are enabling many builders to produce even more homes than they were building in last year's boom.

But the day of reckoning is due. While 21 areas find the supply of such commitments already exhausted and blame credit restrictions for their slowdown in building, the turning point in most of the 29 booming areas is expected around April. A few observers put the date as far away as June or July, but they are in the minority.

In spite of the recent relaxation of government restrictions on copper tubing in homes, the threat of building material shortages is stressed by many builders and bankers as far greater than that of credit curbs.

Builders in Maine find shortages already slowing up "a market that could be as brisk as 1950." A Portland, Maine, builder says "we can't complete some houses we started last summer."

Other areas expect shortages to develop at any time. The result is summed up by North Carolina officials, who report builders throughout the state "in an evident rush to get housing jobs under way."

In the meantime almost fantastic records are being set.

Activity around St. Louis, Mo., is reported up 166 per cent from the January-February level of last year. Ohio finds it up 130 per cent; Omaha 129 per cent; Baltimore 127 per cent; Seattle and suburbs up 126 per cent.

Home building in 63 California communities is averaging 82 per cent over a year ago. In 60 Connecticut cities and towns home building has doubled since this time last year.

But conditions are generally conceded to be fluid. While Sarasota, Fla., shows a 53 per cent gain, and a ten-county area in Florida average nine per cent up, Orlando reports a decided February slackening from its record January building.

A clue to the real force behind this rush is offered in Iowa where 15 cities show an increase of 115 per cent over January 1950. An Iowa observer reports "this current home building is largely by individuals building for themselves, rather than by firms building houses for sale. Builders, who might under normal conditions be planning developments of 50 or 100 homes, are moving cautiously, putting up a few at a time."

Bankers call the trend a grass roots rebellion.

The Valley National Bank of Phoenix, largest in Arizona, reports a consistent increase in applications for mortgage loans with about 95 per cent being made to individuals constructing homes for their own occupancy.

Bone finds in New Zealand indicate that the moa, a giant bird now extinct, once stood at 14 feet tall.

Attempt To Smuggle $40,000 Worth Of Gold Into Germany Is Disclosed

FRANKFURT, Germany—(AP)—An attempt to smuggle gold worth $40,000 at black market prices into Germany in cans marked "kosher meat" was disclosed in an American court. Officials said they suspected it might be part of a big smuggling operation with links in New York.

A man identified in court as Arthur Gershon, an American official of the International Refugee Organization, was arraigned in Bremen and ordered held under $10,000 bond after U. S. agents testified he received the gold.

U. S. District Attorney James F. Phelps, Houston, Tex., told the court Gershon was arrested in possession of 40 pounds of illegally imported gold and that he was preparing charges against him. Formal and specific charges are not made at preliminary hearings under the U. S. courts' system in Germany.

The gold, concealed in the meat cans, was intercepted as the result of an anonymous letter received by U. S. Customs officials in Frankfurt.

Col. George B. Buell, Charleston, S. C., chief of the U. S. Customs unit, recalled that an attempt recently had been made to send gold to Europe concealed in the body of an automobile. The car was seized in New York as it was being loaded on a ship.

Officials also speculated that these gold shipments might be linked with diamond smuggling operations recently uncovered with arrests in New York of persons attempting to bring concealed jewels into the United States. Their theory is that perhaps the gold is sent to Europe in exchange for diamonds.

U. S. agents testified at Gershon's arraignment that he was arrested after he had picked up several of the gold-filled cans at the U. S. Army postoffice in Bremen. The cans were in packages addressed to apparently fictitious names at Camp Grohn, a center for displaced persons near Bremen operated by the IRO.

Gershon was administrative service officer and postal officer at the camp, officials said, a job which permitted him to collect mail addressed to persons in the camp.

Thirty per cent of the population of the United States is concentrated in 93 cities.

Many Nurses Request Hadacol

HADACOL Helps Folks Suffering Deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron

Registered nurses, in increasing numbers, are showing a keen interest in HADACOL and in the results that are being secured with this great modern formula. Requests have been received from many of these nurses for professional samples of HADACOL and many of them indicated that they recommend the HADACOL formula to their patients. For example, Mrs. Kathleen C. Marquess, a registered nurse, who lives at 519 West 2nd St., Hopkinsville, Ky., says this about HADACOL:

"Your HADACOL has already improved my appetite, and I am sure I'll regain my fifteen pounds soon. Those patients to whom I passed on your professional samples are all continuing to take HADACOL and most of them are now trying it in the family size bottle. All have been helped. Some are much, much better from an emotional standpoint. I saw one yesterday sitting on the porch of the next-door neighbor, chatting and smiling. She had only been able to walk around in the house. Just imagine that—after only three bottles of HADACOL!"

Mrs. Marquess and her patients, whom HADACOL has helped, were suffering deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Last-Minute Rush To Build Or Buy Homes Sends Prices Over Boom Record Peaks

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK—(AP)—A last minute rush to build or buy homes is speeding construction to boom peaks in many parts of the country.

Bankers and observers see families, who have waited in vain for building costs to come down, now rushing in convinced that higher prices are here to stay.

Fears of building materials shortages and further credit curbs are inspiring a demand for houses that is pushing up prices of all dwellings, new and old, in most communities.

A national survey by the Associated Press shows home building activity now at record levels in 29 major areas where credit restrictions, which require larger cash payments and shorter mortgage terms have had no noticeable effect.

In several states, home building for the first six months of this year is expected to exceed the all-time highs set a year ago.

On the other hand, residential construction is slowing down in 20 important districts, including all of New York State, where it is off 50 per cent from a year ago.

Yet the need for homes built up by the stoppage of construction during World War II and the increase in marriages in the last decade remains far from satisfied.

This is reflected in prices being paid for older houses. A man in Hartford, Conn., paid $3,500 for a house in 1930. When he offered it for sale recently the lowest of six bids was $9,000.

A Long Island house purchased from the builder in 1938 for $13,800 now brings $40,000. Almost every community offers similar examples.

Backlogs of mortgage commitments, arranged before credit curbs became effective, are enabling many builders to produce even more homes than they were building in last year's boom.

But the day of reckoning is due. While 21 areas find the supply of such commitments already exhausted and blame credit restrictions for their slowdown in building, the turning point in most of the 29 booming areas is expected around April. A few observers put the date as far away as June or July, but they are in the minority.

In spite of the recent relaxation of government restrictions on copper tubing in homes, the threat of building material shortages is stressed by many builders and bankers as far greater than that of credit curbs.

Builders in Maine find shortages already slowing up "a market that could be as brisk as 1950." A Portland, Maine, builder says "we can't complete some houses we started last summer."

Other areas expect shortages to develop at any time. The result is summed up by North Carolina officials, who report builders throughout the state "in an evident rush to get housing jobs under way."

In the meantime almost fantastic records are being set.

Activity around St. Louis, Mo., is reported up 166 per cent from the January-February level of last year. Ohio finds it up 130 per cent; Omaha 129 per cent; Baltimore 127 per cent; Seattle and suburbs up 126 per cent.

Home building in 63 California communities is averaging 82 per cent over a year ago. In 60 Connecticut cities and towns home building has doubled since this time last year.

But conditions are generally conceded to be fluid. While Sarasota, Fla., shows a 53 per cent gain, and a ten-county area in Florida average nine per cent up, Orlando reports a decided February slackening from its record January building.

A clue to the real force behind this rush is offered in Iowa where 15 cities show an increase of 115 per cent over January 1950. An Iowa observer reports "this current home building is largely by individuals building for themselves, rather than by firms building houses for sale. Builders, who might under normal conditions be planning developments of 50 or 100 homes, are moving cautiously, putting up a few at a time."

Bankers call the trend a grass roots rebellion.

The Valley National Bank of Phoenix, largest in Arizona, reports a consistent increase in applications for mortgage loans with about 95 per cent being made to individuals constructing homes for their own occupancy.

Attempt To Smuggle $40,000 Worth Of Gold Into Germany Is Disclosed

FRANKFURT, Germany—(AP)—An attempt to smuggle gold worth $40,000 at black market prices into Germany in cans marked "kosher meat" was disclosed in an American court. Officials said they suspected it might be part of a big smuggling operation with links in New York.

A man identified in court as Arthur Gershon, an American official of the International Refugee Organization, was arraigned in Bremen and ordered held under $10,000 bond after U. S. agents testified he received the gold.

U. S. District Attorney James F. Phelps, Houston, Tex., told the court Gershon was arrested in possession of 40 pounds of illegally imported gold and that he was preparing charges against him. Formal and specific charges are not made at preliminary hearings under the U. S. courts' system in Germany.

The gold, concealed in the meat cans, was intercepted as the result of an anonymous letter received by U. S. Customs officials in Frankfurt.

Col. George B. Buell, Charleston, S. C., chief of the U. S. Customs unit, recalled that an attempt recently had been made to send gold to Europe concealed in the body of an automobile. The car was seized in New York as it was being loaded on a ship.

Officials also speculated that these gold shipments might be linked with diamond smuggling operations recently uncovered with arrests in New York of persons attempting to bring concealed jewels into the United States. Their theory is that perhaps the gold is sent to Europe in exchange for diamonds.

U. S. agents testified at Gershon's arraignment that he was arrested after he had picked up several of the gold-filled cans at the U. S. Army postoffice in Bremen. The cans were in packages addressed to apparently fictitious names at Camp Grohn, a center for displaced persons near Bremen operated by the IRO.

Gershon was administrative service officer and postal officer at the camp, officials said, a job which permitted him to collect mail addressed to persons in the camp.

Thirty per cent of the population of the United States is concentrated in 93 cities.

Many Nurses Request Hadacol

HADACOL Helps Folks Suffering Deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron

Registered nurses, in increasing numbers, are showing a keen interest in HADACOL and in the results that are being secured with this great modern formula. Requests have been received from many of these nurses for professional samples of HADACOL and many of them indicated that they recommend the HADACOL formula to their patients. For example, Mrs. Kathleen C. Marquess, a registered nurse, who lives at 519 West 2nd St., Hopkinsville, Ky., says this about HADACOL:

Mrs. Marquess

"Your HADACOL has already improved my appetite, and I am sure I'll regain my fifteen pounds soon. Those patients to whom I passed on your professional samples are all continuing to take HADACOL and most of them are now trying it in the family size bottle. All have been helped. Some are much, much better from an emotional standpoint. I saw one yesterday sitting on the porch of the next-door neighbor, chatting and smiling. She had only been able to walk around in the house. Just imagine that—after only three bottles of HADACOL!"

Mrs. Marquess and her patients, whom HADACOL has helped, were suffering deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Former Friend Of U. S. May Try Coup In Thailand

By FRED HAMPSON

HONG KONG—(AP)—Suspicion is growing here that an old friend of the United States may try to ride back into power in Thailand at the head of a Communist coup d'etat.

The name of Pridi Phanaomyong, former Siam premier, head of the U. S.-sponsored underground in Thailand in World War II, is beginning to throw fear over troubled Southeast Asia.

Such a coup against Premier Pibulsonggram's pro-western regime would turn over to the Communists one of the richest rice-producing areas of Southeast Asia.

Pridi last May was reported secretly rallying his followers inside Thailand. He had fled the country when Pibilsonggram's military coup d'etat overthrew the regime Pridi headed as premier.

Pridi is reported on highest authority to have gone to Shanghai last October. He is believed to be there still, presumably dickering with the Chinese Communists for terms on a return to power.

Anonymous leaflets recently have been distributed in Thailand's capital of Bangkok proclaiming that Pridi will return this spring.

Added to this is the fact that for the past week Chinese Communist propaganda has been going full blast against Pibulsonggram's government.

Thailand's premier is known to have made numerous attempts in Hong Kong to locate Pridi. It is understood that he wanted to offer Pridi a place in the government in order to remove him from the ranks of the opposition.

Astute observers contend that Pibulsonggram never has been as popular in Thailand as Pridi. Pibulsonggram declared war against the Allies in World War II, was premier under the Japanese, and was tried by his own people as a war criminal. He returned to power by a military coup.

Pridi, on the other hand, directed underground efforts of the U. S Office of Strategic Services during the latter stages of the Japanese war. He has been associated in the mind of the average Thailander who is strongly pro-American, with efforts of the western powers.

Statue Covered Due To Protests

NEW ORLEANS, (INS) — Until two fig leaves can be found, a larger-than-lifesize statue before the municipal court building in New Orleans will be covered with heavy canvas.

The canvas was drapped on the statue of a man, woman and child after city officials received a storm of protests from the citizens of the far-from-Puritan-minded city.

Ray Scheuring, executive secretary to the mayor, said that Sculptor Enrique Alferez has agreed to provide a figleaf, "loin cloth or something" for the man and boy in the group.

Judge Harold Moore, who must see the sculpture every day, commented:

"I have been trying to figure out what connection there is between that thing and justice.

Communism, Whether Tito Or Stalin Brand, Held Enemy Of Free World

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va.—(AP)—Three former state leaders in present bastions of Communism—Kerensky of Russia, Mikolajczyk of Poland and Gafencu of Romania—declare that Communism is the enemy of the free world whether it bears the Tito or Stalin label.

And they agreed in a joint interview at the University of Virginia that the western nations would do well to exercise caution in building up the Yugoslavian dictator lest the free world lose more than it gained.

Alexander Kerensky, president of the provisional government of Russia in 1917 until exiled by Lenin and the Bolshevik revolution, put it tersely:

"Tito is without any future," he said.

"The internal regime of Tito is the same as that in the Soviet Union. . . Of course I can see that it may be useful to use Tito now. But a new peace-loving world will be possible only after the liberation of all Communist subjugated nations."

He said he could foresee the possibility of "some kind of Tito" succeeding Stalin if the Russian dictator died. And this, he added, would mean the same oppression, the same denial of human rights.

How about reported plans for a possible attack on Tito's Yugoslavia by bordering satellite nations that have held to the Kremlin line of Communism?

"Certainly a possibility that can't be ignored," said Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, former Polish prime minister before and after the war and now an exile.

But Grigore Gafencu, foreign minister of Romania until the Nazis seized control of the nation before the outbreak of war in Europe in 1939, broke in quickly to say:

"It would be dangerous to send Romanians against the Serbs (of Yugoslavia) because Romanians and Serbs have been always friendly. The Romanians won't fight the Serbs. They've never fought one another in history. They won't fight one another now."

Gafencu added here that there was a danger to the free world in utilizing Marshal Tito's armed strength. He said that if Tito were represented as a focal point of resistance the Serbs of his nation might be lost in any future resistance to communism.

North Korean Irregulars Fight Red Overlords

ON THE CENTRAL FRONT, Korea — (INS) — The most feared anti-Communist guerrilla force in Korea today had new recruits—anti-Communist North Koreans who slipped south to Pusan and then to the central front to join famed Guerrilla Fighters Kim Sung Kie and Capt. Robert Rice's Raiders.

Rice's Raiders, who also go by the name "The White Tigers," consist of three Americans and more than 100 North Koreans who volunteered to fight their Red Overlords.

For two months now, in mountainous Central Korea, they have contributed mightily to smashing of the Red infiltrating threat. Recently they have been used to reconnoiter the roads, valleys, and hills ahead of the fighting 7th Division.

Capt. Rice, a tall, dourly handsome man from Evansville, Ind., and Kim Sung Kie, whose life has been devoted to fighting Communists since they seized his home in 1945, commands the group whose fame has spread so fast that Korean refugees have clamored to join the outfit.

The saga of the unit began when the Seventh Division was fighting toward the Yalu River last fall and Rice, an intelligence officer, collected anti-Communist North Koreans to gather information about the enemy.

Before he knew it he had a powerful anti-Communist guerrilla striking force. When the Seventh pulled out of Hungnam, the irregulars went along.

With a bare minimum of equipment—and not much of anything else—the North Korean irregulars have a reputation for fighting more furiously than any other Korean unit with the United Nations.

Each member of the unit is issued a pair of green fatigues and underwear, two blankets and a summer sleeping bag, whatever weapons Capt. Rice can scrounge and "C" rations when they cannot live off the land or buy their own food.

The United States leather industry uses about 50 million goat skins a year, most of which have to be imported.

"Tito is without any future," he said.

"The internal regime of Tito is the same as that in the Soviet Union. . . Of course I can see that it may be useful to use Tito now. But a new peace-loving world will be possible only after the liberation of all Communist subjugated nations."

He said he could foresee the possibility of "some kind of Tito" succeeding Stalin if the Russian dictator died. And this, he added, would mean the same oppression, the same denial of human rights.

How about reported plans for a possible attack on Tito's Yugoslavia by bordering satellite nations that have held to the Kremlin line of Communism?

"Certainly a possibility that can't be ignored," said Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, former Polish prime minister before and after the war and now an exile.

But Grigore Gafencu, foreign minister of Romania until the Nazis seized control of the nation before the outbreak of war in Europe in 1939, broke in quickly to say:

"It would be dangerous to send Romanians against the Serbs (of Yugoslavia) because Romanians and Serbs have been always friendly. The Romanians won't fight the Serbs. They've never fought one another in history. They won't fight one another now."

Gafencu added here that there was a danger to the free world in utilizing Marshal Tito's armed strength. He said that if Tito were represented as a focal point of resistance the Serbs of his nation might be lost in any future resistance to communism.

North Korean Irregulars Fight Red Overlords

ON THE CENTRAL FRONT, Korea — (INS) — The most feared anti-Communist guerrilla force in Korea today had new recruits—anti-Communist North Koreans who slipped south to Pusan and then to the central front to join famed Guerrilla Fighters Kim Sung Kie and Capt. Robert Rice's Raiders.

Rice's Raiders, who also go by the name "The White Tigers," consist of three Americans and more than 100 North Koreans who volunteered to fight their Red Overlords.

For two months now, in mountainous Central Korea, they have contributed mightily to smashing of the Red infiltrating threat. Recently they have been used to reconnoiter the roads, valleys, and hills ahead of the fighting 7th Division.

Capt. Rice, a tall, dourly handsome man from Evansville, Ind., and Kim Sung Kie, whose life has been devoted to fighting Communists since they seized his home in 1945, commands the group whose fame has spread so fast that Korean refugees have clamored to join the outfit.

The saga of the unit began when the Seventh Division was fighting toward the Yalu River last fall and Rice, an intelligence officer, collected anti-Communist North Koreans to gather information about the enemy.

Before he knew it he had a powerful anti-Communist guerrilla striking force. When the Seventh pulled out of Hungnam, the irregulars went along.

With a bare minimum of equipment—and not much of anything else—the North Korean irregulars have a reputation for fighting more furiously than any other Korean unit with the United Nations.

Each member of the unit is issued a pair of green fatigues and underwear, two blankets and a summer sleeping bag, whatever weapons Capt. Rice can scrounge and "C" rations when they cannot live off the land or buy their own food.

The United States leather industry uses about 50 million goat skins a year, most of which have to be imported.

The Old Second Guesser

By JOHN N. WHEELER

The Quail-Hunting Monkey

ONCE I owned a beautiful, big going setter dog, named Lennie, who was tops on both birds and Communists. He must have been sired by the FBI. If a visitor with only a slight taint showed up at the farm, bingo, he would get a nip in the quarters without warning—no growling and no barking. At first, I did not realize the significance of this until I began to put one and one and two and two together. It was really his only bad habit, if it could be called such. Some have suggested it would make a wonderful strain if it could be bred into pups, but old Lennie has now passed on.

There was a lady who stopped to see us one day, and I was down at the barn when she walked up, dressed in slacks and looking pretty glamorous. The setter rushed right up to her and grabbed her where her pants were broadest. I apologized.

"That's funny," I said. "He generally only bites Communists." She gave a faint laugh. Six months later, I learned her card had dog's teeth marks on it. He seldom made a mistake.

A piece I wrote on quail shooting de luxe brought quite a response, and one thoughful reader sent in the following letter about a bird-hunting monkey:

At a U. S. Navy Base.

Dear John:

I tried to talk Bill into taking me duck shooting and wound up on one of the darnedest quail hunts on record. There is an ex-general attached to the station here who is now a lieutenant (jg). His home was close to mine and he used to spend, and does spend, a lot of his time hunting even here. It seems like that when he came back from his last cruise he brought a young monkey.

Shortly thereafter he acquired a pointed pup which he began to train on quail as there are plenty of birds over here. The monkey used to go along, became friends with the pup and eventually got interested in quail hunting himself. His owner claimed that the monkey was as good as most dogs on quail and "he could prove it."

So this is all over the bar at the officers' club on a Saturday night. We took him up on his statement because we know him, and a quail hunt was arranged for the following morning, to consist of the three of us and the monkey. They furnished me with a gun and the necessary clothing.

After the usual amount of backing and filling that would be normal on a Sunday morning, complicated by the fact the monkey insisted on riding in the front seat, we got started. The quail country is quite rugged with 6 to 12-inch grass and many low bushes. We fanned out three abreast and the monkey (after a few runs up and down a nearby tree to get limbered up), preceded us by 50 to 60 yards, sprinting back and forth, jumping the low bushes, very much like a springer in high grass.

Pretty soon the monkey goes down on a point—three feet on the ground and tail straight out. Bill was the nearest, so he went in and flushed a covey about 10 feet ahead of the monkey. He got two birds, the monkey ran around in circles making monkey noises (denoting extreme happiness, I suppose), and after Bill and I had paid off our bets, we started on again.

About a mile further on, the monkey pointed again, about 60 to 70 yards ahead of us. As it was my side, I started in, but his owner stopped me.

"Look at the monkey closely," he said.

I did—three feet on the ground with the tail straight out as before; but the fourth foot, I guess you would call it the left front paw, is waving about in the air and clearing indicating "stop." I did. The monkey then started racing about an area 40 to 50 feet in diameter. This went on for two or three minutes and then all was quiet. He told me to "go in," so I started.

I got about 20 feet from where the monkey was last seen and up got a single. I shot and missed. As I was reloading, up got another single. I shot and hit. This went on until I had shot at ten singles and got six. I walked over to where I could see the monkey's tail sticking up out of the grass and found him lying on a gopher hole. He had chased the whole damn covey of quail down the hole, lay down on top of it, and was then letting the quail out one by one.

His owner says that if the monkey figures the hunter coming in is a good shot, he lets out doubles, but if he is only an amateur, he lets out singles. I wish I knew where I stand now. Yours, BILL.

KEEPING UP WITH HOLLYWOOD
By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 22—(INS)—Cary Grant and Anne Baxter get the leads in "The Doctor's Diary," which Darryl F. Zanuck will personally produce, and Joseph L. Mankiewicz will direct from his own script.

Cary Grant

A say "own script" because the original German play, "Dr. Praetorius" by Kurt Goetz, has been completely rewritten. The original was a stark melodrama about a doctor whose selfless love for a girl seemingly destroys and then saves him. Mankiewicz, with Cary's fine sense of comedy in mind, has changed the story into a comedy drama of considerable sophistication.

This will really be an Academy combination—Zanuck, whose "All About Eve" is up for consideration; Mankiewicz's direction, and Anne's performance in the same picture, have all been nominated.

I am not in the least surprised that Garson Kanin and Ruth Gordon put in a big pitch for George Cukor to direct "Rock-A-Bye Baby," their play, at 20th. And so, by the time this is in print, George will have been borrowed from MGM to direct Susan Hayward in the Kanin-Gordon drama.

This story tells in flashback of a girl who was adopted and what happens after she grows up.

George has really had a wonderful year. "Born Yesterday" was nominated as "best picture," and his "Adam's Rib" has nominations to its credit too.

The most sophisticated entertainment Hollywood has ever had was the smart sketches the Screen Writers' Guild gave at their awards dinner. When people can laugh at themselves I think that's a healthy sign, and, believe me, no one was spared.

Jerry Wald and Norman Krasna got a big round of applause for their quiz stint with Groucho Marx. They certainly were good sports kidding themselves. The combination of "All About Eve" and "Sunset Boulevard," a sketch written by George Oppenheimer, was screamingly funny, with Claire Trevor Nancy Davis and Eddie O'Brien. The latter was the author who kills rather than accept talking pictures.

"The Three Little Maids From The Hinterlands," a song written in Dorothy Parker's inimitable style, was sung by Arlene Dahl, Jane Russell and Marie Wilson. There were many other amusing sketches, and I certainly want to go to the Screen Writers' Guild party every year.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

George Raft is concentrating these days on Betty Binder. Last night they were a twosome at the Windsor and other places.

Bob Cobb gave Ann Sheridan a big birthday cake made in the shape of a hat. Sally (Mrs. Cobb) was hostess at a surprise birthday luncheon for Toni Lanier Mannix at the Beverly Hills Brown Derby.

Mike Connolly of Variety escorted Lillian Ross to the Screen Writers' Guild awards dinner, and she looks wonderful.

Jean Darling, once of the "Our Gang" comedies, was with Norman Krasna and Stan Rubin, good looking young RKO producer brought his fiancee, Coleen Gray. Just about everyone was there.

Abbe Lane, Xavier Cugat's much publicized girl friend, goes into "Casa McCluskey" on the stage for Lester Grady. Cugat's writing the words and music.

Mrs. Tom Brenneman was a guest at Don McNeill's breakfast club show here and Don gave her his biggest orchid.

The Duchess of Windsor, who is Russell Nype's sponsor and great admirer, was not present when he opened at the Maisonette room at the St. Regis. She was in Harkness Pavilion Hospital. Some of our Hollywood people who were there to applaud young Nype were Robert Taylor (stag), Celeste Holm and Joan Bennett with her brother-in-law and his family.

Lili St. Cyr, who opens at Ciro's tomorrow night, is apparently impressed that she is opening at Mr. Hover's night club. She is refusing to be identified as a strip tease artist and has requested Herman to book her as an "ecdyiast." According to Mr. Webster, that's an insect which sheds its outer shell.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

NEW YORK (INS)—

PARDON MY fascination with the whole question of the A-bomb and what makes it tick. Happen to agree with those who feel that if we didn't have more of them than Russia now has we'd be engaged in history's most exhausting war on half a dozen fronts.

Gordon Dean, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, recently outlined the type of man and woman the commission tries to hire (AEC has perhaps 100,000 workers) and the types against whom the vast engineering empire of the bomb and its by-products must be protected.

You can't get a job with AEC if you are "emotionally unstable, an excessive drinker, or congenital gossip," assuming you have passed the long and exacting loyalty tests and F.B.I. checkups. Dean also lists five categories of persons who are potential trouble-makers, in warning that AEC is the primary espionage target of any enemy of the U. S.

1. The mentally deranged, the fanatic, the assassin. They are kept away by "clever diagnosis . . . steel fences and guards."

with education. No party cards for

2. "Includes the ideological types who for one reason or another are detractors of our democratic institutions, but who unlike the fanatic simply want an outlet, an opportunity to speak and most of all an audience. For these people the Hyde Park treatment and the soapbox audiences usually suffice. Many of the professional joiners will be found in this category." There is always a question, Dean says, whether these "do-gooders" are dangerous.

3. "The category that we will always have with us and certainly the most difficult ones to detect. These are drawn by an ideology to find that spot from which they can most effectively commit a traitorous act. They are smart and blessed them; no foolish acts; no rules and regulations other than the rules and regulations and loyalties of their own creed.

"These are the people who can do us the most harm. These are the people whom we are least likely to detect. Being smart and composed and plausible, they will quietly seek their places in the program and bide their time."

4. The paid spy. No ideology motivates him. He is a traitor for pay.

5. The dupes and stooges of the people in categories three and four. "They will be recruited from the ranks of the minorities — racial, religious and economic minorities. We might call them 'the sheep.'"

Other A-notes:

The atomic power plant for Navy submaries is partly built and its mountain of blueprints have been completed. About 50 tons of metal shielding must guard potential A-sub crews from the radiation of the new power plant, whose great advantage will be that it will provide perhaps months or even years of propulsion without re-fueling.

Considering the appalling dangers involved with working with working with fissionable material, AEC's safety record is one of historic importance.

Only one death has been traced to work on the A-bomb and its related activities since 1946. The man was among nine scientists and lab workers accidentally exposed to radiation. Two suffered injuries and six others, though still being studied, apparently are okay.

Of the five A-workers hurt or ray-burned since 1948, four were injured during the 1948 tests at Eniwetok.

One of the great problems of A-work is protecting the workers from radioactive dust, "ashes of nuclear furnaces" and waste products. The Columbia River, for instance, must be massively protected from the effects of using part of it to cool the "piles" in the plutonium plant at Hanford, Wash. The "pile" at Brookhaven, on Long Island, is air-cooled and the air that comes off it is cleansed and freed of particles which upon exposure to the neutrons in a reactor would become radioactive and filter out over the heavily-populated countryside.

Clothes worn by workers and contaminated cannot be disposed of by burning. For burning the clothes would not get rid of the poisoned gasses within their texture.

Big topic, Mac. Wouldn't surprise me a bit if somebody wrote a book on it one of these days.

Bedford County Farm Group Has Annual Election

200 Attend Meeting Held In Bedford

BEDFORD, Pa.—Officers elected at the annual meeting of the Bedford County Agricultural Extension Association held last week in Bedford were, Sam Baker, Waterside, president; S. A. Koontz, Bedford, vice president; Mrs. Chester England, Everett, secretary; and J. A. S. Beegle, Bedford, treasurer.

Reports from leaders covered a wide range of farm and home activities. Gordon Hull, Osterburg, described experiences in controlling army worms and similar efforts by other farmers in the county. Several thousand acres of corn, hay and small grains were sprayed including 1,000 acres by airplanes. Reports were also given by Reid Hackney, Bedford, on the county's first feeder calf sale; Mrs. George Snyder, Everett, bread making; Mrs. Elwood Hollinger, Woodbury, 4-H clubs in home economics; Ernest Claycomb, Schellsburg, 4-H clubs in agriculture and Mrs. Sam Baker, Waterside, told of the food projects which had been completed.

County Agent L. R. Mollenauer showed a map of Bedford County indicating progress in some soil conservation practices. It indicated 225 farmers had been helped establish contour strips to prevent soil erosion, some 200 had planted 800,000 forest trees seedlings and 12 miles of tile drains had been laid in addition to blasting many miles of open ditches. The map also showed the distribution of 20 farm ponds established with the help of the Agriculture Extension Association. The county agent also referred to seeding of new pastures, improvement of old pastures and better grass legume hay crops as effective erosion prevention measures.

Miss Crystal Summers, home economics worker, spoke of furniture repair, household management and foods, and Paul Edinger, Pennsylvania State College, spoke of the wide participation of farm people of all ages in the program.

Principal speaker was Rev. Harry Richwine, Annville, Pa., who described the essentials of success in any organization. President Baker introduced F. Pressly Shannon, the new assistant county agent.

House Adjourns After Passing Fire Boss Bill

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—The House passed the "Fire Boss" bill 51-43 after 45 minutes of additional debate and sent it to the governor late today.

Majority Leader Davis (D-Kanawha) moved immediately for adjournment, apparently shutting off a move for reconsideration of the vote. It appeared that Delegate Kidd (D-Gilmer), a leader of the floor fight for the bill was about to offer such a motion when Davis' adjournment motion prevailed.

The reconsideration procedure is a parliamentary move designed to cement tightly actions of the legislative body.

Delegate Maroney (D-Kanawha) at the beginning of debate made an unsuccessful move for adjournment.

Bedford County Farm Group Has Annual Election

200 Attend Meeting Held In Bedford

BEDFORD, Pa.—Officers elected at the annual meeting of the Bedford County Agricultural Extension Association held last week in Bedford were, Sam Baker, Waterside, president; S. A. Koontz, Bedford, vice president; Mrs. Chester England, Everett, secretary; and J. A. S. Beegle, Bedford, treasurer.

Reports from leaders covered a wide range of farm and home activities. Gordon Hull, Osterburg, described experiences in controlling army worms and similar efforts by other farmers in the county. Several thousand acres of corn, hay and small grains were sprayed including 1,000 acres by airplanes. Reports were also given by Reid Hackney, Bedford, on the county's first feeder calf sale; Mrs. George Snyder, Everett, bread making; Mrs. Elwood Hollinger, Woodbury, 4-H clubs in home economics; Ernest Claycomb, Schellsburg, 4-H clubs in agriculture and Mrs. Sam Baker, Waterside, told of the food projects which had been completed.

County Agent L. R. Mollenauer showed a map of Bedford County indicating progress in some soil conservation practices. It indicated 225 farmers had been helped establish contour strips to prevent soil erosion, some 200 had planted 800,000 forest trees seedlings and 12 miles of tile drains had been laid in addition to blasting many miles of open ditches. The map also showed the distribution of 20 farm ponds established with the help of the Agriculture Extension Association. The county agent also referred to seeding of new pastures, improvement of old pastures and better grass legume hay crops as effective erosion prevention measures.

Miss Crystal Summers, home economics worker, spoke of furniture repair, household management and foods, and Paul Edinger, Pennsylvania State College, spoke of the wide participation of farm people of all ages in the program.

Principal speaker was Rev. Harry Richwine, Annville, Pa., who described the essentials of success in any organization. President Baker introduced F. Pressly Shannon, the new assistant county agent.

House Adjourns After Passing Fire Boss Bill

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—The House passed the "Fire Boss" bill 51-43 after 45 minutes of additional debate and sent it to the governor late today.

Majority Leader Davis (D-Kanawha) moved immediately for adjournment, apparently shutting off a move for reconsideration of the vote. It appeared that Delegate Kidd (D-Gilmer), a leader of the floor fight for the bill was about to offer such a motion when Davis' adjournment motion prevailed.

The reconsideration procedure is a parliamentary move designed to cement tightly actions of the legislative body.

Delegate Maroney (D-Kanawha) at the beginning of debate made an unsuccessful move for adjournment.

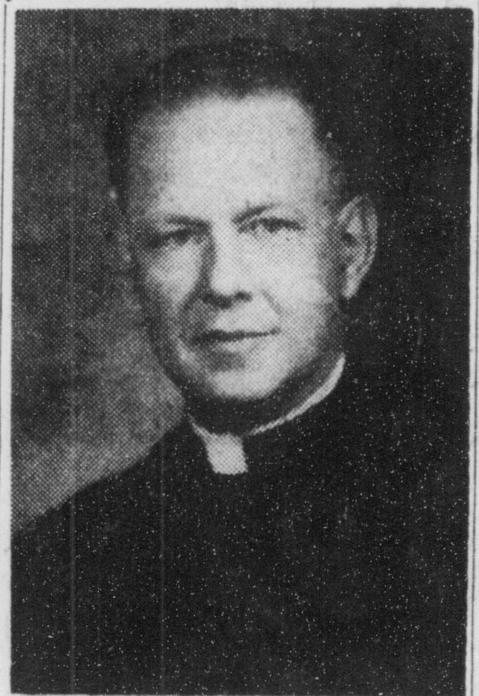
Former Frostburg Pastor To Be Memorial Day Speaker



REV. WALTER V. SIMON

FROSTBURG — Rev. Walter V. Simon, Petersburg, Va., a resident of Frostburg from 1931 to 1945 while serving as pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, has accepted an invitation of the Board of Governors of the Frostburg Memorial Park to deliver the principal address at the annual Memorial Day exercises to be held at the Park Thursday, May 30.

Offers of assistance in promoting an impressive Memorial Day service this year has been received from the town's servicemen's organizations, Boy Scout troops, various church groups and others, including the Arion Band, which has donated its services for many years, playing sacred concerts at the graves of their former leaders.

The Board of Governors are also planning to have the Maryland Singers take part in the program, under direction of Dr. Maurice Matteson.

The new management, who acquired the old Allegany Cemetery April 19, 1950, have been making many improvements to the property. Mrs. Elsie Williams, office manager, reports nearly 100 burial plots, have been placed under perpetual care and that many of the roadways have been hard surfaced during the past 10 months.

Organized as a non-profit community cooperative association, the new owners, according to Henry Rank, park superintendent, are receiving the helpful co-operation of practically every plot owner in the park.

A spokesman for the Board of Governors stated plans are now being completed to have the avenue from the new Grahamtown entrance hard surfaced its entire length through the burial park, the work to be completed by May 15.

Work has also been under way for the past six weeks by Superintendent Rank and Richard Truly, his assistant, in removing all the old trees and bushes from the McCulloh-Green Streets section of the park which was used last summer as a playground for children of the Green and Blair Streets section of town.

Area Teacher's Article Printed

FROSTBURG — "Folklore in the Schools," an article by Dr. Dorothy Howard, instructor at Frostburg State Teachers College, has been published in a recent issue of the New York Folklore Quarterly by the New York Folklore Society.

Dr. Howard cites examples of the place of folklore in areas of teaching, including dramatic play, rythmic movements, creative writing and social studies. She states that pre-school experiences such as chanting rhymes can be used by the teacher when the child enters school to stimulate further learning.

She mentions the work of Frostburg State Teachers College in preparing the teachers to use folklore as a method of bringing children's backgrounds into their school work, and cites the work of the sixth grade of the College Laboratory School as an excellent method of using folklore in social studies.

Under the supervision of Miss Angela Brady, supervising teacher, and Miss Peggy Carter, student teacher, a folklore museum was begun by contributions of old materials from the homes of the pupils, the article states.

Dr. Howard emphasized the "justifiable place" of folklore in the schools since it begins directly with the child's experience and knowledge.

The article may be read in the periodical which is now in the college library.

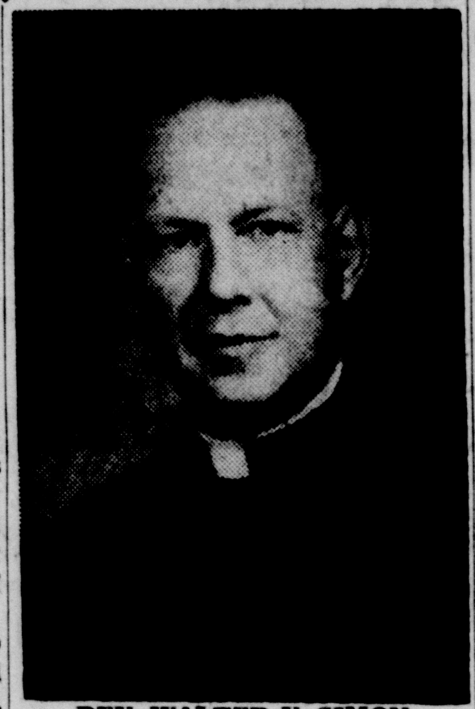
Former Frostburg Pastor To Be Memorial Day Speaker



REV. WALTER V. SIMON

FROSTBURG — Rev. Walter V. Simon, Petersburg, Va., a resident of Frostburg from 1931 to 1945 while serving as pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, has accepted an invitation of the Board of Governors of the Frostburg Memorial Park to deliver the principal address at the annual Memorial Day exercises to be held at the Park Thursday, May 30.

Offers of assistance in promoting an impressive Memorial Day service this year has been received from the town's servicemen's organizations, Boy Scout troops, various church groups and others, including the Arion Band, which has donated its services for many years, playing sacred concerts at the graves of their former leaders.

The Board of Governors are also planning to have the Maryland Singers take part in the program, under direction of Dr. Maurice Matteson.

The new management, who acquired the old Allegany Cemetery April 19, 1950, have been making many improvements to the property. Mrs. Elsie Williams, office manager, reports nearly 100 burial plots, have been placed under perpetual care and that many of the roadways have been hard surfaced during the past 10 months.

Organized as a non-profit community cooperative association, the new owners, according to Henry Rank, park superintendent, are receiving the helpful co-operation of practically every plot owner in the park.

A spokesman for the Board of Governors stated plans are now being completed to have the avenue from the new Grahamtown entrance hard surfaced its entire length through the burial park, the work to be completed by May 15.

Work has also been under way for the past six weeks by Superintendent Rank and Richard Truly, his assistant, in removing all the old trees and bushes from the McCulloh-Green Streets section of the park which was used last summer as a playground for children of the Green and Blair Streets section of town.

Area Teacher's Article Printed

FROSTBURG — "Folklore in the Schools," an article by Dr. Dorothy Howard, instructor at Frostburg State Teachers College, has been published in a recent issue of the New York Folklore Quarterly by the New York Folklore Society.

Dr. Howard cites examples of the place of folklore in areas of teaching, including dramatic play, rythmic movements, creative writing and social studies. She states that pre-school experiences such as chanting rhymes can be used by the teacher when the child enters school to stimulate further learning.

She mentions the work of Frostburg State Teachers College in preparing the teachers to use folklore as a method of bringing children's backgrounds into their school work, and cites the work of the sixth grade of the College Laboratory School as an excellent method of using folklore in social studies.

Under the supervision of Miss Angela Brady, supervising teacher, and Miss Peggy Carter, student teacher, a folklore museum was begun by contributions of old materials from the homes of the pupils, the article states.

Dr. Howard emphasized the "justifiable place" of folklore in the schools since it begins directly with the child's experience and knowledge.

The article may be read in the periodical which is now in the college library.

Outbreak Of First World War Kept Hoover From Fat Engineering Fees

NEW YORK—(AP)—Herbert Hoover recalls that only the outbreak of the First World War prevented him from earning "the largest engineering fees ever known to man."

He would have made the money—he did not say how much—by continuing to develop mines in Russia, the ex-President writes in his autobiography now appearing in Collier's magazine.

But with the advent of war in 1914, Hoover resigned his engineering connections to become director of Belgian relief. He never again returned to his chosen profession.

At the time he headed a highly successful engineering firm "connected with concerns producing hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of useful materials and employing over 150,000 people" in 11 different countries.

Hoover was then only 40.

One of his firm's greatest successes was achieved in mine development work in the Altai Mountains in Siberia.

". . . We developed," he recalls, "probably the greatest and richest single body of ore known in the world."

The mine yielded copper, lead and zinc sulphides as well as large amounts of gold and silver of a quality which "had hitherto existed only in museum specimens."

Commenting generally on engineering as a profession, Hoover says:

"There is the fascination of watching a figment of the imagination emerge through the aid of science to a plan on paper. Then it moves to realization in stone or metal or energy. Then it brings jobs and homes to men. Then it elevates living standards and adds to comforts.

The great liability of the engineer is that his works are out in the open where all can see them. He cannot bury his mistakes in the grave like the doctors. He cannot, like the architects, cover his failures with trees and vines. He cannot, like the politicians, blame his opponents and hope that the people will forget."

GI Gets 36-Foot Letter From Girl

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Feb. 22 (AP)—Pvt. Ray Sroke of Camp Carson received a 36-foot long letter from his girl friend in Milwaukee yesterday.

The letter had candy bars pasted to it "in case you get hungry while reading."

It had feathers pasted to it, to use as ticklers, "in case you get drowsy."

And it had pin-up style bathing beauties attached here and there.

Reason for the 25,000-word curiosity was that Sroke had written his girl, Dolores Hart, that her letters were getting too brief.

More than half of the world's mass is made up of neutrons, yet they are the most difficult of all nuclear particles to detect, say scientists.

One of his firm's greatest successes was achieved in mine development work in the Altai Mountains in Siberia.

". . . We developed," he recalls, "probably the greatest and richest single body of ore known in the world."

The mine yielded copper, lead and zinc sulphides as well as large amounts of gold and silver of a quality which "had hitherto existed only in museum specimens."

Commenting generally on engineering as a profession, Hoover says:

"There is the fascination of watching a figment of the imagination emerge through the aid of science to a plan on paper. Then it moves to realization in stone or metal or energy. Then it brings jobs and homes to men. Then it elevates living standards and adds to comforts.

The great liability of the engineer is that his works are out in the open where all can see them. He cannot bury his mistakes in the grave like the doctors. He cannot, like the architects, cover his failures with trees and vines. He cannot, like the politicians, blame his opponents and hope that the people will forget."

GI Gets 36-Foot Letter From Girl

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Feb. 22 (AP)—Pvt. Ray Sroke of Camp Carson received a 36-foot long letter from his girl friend in Milwaukee yesterday.

The letter had candy bars pasted to it "in case you get hungry while reading."

It had feathers pasted to it, to use as ticklers, "in case you get drowsy."

And it had pin-up style bathing beauties attached here and there.

Reason for the 25,000-word curiosity was that Sroke had written his girl, Dolores Hart, that her letters were getting too brief.

More than half of the world's mass is made up of neutrons, yet they are the most difficult of all nuclear particles to detect, say scientists.

White Record Is Wiped Out

Bill Mlkvy Holds Lead Ninth Week

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP)—Another basketball honor—the national major college scoring leadership—was taken from Long Island University's Sherman White today as a result of the fixing scandal.

For weeks the lanky White, considered a certain All-America player, had been trailing Temple's Bill Mlkvy in the race for individual scoring honors.

This week, White overtook Mlkvy, and swept into the lead with an average of 27.7 points per game, the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau reported. That was on the basis of games through last Saturday. Mlkvy dropped to second, with 26.7 average.

Then White, with two other LIU players, was arrested Monday. The NCAB, making note that White had taken the lead with a record-breaking average, said that the same time his performance would be stricken from the books.

Thus for the ninth week in a row, Mlkvy is the leader in this department. In 21 games, Mlkvy has scored 561 points. Scorers:

Clark Grabs Lead In Houston Open

HOUSTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—Jimmy Clark, young Laguna Beach, Calif., pro, sank a 14-foot putt on the eighteenth green today for an eight-under-par 64 that gave him the first-round lead in the $10,000 Houston Open.

Clark's final putt permitted him to edge out Jim Deal, former Southwest Conference shotput champion at Rice Institute, by one stroke. Deal took four fewer putts than Clark for the 18 holes but finished with a 65.

Par-breakers had a busy time on the 6,967 - yard Memorial Park course. Forty-eight players finished under par 72 and 13 others closed at regulation.

Max Evans, Detroit, Mich., trailed Deal by one stroke at 66.

Grouped at five-under 67 were Larry Glosser, Columbus, Ohio; John Barnum, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore.; Amateur Dick McCreary, Houston, and Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill.

Ransom with a 31 on the par 36 front nine, had been given the best chance to beat out Clark but he played even par on the back nine.

Seven withdrawals, including that of defending champion Cary Middlecoff, Memphis, Tenn., cut the first day's field to 163.

Tigers Pin Hopes On Rookie Hurler

Wayne McLeland — Tigers

DETROIT — Hoping to pick up some of the pitching slack caused when Art Houtteman went into the Army, the Detroit Tigers have high hopes for Wayne McLeland.

Pitching for Dallas last season, McLeland was one of three right handers to win 21 games. The others were Jim Blackburn, Cincinnati rookie, and Ernie Nevel, Yankee rookie. McLeland pitched 19 complete games and registered a 2.49 earned run mark. In 1949, pitching for Houston, McLeland completed all seven of his starts and compiled a 9-11 mark and had a 2.98 earned run average.

Hunters Ask Changes

Boys Play Too Rough

By C. V. BURNS

Two legislative measures of interest to hunters in this section of the state have been passed by the House of Delegates.

One allows the reporting of deer kills at any time during the open season. This is House Bill 199.

The other, HB 200, provides that no game regulation be adopted which would open the squirrel-hunting season before October 10 of any year.

Both bills pertain to hunting in Garrett county.

The section of the deer hunting laws relative to registration is very explicit and says:

"Every person killing a deer in the wild state, shall immediately report to a designated checking station with the said kill."

The suggested change was inspired by hunters who maintain camps far back in the wild and to whom the reporting of each kill immediately meant hours of arduous labor.

Last season the squirrel season extended from September 15 to September 30 and, as in previous years, there were numerous reports of mother squirrels still suckling their young being killed.

The squirrel hunting issue, which has been kicked around like a football for several years, is to be taken up at the next session of the State Game and Inland Fish Commission.

Carl Hartman, Ridgeley High's sharpshooting forward, now has an all-time high of 25.3 points per game for the first 20 games played by Ralph Poling's Blackhawks. His 62 points against West Virginia School for the Deaf on Tuesday night skyrocketed his season's total to 506 points.

Ridgeley concludes its regular 21-game schedule Tuesday night by playing host to Fort Hill.

And while speaking of the school across the Potomac, we might add that Randall "Skeets" Starkey, Ridgeley High alumnus, won his third straight bout in the New York area on Saturday night when he belted out Harry Daniels, of Harlem, in 44 seconds of the second round at the Ridgewood Grove Sporting Club.

It was the West Virginian's 18th consecutive victory since he turned pro and it was his 13th win via the K. O. route.

Starkey's handlers have been asked to have "Skeets" in readiness for tonight in case a lightheavyweight substitute is needed for one of the prelims at Madison Square Garden on the Tony Janiro-Jimmy Flood card.

A Morgantown (W. Va.) sports writer says Zigmund "Red" Mihalic is the best basketball referee in the tri-state district.

Greg Johnson says that post time for the Charles Town Jockey Club's 16-day meeting which ushers in the 1951 eastern racing season Saturday, March 3, is set for 1:30 p. m. The meeting runs through March 21.

Louis Waingold, Cumberland owner, plans to skip the Charles Town meeting and will race his string of thoroughbreds on the Maryland milers this spring.

Honey Bunch, a consistent winner on the Ohio circuit last summer, Hal's Play, Sobre Todos and Fittest spent the winter on a farm near Baltimore under the watchful eye of the veteran trainer William Irvine Sr., and should be in a great shape for the races this spring.

Fittest is a 3-year-old and has yet to make her first start.

Dick Groat, Duke University's basketball great, and Tommy Powers, Cumberlander, who is wingback on the Blue Devils' football team, are expected to play shortstop and third base on the Duke baseball team this spring.

Luzerne Atwell (Lu) Blue, who played first base for the Detroit Tigers, St. Louis Browns and Chicago White Sox, is now operating a super-market near Silver Spring, Md.

A native of Washington, D. C., Blue got his start in organized baseball in the old Blue Ridge League, starring with the Martinsburg (W. Va.) Blue Sox in 1916 and 1917.

Bob Sharkey, center of the Westmont High quint of Johnstown, final opponent on the Allegany High schedule, March 2, is the leading scorer in the Greater Johnstown District this season with 342 points in 16 games, an average of 21.4 per contest.

Parsons Tops Keyser, 45-44

Parsons Pull Upset, Avenge 64-40 Defeat

PARSONS, W. Va., Feb. 22 — Parsons High School provided an upset tonight by defeating Keyser High School, a 16-game winner, by the score of 45 to 44.

After Good scored what proved to be the winning goal, Alkire of Keyser missed two free throws.

The score was tied eight times at 2, 27, 28, 30, 32, 37, 40 and 44.

Keyser defeated Parsons earlier in the season by the score of 64-40.

Louis, Walker Fight Tonight

Heavies To Clash At San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22 (INS)—Joe Louis makes what he hopes to be the last whistle-stop on his comeback campaign to regain the heavyweight championship when he fights Andy Walker in a 10-round bout tomorrow night at the San Francisco Cow Palace.

The match will be Louis' fourth since he lost his title to Ezzard Charles and the once mighty Brown Bomber would like it to be his last before luring his conqueror into the ring again.

Louis is balding at 36 years and seemingly without the punch which made him the most feared man in boxing for more than a decade. But old Joe still has power to draw the fans through the turnstiles.

A standing-room-only crowd of more than 17,000 is expected to jam into the Cow Palace and produce a gate of nearly $100,000. Louis' share is expected to be about $30,0000.

The great interest in the fight has astounded the promoters. Walker is simply a 28-year-old home town boy who holds the California state championship. Hardly anyone believes he can beat Louis and there is virtually no betting on the fight.

The promoters' only explanation of the stampede for tickets is that "Joe Louis still has the punch at the gate."

There are about 12,500 fire alarm boxes in New York City.

Sentinel Loss, Barton Victory Will Tie Race

Barton Visits Beall, Catamounts On Road, Two Sectionals Open

Allegany and Fort Hill will clash tonight at Campobello in what looms as one of the most important games of the 1951 W. M. I. League campaign.

If Fort Hill wins it's all over but the shouting. However, if Allegany wins, and Barton whips Beall at Frostburg the race will end in a deadlock between Fort Hill and Barton on the final day of the season, thus necessitating a playoff for the league title.

Fort Hill's Sentinels were undefeated until Tuesday when they were spilled at Barton. The Hilltoppers had won 17 consecutive games, including eight in the league up to that one.

Whether Coach "Bobby" Cavanaugh's outfit will rally from the sock on the kisser tonight remains to be seen.

AHS Lost Opener, 40-32

Allegany gave the Sentinels an interesting game at Fort Hill earlier in the season but lost out 40-32. Out of the championship race, Allegany with 8 wins and 10 losses is eager to finish out the season with a .500 record and could do it by beating Fort Hill and Westmont at Johnstown. The Campers' home record is six wins and four losses which were administered by Somerset, the Alumni, LaSalle and Keyser.

Fort Hill has bagged the county Class "A" title and the city championship and a win tonight would give the Greenway Avenue quint another honor.

Meet For 32 Time

It's the 32nd of the series between these schools. Allegany has won 20, Fort Hill 11 in the 31 games played to date.

Clifton Van Roby and Eddie Diehl will officiate.

Barton swamped Beall by the score of 85-40 in Barton and the Braves are hopeful of sweeping the series in the Mountain City tonight. Hull and Farney will be the officials.

In the third W.M.I. League game of the night, Bruce High will play Central in Westernport. Hahn and Pence will be the officials.

Potomac State School opens a two-day road trip at Montgomery tonight when the Catamounts will meet West Virginia Tech, the No. 1 team in the West Virginia Conference. Coach "Horse" Lough's cagers will tackle Morris Harvey College at Charleston on Saturday night.

Sectionals To Open

Two Class "B" sectional tournaments open in nearby West Virginia tonight.

At Wardensville, Capon Bridge plays Wardensville at 7:30 and Paw Paw opposes Berkeley Springs at 9 o'clock.

The opening round of the tournament at Parsons High tonight finds Kasson playing Bayard at 7 and Davis battling Thomas at 8:15.

Oakland Legion Wins

ACCIDENT, Md., Feb. 22 — The Oakland American Legion defeated the Accident Legion quint by the score of 100-39 tonight in a Bi-State Basketball League game.

Cecil Nicola of Oakland scored 17 field goals and 40 points for Oakland while Kelly had 22 and Tracy 21.

White Record Is Wiped Out

Bill Mlkvy Holds Lead Ninth Week

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP)—Another basketball honor—the national major college scoring leadership—was taken from Long Island University's Sherman White today as a result of the fixing scandal.

For weeks the lanky White, considered a certain All-America player, had been trailing Temple's Bill Mlkvy in the race for individual scoring honors.

This week, White overtook Mlkvy, and swept into the lead with an average of 27.7 points per game, the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau reported. That was on the basis of games through last Saturday. Mlkvy dropped to second, with 26.7 average.

Then White, with two other LIU players, was arrested Monday. The NCAB, making note that White had taken the lead with a record-breaking average, said that the same time his performance would be stricken from the books.

Thus for the ninth week in a row, Mlkvy is the leader in this department. In 21 games, Mlkvy has scored 561 points. Scorers:

Clark Grabs Lead In Houston Open

HOUSTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—Jimmy Clark, young Laguna Beach, Calif., pro, sank a 14-foot putt on the eighteenth green today for an eight-under-par 64 that gave him the first-round lead in the $10,000 Houston Open.

Clark's final putt permitted him to edge out Jim Deal, former Southwest Conference shotput champion at Rice Institute, by one stroke. Deal took four fewer putts than Clark for the 18 holes but finished with a 65.

Par-breakers had a busy time on the 6,967 - yard Memorial Park course. Forty-eight players finished under par 72 and 13 others closed at regulation.

Max Evans, Detroit, Mich., trailed Deal by one stroke at 66.

Grouped at five-under 67 were Larry Glosser, Columbus, Ohio; John Barnum, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore.; Amateur Dick McCreary, Houston, and Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill.

Ransom with a 31 on the par 36 front nine, had been given the best chance to beat out Clark but he played even par on the back nine.

Seven withdrawals, including that of defending champion Cary Middlecoff, Memphis, Tenn., cut the first day's field to 163.

Tigers Pin Hopes On Rookie Hurler

Wayne McLeland — Tigers

DETROIT — Hoping to pick up some of the pitching slack caused when Art Houtteman went into the Army, the Detroit Tigers have high hopes for Wayne McLeland.

Pitching for Dallas last season, McLeland was one of three right handers to win 21 games. The others were Jim Blackburn, Cincinnati rookie, and Ernie Nevel, Yankee rookie. McLeland pitched 19 complete games and registered a 2.49 earned run mark. In 1949, pitching for Houston, McLeland completed all seven of his starts and compiled a 9-11 mark and had a 2.98 earned run average.

Hunters Ask Changes • • • Skeets Notches 18th

Will Race On Milers • • • Boys Play Too Rough

By C. V. BURNS

Two legislative measures of interest to hunters in this section of the state have been passed by the House of Delegates.

One allows the reporting of deer kills at any time during the open season. This is House Bill 199.

The other, HB 200, provides that no game regulation be adopted which would open the squirrel-hunting season before October 10 of any year.

Both bills pertain to hunting in Garrett county.

The section of the deer hunting laws relative to registration is very explicit and says:

"Every person killing a deer in the wild state, shall immediately report to a designated checking station with the said kill."

The suggested change was inspired by hunters who maintain camps far back in the wild and to whom the reporting of each kill immediately meant hours of arduous labor.

Last season the squirrel season extended from September 15 to September 30 and, as in previous years, there were numerous reports of mother squirrels still suckling their young being killed.

The squirrel hunting issue, which has been kicked around like a football for several years, is to be taken up at the next session of the State Game and Inland Fish Commission.

And while speaking of the school across the Potomac, we might add that Randall "Skeets" Starkey, Ridgeley High alumnus, won his third straight bout in the New York area on Saturday night when he belted out Harry Daniels, of Harlem, in 44 seconds of the second round at the Ridgewood Grove Sporting Club.

It was the West Virginian's 18th consecutive victory since he turned pro and it was his 13th win via the K. O. route.

Starkey's handlers have been asked to have "Skeets" in readiness for tonight in case a lightheavyweight substitute is needed for one of the prelims at Madison Square Garden on the Tony Janiro-Jimmy Flood card.

Louis, Walker Fight Tonight

Heavies To Clash At San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22 (INS)—Joe Louis makes what he hopes to be the last whistle-stop on his comeback campaign to regain the heavyweight championship when he fights Andy Walker in a 10-round bout tomorrow night at the San Francisco Cow Palace.

The match will be Louis' fourth since he lost his title to Ezzard Charles and the once mighty Brown Bomber would like it to be his last before luring his conqueror into the ring again.

Louis is balding at 36 years and seemingly without the punch which made him the most feared man in boxing for more than a decade. But old Joe still has power to draw the fans through the turnstiles.

A standing-room-only crowd of more than 17,000 is expected to jam into the Cow Palace and produce a gate of nearly $100,000. Louis' share is expected to be about $30,0000.

The great interest in the fight has astounded the promoters. Walker is simply a 28-year-old home town boy who holds the California state championship. Hardly anyone believes he can beat Louis and there is virtually no betting on the fight.

The promoters' only explanation of the stampede for tickets is that "Joe Louis still has the punch at the gate."

There are about 12,500 fire alarm boxes in New York City.

Sentinel Loss, Barton Victory Will Tie Race

Barton Visits Beall, Catamounts On Road, Two Sectionals Open

Allegany and Fort Hill will clash tonight at Campobello in what looms as one of the most important games of the 1951 W. M. I. League campaign.

If Fort Hill wins it's all over but the shouting. However, if Allegany wins, and Barton whips Beall at Frostburg the race will end in a deadlock between Fort Hill and Barton on the final day of the season, thus necessitating a playoff for the league title.

Fort Hill's Sentinels were undefeated until Tuesday when they were spilled at Barton. The Hilltoppers had won 17 consecutive games, including eight in the league up to that one.

Whether Coach "Bobby" Cavanaugh's outfit will rally from that sock on the kisser tonight remains to be seen.

AHS Lost Opener, 40-32

Allegany gave the Sentinels an interesting game at Fort Hill earlier in the season but lost out 40-32. Out of the championship race, Allegany with 8 wins and 10 losses is eager to finish out the season with a .500 record and could do it by beating Fort Hill and Westmont at Johnstown. The Campers' home record is six wins and four losses which were administered by Somerset, the Alumni, LaSalle and Keyser.

Fort Hill has bagged the county Class "A" title and the city championship and a win tonight would give the Greenway Avenue quint another honor.

Meet For 32 Time

It's the 32nd of the series between these schools. Allegany has won 20, Fort Hill 11 in the 31 games played to date.

Clifton Van Roby and Eddie Diehl will officiate.

Barton swamped Beall by the score of 85-40 in Barton and the Braves are hopeful of sweeping the series in the Mountain City tonight. Hull and Farney will be the officials.

In the third W.M.I. League game of the night, Bruce High will play Central in Westernport. Hahn and Pence will be the officials.

Potomac State School opens a two-day road trip at Montgomery tonight when the Catamounts will meet West Virginia Tech, the No. 1 team in the West Virginia Conference. Coach "Horse" Lough's cagers will tackle Morris Harvey College at Charleston on Saturday night.

Sectionals To Open

Two Class "B" sectional tournaments open in nearby West Virginia tonight.

At Wardensville, Capon Bridge plays Wardensville at 7:30 and Paw Paw opposes Berkeley Springs at 9 o'clock.

The opening round of the tournament at Parsons High tonight finds Kasson playing Bayard at 7 and Davis battling Thomas at 8:15.

Oakland Legion Wins

ACCIDENT, Md., Feb. 22 — The Oakland American Legion defeated the Accident Legion quint by the score of 100-39 tonight in a Bi-State Basketball League game.

Cecil Nicola of Oakland scored 17 field goals and 40 points for Oakland while Kelly had 22 and Tracy 21.

Maryland Racing Officials Oppose Delay Of Results

Anne Arundel State's Attorney Favors Ban

BALTIMORE, Feb. 22 (AP) — Maryland Racing Commission and Jockey Club officials said today they oppose any plan for a 20-minute delay in the transmission of results from race tracks.

The step was advocated before the legislature today by James C. Morton, Anne Arundel county state's attorney, as a method of discouraging illegal off-track betting.

It would be similar to a ban on the transmission of race results from Florida tracks until 20 minutes after the running of a race.

Morton announced he will seek passage of county bills requiring the board of county commissioners to license all subscriptions to racing-wire services.

Jenifer said he believes the commission should be left to decide whether the 20-minute delay would be advisable.

Reckord called the proposal "most unfortunate" and said "matters of track administration should be left to" the racing commission.

Harman High School of Randolph county, W. Va., has protested to the state athletic association over the failure of Kasson High to use a registered official for a recent game at Kasson in which five Harman players are reported to have suffered injuries and one starting forward was knocked unconscious for six minutes.

Coach Ellyson of Harman withdrew all his regular players at the half and allowed Kasson to score at will in the last half.

The state association rules provide that after a game is started there can be no discontinuance or cessation of playing.

Principal Meadows of Harman states that the object is to obtain a ruling which would protect players and teams in similar situations.

Maryland Racing Officials Oppose Delay Of Results

Anne Arundel State's Attorney Favors Ban

BALTIMORE, Feb. 22 (AP) — Maryland Racing Commission and Jockey Club officials said today they oppose any plan for a 20-minute delay in the transmission of results from race tracks.

The step was advocated before the legislature today by James C. Morton, Anne Arundel county state's attorney, as a method of discouraging illegal off-track betting.

It would be similar to a ban on the transmission of race results from Florida tracks until 20 minutes after the running of a race.

Morton announced he will seek passage of county bills requiring the board of county commissioners to license all subscriptions to racing-wire services.

Jenifer said he believes the commission should be left to decide whether the 20-minute delay would be advisable.

Reckord called the proposal "most unfortunate" and said "matters of track administration should be left to" the racing commission.

Harman High School of Randolph county, W. Va., has protested to the state athletic association over the failure of Kasson High to use a registered official for a recent game at Kasson in which five Harman players are reported to have suffered injuries and one starting forward was knocked unconscious for six minutes.

Coach Ellyson of Harman withdrew all his regular players at the half and allowed Kasson to score at will in the last half.

The state association rules provide that after a game is started there can be no discontinuance or cessation of playing.

Principal Meadows of Harman states that the object is to obtain a ruling which would protect players and teams in similar situations.

Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

How To Win An Audience

YOU know what a rating is? Well, sir, you sprinkle 1,500 audimeters around the country; these gadgets listen in on the radio habits of that many people and automatically determine the radio habits of the other 149,998,500 people in the country. Or you call a few hundred people in New York and, by mathematical extension, acquire deep insight into the television tastes of the 11,000,000 viewers in the metropolitan area.

John Crosby

You may well argue that a 1,500 person sample, a ratio of 1 to 100,000, is entirely too small to provide anything like an accurate picture of what 150,000,000 people are listening or not listening to. It's an old, old argument, and you'd pick up a lot of company among radio or TV people to debate it pro and con. Those in favor of ratings, you'll find, have good ratings. That man on the left who says ratings are a lot of blankety-blank x$"&%$ nonsense probably has a rating of .02. A year from now, let's say, his rating climbs to 23. Then you'll find him on the other side of the fence, passionately defending the Hooper and Nielsen ratings like an ex-Socialist who has just inherited $14,000,000 defending the capitalist system.

Four or five years back, NBC raided CBS and picked up most of that network's most popular programs. The CBS ratings dropped like bandits in front of Hopalong Cassidy. The maledictions heaped upon the head of C. E. Hooper around the CBS corridors in those days would have delighted Falstaff, that great master of invective. Then CBS did a little cattle-rustling on the NBC range and picked up Jack Benny, Edgar Bergen, Amos 'n' Andy, and a lot of other prime beef. NBC's ratings sank like rocks. Now NBC, which once regarded Mr. Hooper as a statistical divinity, looks upon his successor, Mr. Nielsen, as an amateur tea-leaf reader whose ratings are about as accurate as a straw in a windstorm.

And so it goes. No matter what you think of the ratings, the advertiser still depends on them and that means the listener is still going to get a high-rated comedian thrust down his throat, no matter how awful the listener thinks he is. Now television comes along and with it come the rating boys with their glittering figures.

• — • — •

If ratings were debatable in radio, they are wildly misleading in television. The man with the highest rating in television is still Milton Berle. Well, Berle has almost the absolute limit of television stations on which to display himself and he also has an excellent time. If you're on 63 TV stations, you're going to get a higher rating than a man on 16 stations, even if you're reciting the classified telephone directory.

The big thing is to get on the air in as many cities as possible. Sammy Kaye, with a perfectly dreadful show, got ratings in the 80s, which is very, very high, in St. Louis. Well, St. Louis has only one TV station. You either took Sammy Kaye or you turned the set off. In its current issue, "Time" magazine surveys local television shows around the country and concludes sadly that people will look at anything. "Fireside Theater," which has maintained an amazingly consistent level of mediocrity, leads all television dramatic programs in popularity—if you believe the ratings. There are at least seven other dramatic programs which are far better, have higher budgets and greater box-office names in the cast.

"Television Magazine" points out that "in both the variety and dramatic categories, the programs with the lower cost per thousand (viewers) are those that have been the longest on television." In general, the oldest programs grabbed the best stations (or the only stations) and the best times. You can hardly avoid them and they can hardly avoid a good rating.

And because they have good ratings, the advertiser assumes that these are the types of programs the public is deeply devoted to and strives to imitate them, no matter how bad they are. It has always seemed immoral to me to set a standard of taste through the manipulation of numbers as the ratings did in radio. In television, the rating system strikes me as not only immoral but as downright lousy arithmetic.

NO UNIMPORTANT CARDS

TO THE fine and observing player, everything is important. In fact, the exact size of every card played is noted, to help him learn anything he can from it. Even the difference between a deuce and a trey can be the key to the play of some hands. It is only the rank and filer, who has not learned that contracts sometimes depend on apparent trifles, that does not try to notice everything presented to his view.

West was definitely the villain of the piece on this deal. Most disastrous of his moves was that double of 4-Diamonds, which he could have lambasted if he had closed the auction by passing. Of course he shouldn't have had such an opportunity, but South had decided that North's two bids of hearts followed by one each of clubs and diamonds indicated five hearts and four each in the minors, whereas North never would have made his bids in that order except with cue-bids of first-round controls. North was plenty lucky to have West's double give him a chance to sashay into the 4-Hearts.

East's club K lead was won by the A. The heart A, K and Q were followed by the spade 10 finesse to the K. West's club J was overtaken by the Q, the 10 scored and the diamond K returned because West had doubled that suit. North ruffed this, then led the spade 9 to the A, felling the Q and assuring success of the contract.

How did North know he should try to drop the Q instead of finessing the spades a second time? That's what West wanted to know. North said he had noticed East's spade plays, the 2 on the first round and the 3 on the second, advertising three of them instead of two or four. After the 3 play, North knew each defender had a spade left. Which was more likely to hold the Q? North decided that, since East had shown such honor strength in the minors, yet West had enough to double the 4-Diamonds bid, West was the more likely holder of any missing honor. He proved right, a reward for noticing the 2 first and 3 later.

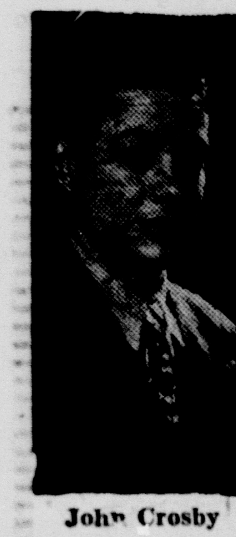
Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

How To Win An Audience



John Crosby

YOU know what a rating is? Well, sir, you sprinkle 1,500 audimeters around the country; these gadgets listen in on the radio habits of that many people and automatically determine the radio habits of the other 149,998,500 people in the country. Or you call a few hundred people in New York and, by mathematical extension, acquire deep insight into the television tastes of the 11,000,000 viewers in the metropolitan area.

You may well argue that a 1,500 person sample, a ratio of 1 to 100,000, is entirely too small to provide anything like an accurate picture of what 150,000,000 people are listening or not listening to. It's an old, old argument, and you'd pick up a lot of company among radio or TV people to debate it pro and con. Those in favor of ratings, you'll find, have good ratings. That man on the left who says ratings are a lot of blankety-blank x$"&%$ nonsense probably has a rating of .02. A year from now, let's say, his rating climbs to 23. Then you'll find him on the other side of the fence, passionately defending the Hooper and Nielsen ratings like an ex-Socialist who has just inherited $14,000,000 defending the capitalist system.

Four or five years back, NBC raided CBS and picked up most of that network's most popular programs. The CBS ratings dropped like bandits in front of Hopalong Cassidy. The maledictions heaped upon the head of C. E. Hooper around the CBS corridors in those days would have delighted Falstaff, that great master of invective. Then CBS did a little cattle-rustling on the NBC range and picked up Jack Benny, Edgar Bergen, Amos 'n' Andy, and a lot of other prime beef. NBC's ratings sank like rocks. Now NBC, which once regarded Mr. Hooper as a statistical divinity, looks upon his successor, Mr. Nielsen, as an amateur tea-leaf reader whose ratings are about as accurate as a straw in a windstorm.

And so it goes. No matter what you think of the ratings, the advertiser still depends on them and that means the listener is still going to get a high-rated comedian thrust down his throat, no matter how awful the listener thinks he is. Now television comes along and with it come the rating boys with their glittering figures.

If ratings were debatable in radio, they are wildly misleading in television. The man with the highest rating in television is still Milton Berle. Well, Berle has almost the absolute limit of television stations on which to display himself and he also has an excellent time. If you're on 63 TV stations, you're going to get a higher rating than a man on 16 stations, even if you're reciting the classified telephone directory.

The big thing is to get on the air in as many cities as possible. Sammy Kaye, with a perfectly dreadful show, got ratings in the 80s, which is very, very high, in St. Louis. Well, St. Louis has only one TV station. You either took Sammy Kaye or you turned the set off. In its current issue, "Time" magazine surveys local television shows around the country and concludes sadly that people will look at anything. "Fireside Theater," which has maintained an amazingly consistent level of mediocrity, leads all television dramatic programs in popularity—if you believe the ratings. There are at least seven other dramatic programs which are far better, have higher budgets and greater box-office names in the cast.

"Television Magazine" points out that "in both the variety and dramatic categories, the programs with the lower cost per thousand (viewers) are those that have been the longest on television." In general, the oldest programs grabbed the best stations (or the only stations) and the best times. You can hardly avoid them and they can hardly avoid a good rating.

And because they have good ratings, the advertiser assumes that these are the types of programs the public is deeply devoted to and strives to imitate them, no matter how bad they are. It has always seemed immoral to me to set a standard of taste through the manipulation of numbers as the ratings did in radio. In television, the rating system strikes me as not only immoral but as downright lousy arithmetic.

NO UNIMPORTANT CARDS

TO THE fine and observing player, everything is important. In fact, the exact size of every card played is noted, to help him learn anything he can from it. Even the difference between a deuce and a trey can be the key to the play of some hands. It is only the rank and filer, who has not learned that contracts sometimes depend on apparent trifles, that does not try to notice everything presented to his view.

West was definitely the villain of the piece on this deal. Most disastrous of his moves was that double of 4-Diamonds, which he could have lambasted if he had closed the auction by passing. Of course he shouldn't have had such an opportunity, but South had decided that North's two bids of hearts followed by one each of clubs and diamonds indicated five hearts and four each in the minors, whereas North never would have made his bids in that order except with cue-bids of first-round controls. North was plenty lucky to have West's double give him a chance to sashay into the 4-Hearts.

East's club K lead was won by the A. The heart A, K and Q were followed by the spade 10 finesse to the K. West's club J was overtaken by the Q, the 10 scored and the diamond K returned because West had doubled that suit. North ruffed this, then led the spade 9 to the A, felling the Q and assuring success of the contract.

How did North know he should try to drop the Q instead of finessing the spades a second time? That's what West wanted to know. North said he had noticed East's spade plays, the 2 on the first round and the 3 on the second, advertising three of them instead of two or four. After the 3 play, North knew each defender had a spade left. Which was more likely to hold the Q? North decided that, since East had shown such honor strength in the minors, yet West had enough to double the 4-Diamonds bid, West was the more likely holder of any missing honor. He proved right, a reward for noticing the 2 first and 3 later.

Matter Of Fact

transform the Korean War into a general war.

The second alternative is for the enemy to stay where he is, to go on expending his manpower at the same dreadful rate, and to hope for the best. It seems difficult to believe that either the Chinese or North Korean commanders will feel much enthusiasm for this particular choice. As for the third alternative, it is of course to break contact with the United Nations forces, and to attempt to reach some sort of settlement.

It is entirely probable that the choice between these three alternatives have already been made. Mao Tse-tung's reported mission to Moscow was no doubt undertaken precisely for the purpose of forcing a decision. And it should not be overlooked that there were some menacing hints in Stalin's recent statement, to the effect that a general war might ensue if the Western powers did not knuckle under to Mao Tse-tung's demands.

Yet the State Department feels hopeful enough so that serious consideration has already been given to the form which an acceptable settlement might take. The British who have access to Peking, have already been informally sounded out on the possibilities of acting as honest brokers in the negotiations which might lead up to a settlement. In short, the situation in Korea has been radically and basically altered by the crushing defeat of the Communist offensive. And this in turn, for reasons which will be examined in a forthcoming report, may also have radically altered the whole situation in the Far East.

M/Sgt. Balch served with the armed forces during World War II.

Many persons like to add one tablespoon of lard or butter for each cup of uncooked rice used. Cook in the usual manner except for this addition at the beginning of the cooking process. This is particularly good when serving rice as an accompaniment for meats.

Thomas R. Neat, 31, RFD 5, is reported missing since Tuesday at 2 p. m. He is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 215 pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes.

Area Highway Loads Limited

The State Roads Commission yesterday imposed emergency weight restrictions of 12,000 pounds the axle-load limit on the following highways in Allegany County:

State Route 55 from Clarysville to Midland, State Route 36 from Mt. Savage to Frostburg, State Route 638 from Eckhart to Morantown and State Route 47 along the Barrelville Route. Last week a similar limit was put on Route 53.

Roads in Garrett County affected by the 12,000 pounds limit include U. S. Route 219 from Red House to Keyser's Ridge, State Route 560 from Gorman to Loch Lynn Heights, State Route 41 from Loch Lynn Heights to State Route 38 and State Route 42 from U. S. Route 219 to the Pennsylvania State Line.

As in the case of similar emergency weight limits announced last week, the new restrictions have been necessitated, a spokesman for the Commission explained, by the unusually variable weather conditions of the last few weeks in which freezing temperatures have alternated with thaws and rainy spells.

Approximately 200 miles of highway in the western and central section of the State have been affected by the restriction. Restrictions announced yesterday like those of last week will remain in effect for 60 days unless bettering weather conditions permit the mto be lifted sooner.

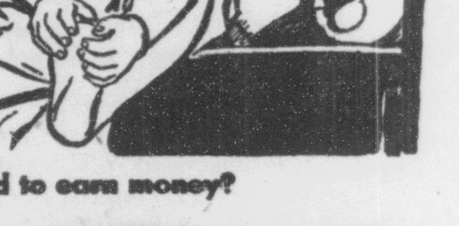
MIRROR OF YOUR MIND

By LAWRENCE GOULD
Consulting Psychologist

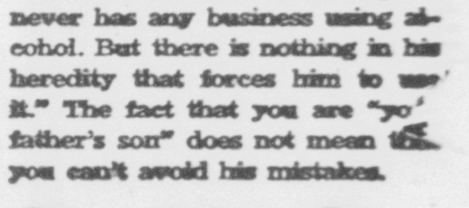
Is it good for a child to earn money?

Answer: Yes, and for an even more important reason than to help him "learn the value of it." The extent to which a child will willingly do useful work after he grows up depends on how far he has learned to associate work with some sort of reward or satisfaction. It is true that your approval or the sense of being useful and important are real satisfactions but nothing quite equals a tangible reward which he can use as he pleases. It is often a good plan to have a child earn the money for his good times and depend upon you only for necessities.



Is alcoholism hereditary?

Answer: No, says Dr. Robert V. Seliger of the National Committee on Alcohol Hygiene in his booklet "Alcoholics Are Sick People." The idea that anyone has a hereditary weakness for alcohol is a "virulent fallacy." "No one is born an alcoholic. It is probable that a person can inherit an inability to handle alcohol and, because of his physical and constitutional makeup, he never has any business using alcohol. But there is nothing in his heredity that forces him to use it." The fact that you are "your father's son" does not mean that you can't avoid his mistakes.



Does psychoanalysis leave you at loose ends?

Answer: No, writes Dr. Benson Carmichael in the Journal of Clinical Psychopathology. Psychoanalytic treatment is not merely a matter of dissecting the patient's emotions leaving him confused and puzzled. If successful, it gives him the power to reorganize his feelings and ideas and he goes on doing this long after the actual treatment ceases. It is your secret fears and childish feelings that prevent your thinking clearly and once you are freed from these, you can use your intelligence for the purpose for which Nature gave it to you.

Matter Of Fact

transform the Korean War into a general war.

The second alternative is for the enemy to stay where he is, to go on expending his manpower at the same dreadful rate, and to hope for the best. It seems difficult to believe that either the Chinese or North Korean commanders will feel much enthusiasm for this particular choice. As for the third alternative, it is of course to break contact with the United Nations forces, and to attempt to reach some sort of settlement.

It is entirely probable that the choice between these three alternatives have already been made. Mao Tse-tung's reported mission to Moscow was no doubt undertaken precisely for the purpose of forcing a decision. And it should not be overlooked that there were some menacing hints in Stalin's recent statement, to the effect that a general war might ensue if the Western powers did not knuckle under to Mao Tse-tung's demands.

Yet the State Department feels hopeful enough so that serious consideration has already been given to the form which an acceptable settlement might take. The British who have access to Peking, have already been informally sounded out on the possibilities of acting as honest brokers in the negotiations which might lead up to a settlement. In short, the situation in Korea has been radically and basically altered by the crushing defeat of the Communist offensive. And this in turn, for reasons which will be examined in a forthcoming report, may also have radically altered the whole situation in the Far East.

Many persons like to add one tablespoon of lard or butter for each cup of uncooked rice used. Cook in the usual manner except for this addition at the beginning of the cooking process. This is particularly good when serving rice as an accompaniment for meats.

Area Highway Loads Limited

The State Roads Commission yesterday imposed emergency weight restrictions of 12,000 pounds the axle-load limit on the following highways in Allegany County:

State Route 55 from Clarysville to Midland, State Route 36 from Mt. Savage to Frostburg, State Route 638 from Eckhart to Morantown and State Route 47 along the Barrelville Route. Last week a similar limit was put on Route 53.

Roads in Garrett County affected by the 12,000 pounds limit include U. S. Route 219 from Red House to Keyser's Ridge, State Route 560 from Gorman to Loch Lynn Heights, State Route 41 from Loch Lynn Heights to State Route 38 and State Route 42 from U. S. Route 219 to the Pennsylvania State Line.

As in the case of similar emergency weight limits announced last week, the new restrictions have been necessitated, a spokesman for the Commission explained, by the unusually variable weather conditions of the last few weeks in which freezing temperatures have alternated with thaws and rainy spells.

Approximately 200 miles of highway in the western and central section of the State have been affected by the restriction. Restrictions announced yesterday like those of last week will remain in effect for 60 days unless bettering weather conditions permit the mto be lifted sooner.

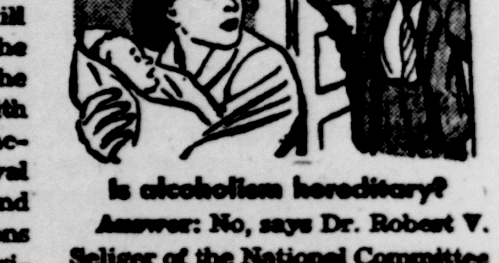
MIRROR OF YOUR MIND

By LAWRENCE GOULD
Consulting Psychologist

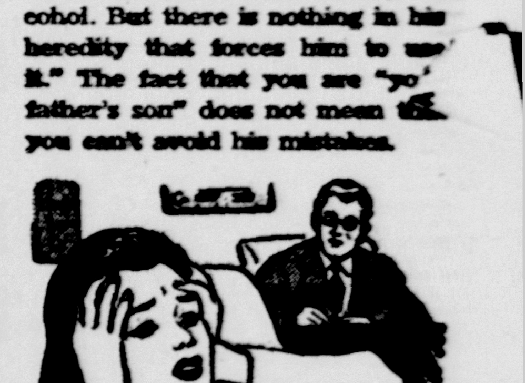
Is it good for a child to earn money?

Answer: Yes, and for an even more important reason than to help him "learn the value of it." The extent to which a child will willingly do useful work after he grows up depends on how far he has learned to associate work with some sort of reward or satisfaction. It is true that your approval or the sense of being useful and important are real satisfactions but nothing quite equals a tangible reward which he can use as he pleases. It is often a good plan to have a child earn the money for his good times and depend upon you only for necessities.



Is alcoholism hereditary?

Answer: No, says Dr. Robert V. Seliger of the National Committee on Alcohol Hygiene in his booklet "Alcoholics Are Sick People." The idea that anyone has a hereditary weakness for alcohol is a "virulent fallacy." "No one is born an alcoholic. It is probable that a person can inherit an inability to handle alcohol and, because of his physical and constitutional makeup, he never has any business using alcohol. But there is nothing in his heredity that forces him to use it." The fact that you are "your father's son" does not mean that you can't avoid his mistakes.



Does psychoanalysis leave you at loose ends?

Answer: No, writes Dr. Benson Carmichael in the Journal of Clinical Psychopathology. Psychoanalytic treatment is not merely a matter of dissecting the patient's emotions leaving him confused and puzzled. If successful, it gives him the power to reorganize his feelings and ideas and he goes on doing this long after the actual treatment ceases. It is your secret fears and childish feelings that prevent your thinking clearly and once you are freed from these, you can use your intelligence for the purpose for which Nature gave it to you.

County Industrial Committee Gets Progress Report From Wood

Says Eight Contacts Showing Interest

Richardson Wood, industrial consultant for the Allegany County Industrial Promotion Committee, made a report on his activities during the six-month term ending February 15 at a meeting of the committee in the employment office, 301 South Mechanic Street Wednesday night.

Wood reported on the so-called "pilot operation" he has conducted during his term. The operation consisted of an effort to interest manufacturing companies to locate in this area, and was the forerunner of a major, three-year plan to be undertaken if the pilot operation proves successful.

Interest Shown

The consultant reported that plans for the location of the Berkowitz pajama factory in Frostburg were well under way and he is currently working on 15 other prospects, eight which are definitely interested in locating in this area. Those interested represent a variety of industrial operations, Wood said. He also mentioned that a large number of firms had been contacted, but many had not shown an inclination to build here.

In the course of the meeting the problem of public financing of industrial promotion was raised. Wood's reaction to public financing of such projects was favorable. He said that many communities will probably have to undertake financing plans in order to further industrial development.

Hancock Man Loses Only One Day In 25 Years At Celanese

Emory McClung Booth, machinist in textile engineering at the Celanese Corporation was presented with a pocket watch yesterday by H. C. Givens, plant manager for twenty-five years service with the firm.

He was also presented a certificate and twenty-five year emblem by W. J. Elvin, plant engineer.

In accepting the awards the sixty-four year old Hancock resident estimated that he traveled about twenty-five thousand miles a year to and from work. He said he put over 300,000 miles on his 1939 Buick and decided it was time for a new motor.

Booth worked for eleven years with the Southern Pipe Line Company at State Line, Pa. before he came to the Celanese. After learning his trade at the Pennsylvania Pipe Company, he became an employ at the Celanese, February 22, 1926.

He accounts for only one day's loss at work and that was last December 11 when a trailer truck slid backward into his car while he was enroute to Cumberland.

Booth who was born and raised in Hancock lived on a farm on Town Hill until six months ago when he moved into Hancock.

He is an honorary member of the Cumberland Vets Club; I.O.O.F. Local 601, Warfordsburg, Pa: Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles; and is the oldest member of the Hancock Band in age and membership.

$95,000 Needed In Civil Defense Work In County

Estimates Are Sent To Delegate Driscoll

Civil Defense officials here have notified state officials that some $95,000 will be needed to meet the principal Civil Defense needs of Allegany County.

Arthur B. Gibson, Civil Defense director for Cumberland, submitted the above estimate at the request of Delegate Fred B. Driscoll, a member of the House Civil Defense committee.

The estimate includes the cost of equipment for fire fighting, communications, emergency lighting and warning facilities for the county.

The list of needed materials includes 28,000 feet of 2½ inch fire hose at a total cost of some $56,000.

Another 14,000 feet of 1½ inch fire hose, at a cost of $15,000 is included.

Fifteen portable pumping units, at a cost of $6,000 have been included.

For communications, officials estimate 10 mobile radio units, costing about $3,000 will be needed.

Several portable generators, which can be placed in immediate use in case of power failure, have been included.

Sirens, to be placed in strategic spots to warn of air attacks or other civil emergencies, would cost another $5,000.

The hose estimates includes 6,000 feet of hose to outfit additional fire fighting units in Cumberland.

City Recreation Dept. Expecting To Meet Budget

Auditor Reports Balance Of $672

The City Recreation Department reported yesterday that receipts forthcoming within the next few months should enable it to meet its budget in spite of the expenditures of nearly $20,000 on a playing field and playground.

The January 31 financial report issued yesterday by Arthur B. Gibson, city auditor, showed the department has a balance of only $672.59 of its $39,000 appropriation, which must run the department until the end of June.

Salaries To Be Met

Edmund F. Hoey, recreation director, said that all is in readiness for the opening of the spring playing season June 25 and that salaries and office expenses will be the only obligation which must be met.

These needs, he added, should be met through sale of fence advertising at the Penn Avenue baseball field, advance sales of season tickets and gate receipts from May and June softball and baseball games.

Receipts from the Constitution Park swimming pool, he added, are expected to cover the full operation of that recreation center.

Hoey said the department has been running a shortage for several months due to extensive work on the Penn Avenue ball park.

Spent $18,000 On Park

All of the expenditures for the field, totaling some $18,000, have been met from the department's current budget, he said, and do not represent the use of a cent of the $150,000 recreation bond issue passed in 1946.

The $18,000 has been sufficient to put the field in playing condition only. Plans are being made to add dressing and shower rooms and to provide top soil so the field can be seeded. Another 1,200 bleachers will be added this year.

During six weeks of operation in 1950, the department received $800 fence advertising fees and some $2,950 from gate receipts. He said advertising fees are expected to reach $1,000 this year, with gate receipts should add another $6-8,000.

Eventually, the receipts from this field will be used to build anoher similar play center, Hoey said, so that the program will be self liquidating.

It will take time to place the program on a self-sustaining position, but it can be one eventually, Hoey said.

Plan Additional Areas

The department hopes to use the $150,000 bond issue as a rotating fund to provide the city with top notch facilities.

The year's appropriations also include $1,000 to purchase ground for

Industrial Coal Price Increase Expected Here

Dealers Say Trend Not Yet General

The price of industrial coal has increased slightly in some mines in the Tri-State Area but domestic coal prices have remained stable, local dealers and purchasers revealed yesterday.

Mine operators were permitted to increase the price of a ton of coal after coal miners were given a wage hike of $1.60 per day recently but increases have varied and are not stable generally it was reported.

One large coal dealer in Cumberland said prices vary quite a bit now but that nothing definite has come about. Small operators are fighting to remain in business and industrial coal prices have fluctuated some, the dealer said, but the domestic price has remained unchanged. This is primarily because of coal supplied by small operators and family affairs.

The dealer expected a hike of from 20 cents to 45 cents in the near future in industrial coal.

Loyd F. Keller, purchasing agent of Kelly-Springfield Tire Company related that some mines have upped the price of industrial coal but the increase is not general. Mine owners and operators apparently are still endeavoring to find out how much the wage increase will affect costs before making a move, he said.

The price probably will depend on the demand for coal, Keller stated, remarking that if the price goes too high the industrial plants of the area might go outside the immediate area in an effort to get lower priced coal. He expects a general rise in the price of industrial coal of about 25 cents in the near future but thought domestic coal prices might remain stable.

Local 26 Opens Contract Talks

Contract negotiations between Local 26, Rubber Workers Union (CIO) and the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company opened here yesterday.

Ralph C. Beard, vice president of the union, said the meeting was a preliminary one, devoted chiefly to setting up a schedule for the opening of actual negotiations.

The pact talks will get under way at meetings set Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 9:30 a. m. at the tire plant.

The union is seeking changes in working conditions, seniority and hours of work in the pact which expires on April 1. All issues except pay may be discussed.

Other union negotiators are Leo Barkman, for maintenance workers, and Earl Johnson, for the production units.

Work To Begin On Frederick Street Flood Project Mar. 5

Valley Street Crews Work 24-Hour Days

Army engineers reported yesterday that crews are working 24 hours a day to complete work on the Valley Street portion of the Cumberland-Ridgeley flood control project and indications now point to the beginning of work on Frederick Street about March 5.

With the advent of spring engineers believe excavations will be filled rapidly and work speeded up considerably as the contractors put more crews to work.

J. C. Malloy, representative of the Thomas Earle and Son, Contractors, of Philadelphia, Pa., has been conferring with officials here regarding a sub-contract to George and Lynch for the Frederick Street portion of the project. The Philadelphia company probably will have its equipment on hand to begin work about March 5, Thomas E. Dickson, project engineer said yesterday.

Excavations will be made for a pressure conduit, six feet by six feet, which will empty into Wills Creek at Bedford and North Mechanic Streets. The conduit will be placed between the former Fulton Myers American Legion Post home and 104 North Mechanic, turn down Mechanic toward Baltimore Street to Frederick then up Frederick Street to Henderson Avenue with a branch turning off at Henry Street.

A 52-inch storm sewer at Bedford Street will be re-routed beside the conduit to empty into the creek, Dickson said.

The excavation will cross under the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks at Frederick and Henderson Avenue and the temporary tressle bridge now in use at Valley Street will be moved to the crossing to permit train traffic to be uninterrupted during the flood project work, Dickson noted.

Two large catch basins will be placed on either side of Henderson Avenue at the crossing, extending four feet into the roadway with grating on top, the engineer related, and a regulating chamber will be built there to separate storm sewers and sanitary sewage lines.

The Henry Street conduit will continue to the spur railroad track at George Street with another regulating chamber to be placed in the vicinity of the B & O freight station and the ice plant. Tunneling and laying of pipe has already been completed under the Louis Stein Funeral Home on this portion of the project, Dickson related.

Miss Cumberland Of 1950 Says Winning Beauty Pageant Title Aided Her Career

Cites Value Of Scholarship And Other Awards Offered

By JOHN KNOWLTON
News Staff Writer

"The scholarship which is enabling me to take this secretarial course has been my most valuable gift," Miss Barbara Lee Fulton said yesterday as she paused between school classes to relate some of her experiences as "Miss Cumberland of 1950."

The tall, willowy, hazel-eyed beauty, captured the title in competition against seven other girls in a Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce-sponsored contest at Fort Hill High School June 12, 1950 and represented the city in the state finals at Baltimore June 24, 1950.

Although she didn't win the "Miss Maryland" contest which would have enabled her to go to Atlantic City for the "Miss America" competition, Barbara says she has never regretted for a moment the day she entered the contest.

Didn't Enter At First

"I didn't enter until I had learned of the advantages offered the contestants," she reminisced, "but I would do it again if the opportunity could present itself."

"Bobby" as she is more affectionately known to her many friends is now studying a secretarial course in Catherman's Business School, Baltimore Street, and her teachers all regard her an excellent student and pleasant, charming girl.

"I was going to study to be a teacher and had completed all my plans, even reserving a room, to enter college last fall but the scholarship which was awarded me after winning the Miss Cumberland title changed all my plans," the attractive Allegany High School graduate related.

At first she did not intend to use the scholarship but was persuaded to do so at the bequest of her many friends.

"I had my choice of any course with my scholarship," Barbara related, "but I think secretarial training is most essential and helpful.

Warrant's were sworn out yesterday for 11 pickets who stoned a bus Wednesday carrying non-union workers from Crellin, Md., to a coal mine of the Kray Coal Company near Howesville in the Preston County mine field. A hearing will be held Monday at 3 p. m. before Magistrate F. W. Pritt.

The Preston County Journal last night said that the eleven involved include Glen Dale Bolyard, Leroy Bolyard, Edward Martin, Victor Hauger, Clarence Friend, Frank Weaver, Clint Shaffer, Dale Strawser, Elwood Cannon, Joe Sedrick, Paul Morgan and Donald Poland.

Each defendant has posted bond of $1,000. The charges against the pickets is injuries and defacement of the Kray Coal Company bus. Sedrick was previously identified by Sheriff J. H. Benson as a U.M.W. representative of Grant Town.

Benson said that four other pickets were arrested yesterday for spreading nails and tacks along the road between State Route 26 and 50 near Tunnelton. The road is used by workers going to and from work at a Tunnelton Cooperative Mine. These four were released on $500 bond and will also appear for hearing at the magistrate's office.

According to Sheriff Benson there have been between 35 and 40 arrests made since the flareup began about a month ago between union pickets and non-union workers in the Preston County coal fields.

There was little violence reported yesterday on the coal front. About 100 to 150 pickets were out again during the morning with state police nearby to keep order. One picket is said to have tossed a stone at a passing truck but police immediately placed him in a squad car for safe keeping. The pickets broke up around noon after which the 11 warrants were sworn out for the arrest of those involved in Wednesday's stoning.

Jury Service For Women Is Asked By Kimble

Plan Is Subject To Referendum

A bill to provide that women may serve on juries in Allegany County, subject to a referendum, was introduced yesterday by Senator Robert B. Kimble.

The measure, SB229, was referred to the Judiciary committee.

The bill is one of two items of legislation being asked by women's groups of this county.

Cards were recently sent out by the Civic Group of the Woman's Civic Club asking groups throughout the county to discuss action on jury service for women and the appointment of a woman on the county school board.

A meeting has been called for Friday, March 2, at 3 p.m. in the Council Chamber of City Hall to discuss the legislative program.

Plans for the legislation have been endorsements of the American Association of University Women, Business and Professional Women's Club, the Democratic Women's Club and the B. and O. Ladies CTP.

The GOP Women's Club will discuss the program at its meeting March 1.

Petitions are being signed, addressed both to the Allegany County Delegation and Senator Kimble asking that a bill be drawn up to legalize jury service for women in Allegany County.

Informed sources said plans being made for such a bill did not include a referendum, which would defer the effective date for several years.

Delegate Fred B. Driscoll advised yesterday that House Bill 221, setting present pay of city employes as the minimum, was sponsored by the entire Allegany County Delegation.

County Industrial Committee Gets Progress Report From Wood

Says Eight Contacts Showing Interest

Richardson Wood, industrial consultant for the Allegany County Industrial Promotion Committee, made a report on his activities during the six-month term ending February 15 at a meeting of the committee in the employment office, 301 South Mechanic Street Wednesday night.

Wood reported on the so-called "pilot operation" he has conducted during his term. The operation consisted of an effort to interest manufacturing companies to locate in this area, and was the forerunner of a major, three-year plan to be undertaken if the pilot operation proves successful.

Interest Shown

The consultant reported that plans for the location of the Berkowitz pajama factory in Frostburg were well under way and he is currently working on 15 other prospects, eight which are definitely interested in locating in this area. Those interested represent a variety of industrial operations, Wood said. He also mentioned that a large number of firms had been contacted, but many had not shown an inclination to build here.

In the course of the meeting the problem of public financing of industrial promotion was raised. Wood's reaction to public financing of such projects was favorable. He said that many communities will probably have to undertake financing plans in order to further industrial development.

Hancock Man Loses Only One Day In 25 Years At Celanese

Emory McClung Booth, machinist in textile engineering at the Celanese Corporation was presented with a pocket watch yesterday by H. C. Givens, plant manager for twenty-five years service with the firm.

He was also presented a certificate and twenty-five year emblem by W. J. Elvin, plant engineer.

In accepting the awards the sixty-four year old Hancock resident estimated that he traveled about twenty-five thousand miles a year to and from work. He said he put over 300,000 miles on his 1939 Buick and decided it was time for a new motor.

Booth worked for eleven years with the Southern Pipe Line Company at State Line, Pa. before he came to the Celanese. After learning his trade at the Pennsylvania Pipe Company, he became an employ at the Celanese, February 22, 1926.

He accounts for only one day's loss at work and that was last December 11 when a trailer truck slid backward into his car while he was enroute to Cumberland.

Booth who was born and raised in Hancock lived on a farm on Town Hill until six months ago when he moved into Hancock.

He is an honorary member of the Cumberland Vets Club; I.O.O.F. Local 601, Warfordsburg, Pa: Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles; and is the oldest member of the Hancock Band in age and membership.

$95,000 Needed In Civil Defense Work In County

Estimates Are Sent To Delegate Driscoll

Civil Defense officials here have notified state officials that some $95,000 will be needed to meet the principal Civil Defense needs of Allegany County.

Arthur B. Gibson, Civil Defense director for Cumberland, submitted the above estimate at the request of Delegate Fred B. Driscoll, a member of the House Civil Defense committee.

The estimate includes the cost of equipment for fire fighting, communications, emergency lighting and warning facilities for the county.

The list of needed materials includes 28,000 feet of 2½ inch fire hose at a total cost of some $56,000.

Another 14,000 feet of 1½ inch fire hose, at a cost of $15,000 is included.

Fifteen portable pumping units, at a cost of $6,000 have been included.

For communications, officials estimate 10 mobile radio units, costing about $3,000 will be needed.

Several portable generators, which can be placed in immediate use in case of power failure, have been included.

Sirens, to be placed in strategic spots to warn of air attacks or other civil emergencies, would cost another $5,000.

The hose estimates includes 6,000 feet of hose to outfit additional fire fighting units in Cumberland.

Auditor Reports Balance Of $672

The City Recreation Department reported yesterday that receipts forthcoming within the next few months should enable it to meet its budget in spite of the expenditures of nearly $20,000 on a playing field and playground.

The January 31 financial report issued yesterday by Arthur B. Gibson, city auditor, showed the department has a balance of only $672.59 of its $39,000 appropriation, which must run the department until the end of June.

Salaries To Be Met

Edmund F. Hoey, recreation director, said that all is in readiness for the opening of the spring playing season June 25 and that salaries and office expenses will be the only obligation which must be met.

These needs, he added, should be met through sale of fence advertising at the Penn Avenue baseball field, advance sales of season tickets and gate receipts from May and June softball and baseball games.

Receipts from the Constitution Park swimming pool, he added, are expected to cover the full operation of that recreation center.

Hoey said the department has been running a shortage for several months due to extensive work on the Penn Avenue ball park.

Spent $18,000 On Park

All of the expenditures for the field, totaling some $18,000, have been met from the department's current budget, he said, and do not represent the use of a cent of the $150,000 recreation bond issue passed in 1946.

The $18,000 has been sufficient to put the field in playing condition only. Plans are being made to add dressing and shower rooms and to provide top soil so the field can be seeded. Another 1,200 bleachers will be added this year.

During six weeks of operation in 1950, the department received $800 fence advertising fees and some $2,950 from gate receipts. He said advertising fees are expected to reach $1,000 this year, with gate receipts should add another $6-8,000.

Eventually, the receipts from this field will be used to build anoher similar play center, Hoey said, so that the program will be self liquidating.

It will take time to place the program on a self-sustaining position, but it can be one eventually, Hoey said.

Plan Additional Areas

The department hopes to use the $150,000 bond issue as a rotating fund to provide the city with top notch facilities.

The year's appropriations also include $1,000 to purchase ground for

Industrial Coal Price Increase Expected Here

Dealers Say Trend Not Yet General

The price of industrial coal has increased slightly in some mines in the Tri-State Area but domestic coal prices have remained stable, local dealers and purchasers revealed yesterday.

Mine operators were permitted to increase the price of a ton of coal after coal miners were given a wage hike of $1.60 per day recently but increases have varied and are not stable generally it was reported.

One large coal dealer in Cumberland said prices vary quite a bit now but that nothing definite has come about. Small operators are fighting to remain in business and industrial coal prices have fluctuated some, the dealer said, but the domestic price has remained unchanged. This is primarily because of coal supplied by small operators and family affairs.

The dealer expected a hike of from 20 cents to 45 cents in the near future in industrial coal.

Loyd F. Keller, purchasing agent of Kelly-Springfield Tire Company related that some mines have upped the price of industrial coal but the increase is not general. Mine owners and operators apparently are still endeavoring to find out how much the wage increase will affect costs before making a move, he said.

The price probably will depend on the demand for coal, Keller stated, remarking that if the price goes too high the industrial plants of the area might go outside the immediate area in an effort to get lower priced coal. He expects a general rise in the price of industrial coal of about 25 cents in the near future but thought domestic coal prices might remain stable.

Local 26 Opens Contract Talks

Contract negotiations between Local 26, Rubber Workers Union (CIO) and the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company opened here yesterday.

Ralph C. Beard, vice president of the union, said the meeting was a preliminary one, devoted chiefly to setting up a schedule for the opening of actual negotiations.

The pact talks will get under way at meetings set Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 9:30 a. m. at the tire plant.

The union is seeking changes in working conditions, seniority and hours of work in the pact which expires on April 1. All issues except pay may be discussed.

Other union negotiators are Leo Barkman, for maintenance workers, and Earl Johnson, for the production units.

Miss Cumberland Of 1950 Says Winning Beauty Pageant Title Aided Her Career

Cites Value Of Scholarship And Other Awards Offered

By JOHN KNOWLTON
News Staff Writer

"The scholarship which is enabling me to take this secretarial course has been my most valuable gift," Miss Barbara Lee Fulton said yesterday as she paused between school classes to relate some of her experiences as "Miss Cumberland of 1950."

The tall, willowy, hazel-eyed beauty, captured the title in competition against seven other girls in a Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce-sponsored contest at Fort Hill High School June 12, 1950 and represented the city in the state finals at Baltimore June 24, 1950.

Although she didn't win the "Miss Maryland" contest which would have enabled her to go to Atlantic City for the "Miss America" competition, Barbara says she has never regretted for a moment the day she entered the contest.

Didn't Enter At First

"I didn't enter until I had learned of the advantages offered the contestants," she reminisced, "but I would do it again if the opportunity could present itself."

"Bobby" as she is more affectionately known to her many friends is now studying a secretarial course in Catherman's Business School, Baltimore Street, and her teachers all regard her an excellent student and pleasant, charming girl.

"I was going to study to be a teacher and had completed all my plans, even reserving a room, to enter college last fall but the scholarship which was awarded me after winning the Miss Cumberland title changed all my plans," the attractive Allegany High School graduate related.

At first she did not intend to use the scholarship but was persuaded to do so at the bequest of her many friends.

"I had my choice of any course with my scholarship," Barbara related, "but I think secretarial training is most essential and helpful.

Work To Begin On Frederick Street Flood Project Mar. 5

Valley Street Crews Work 24-Hour Days

Army engineers reported yesterday that crews are working 24 hours a day to complete work on the Valley Street portion of the Cumberland-Ridgeley flood control project and indications now point to the beginning of work on Frederick Street about March 5.

With the advent of spring engineers believe excavations will be filled rapidly and work speeded up considerably as the contractors put more crews to work.

J. C. Malloy, representative of the Thomas Earle and Son, Contractors, of Philadelphia, Pa., has been conferring with officials here regarding a sub-contract to George and Lynch for the Frederick Street portion of the project. The Philadelphia company probably will have its equipment on hand to begin work about March 5, Thomas E. Dickson, project engineer said yesterday.

Excavations will be made for a pressure conduit, six feet by six feet, which will empty into Wills Creek at Bedford and North Mechanic Streets. The conduit will be placed between the former Fulton Myers American Legion Post home and 104 North Mechanic, turn down Mechanic toward Baltimore Street to Frederick then up Frederick Street to Henderson Avenue with a branch turning off at Henry Street.

A 52-inch storm sewer at Bedford Street will be re-routed beside the conduit to empty into the creek, Dickson said.

The excavation will cross under the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks at Frederick and Henderson Avenue and the temporary tressle bridge now in use at Valley Street will be moved to the crossing to permit train traffic to be uninterrupted during the flood project work, Dickson noted.

Two large catch basins will be placed on either side of Henderson Avenue at the crossing, extending four feet into the roadway with grating on top, the engineer related, and a regulating chamber will be built there to separate storm sewers and sanitary sewage lines.

The Henry Street conduit will continue to the spur railroad track at George Street with another regulating chamber to be placed in the vicinity of the B & O freight station and the ice plant. Tunneling and laying of pipe has already been completed under the Louis Stein Funeral Home on this portion of the project, Dickson related.

ALLIES HIT REDS' MAIN DEFENSES

Johnston Will Decide Wage Formula

Labor 'Gripes' Are Heard By ESA Director

Senators Would Propose Hearings

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston asserted today he would shatter the deadlock over a wage formula for the immediate emergency without further notice to labor leaders.

Concluding a three-hour meeting with the four chiefs of the United Labor Policy Committee, Johnston said he had heard "all their gripes" and had learned a lot.

But he told reporters he would make his own decision, notify Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson what it was, and then announce it. But he made it clear that under the Defense Mobilization Act he considers he is the one to settle the impasse.

Would Propose Hearings

Meanwhile, two senators offered to propose public hearings if it would help solve a dispute in which labor leaders have challenged the handling of the mobilization program as unfair.

Chairman Murray (D-Mont.) of the Senate Labor Committee and Chairman Humphrey (D-Minn.) of the Senate Labor Committee and Chairman Humphrey (D-Minn.) of the subcommittee on labor-management relations, said in a joint statement that the situation threatened the stabilization already achieved in such relations during the emergency.

The snarl followed the resignation of the three labor members of the Wage Stabilization Board, acting on orders of the ULPC last Thursday night, after the public and industry members adopted a formula limiting wage increases to 10 per cent above the Jan. 15, 1950, levels.

That formula is subject to Johnston's approval, modification, or rejection.

There was a possibility the stabilizer would assemble another Wage Stabilization Board and ask it to take another look at the formula, so that it would not be necessary for him to impose a one-man decision controlling wages of millions of American workers.

Assembles Information

He said he was assembling "technical information" on wages and prices in the next day or so, indicating that his decision would be delayed at least for the balance of this week.

The labor leaders will meet tomorrow morning to discuss their several conferences with Johnston, President Truman, and White House Special Counsel Charles S. Murphy.

The policy committee also will discuss possible action on a motion by Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers proposing that the AFL, CIO and railroad unions in the ULPC withdraw their participation entirely from the mobilization program.

Maryland Governor Unwraps "Greenbag"

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 22 (AP)—Gov. McKeldin unwrapped his "greenbag" of nominations to hundreds of public offices today and won immediate confirmation for one of his major choices.

Then Senate approved A. Earl Shipley, Westminister attorney and former state senator from Carroll County, as director of parole and probation.

Shipley succeeds F. Murray Benson, a Democrat, as head of the office which weighs all bids for freedom from state penal institutions.

As a former senator, Shipley was eligible for immediate consideration. His confirmation was unanimous, Chairman Sybert (D-Howard) of the Committee on Executive Nominations reported.

Besides Shipley McKeldin nominated:

1. Mayor Elmer F. Munshower of Frederick as superintendent of state police, to succeed Col. Carey Jarman.

Stockbridge Named

2. Enos Stockbridge of Baltimore County as director of the Department of Correction, to succeed Reuben Oppenheimer.

3. Dr. Oliver Collins, Baltimore pastor, to the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, to serve the unexpired term of William Mason Shehan, now senator from Talbot County.

4 John L. Estes, Cumberland labor leader, to the Employment Security Board, to succeed Joseph P. McCurdy.

As a whole, the list fulfilled Republican ambitions for a strong voice in the state and many localities which had been denied for the 14 years in which the party lacked the appointive power of a governor.

If McKeldin's nominees are eventually confirmed by the Senate, Republicans will hold a majority for the first time in years on the Tidewater Fisheries Commission. And for as long as the oldest department employe could recall, none of the three commissioners would be associated with the seafood industry.

Munshower Must Resign

In addition to Dr. Collins, the Governor nominated John P. Tawes of Crisfield to replace Allen A. Sollers, another Republican whose six-year term expires in June. Dr. Collins, who would serve for two years, is pastor of the First Methodist Church in Baltimore. Tawes, nominated to a full six-year term, is an automobile dealer.

Munshower will have to resign as mayor of Frederick to become state police chief. An Army colonel who served as superintendent for more than two years under the late Gov. Harry W. Nice, Munshower was reluctant to give up his municipal office. He accepted only after "I insisted that I wanted and needed him," McKeldin said.

Senators Report Alaska Defense Would Halt Reds

Could Invade But Not Capture Vital Areas

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP) — Russia can invade Alaska and the Aleutian islands because some areas must be left undefended on the ground, a Senate subcommittee said today.

But the Reds cannot capture the critical areas of the vital northern territory.

Reaching this conclusion, the senators lauded the "present state of alertness and vigilance" of American forces on guard against a surprise onslaught.

With such a defense, the group said, "there can be no Pearl Harbor in Alaska."

Nevertheless "it appears that additional combat troops and possible additional aviation is required," the senators said.

They spoke sharply of the nation's "austerity" allotment of troops for the territory. They said that despite "changing conditions throughout the world" there had been no upward "revaluation" in the Alaskan defense forces.

There is much lacking in the defense program there, according to the report made by the Senate Armed Services Preparedness Subcommittee, based on a study by a three-man task force. This inquiry panel was headed by Sen. Hunt (D-Wyo) and included Morse (R-Ore) and Saltonstall (R-Mass).

K-F Told Right Man Could Aid In Getting Loan

Official Assumed Boyle Was The Man

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—An executive of Kaiser-Frazer Corp., borrowers of $69,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, told Senate investigators today his firm had been tipped it could get better terms on its loans by hiring the right man to handle them.

The story came from Chad Calhoun, vice president of the automobile company, testifying at a hearing called by a Senate Banking sub-committee which has charged that political favoritism and influence has affected the RFC's landing policy.

But who the right man might be was not established clearly at today's hearing.

Calhoun said that he understood from a conversation with Edgar Kaiser, president of his company, that the man to employ was William M. Boyle Jr., Kansas City, Democratic national chairman.

RFC Director Helped Friend

However, Calhoun based his assumption on a report of a conference Kaiser had with another Detroit industrialist, Rex Jacobs, in December, 1949.

Jacobs testified later that he did not recall that Boyle's name was mentioned in his conversation with Kaiser. But he said the name of Max Siskind, a former law partner of Boyle's, was mentioned as a man who might be helpful to Kaiser-Frazer. He suggested that might have led to an impression that he was recommending Boyle.

Kaiser himself did not mention Boyle's name when he testified. He remarked that Calhoun "probably drew certain conclusions" after he had talked with him and prepared a memorandum of the conversation.

The subcommittee's inquiry helped an old friend of his obtain a $300,000 RFC loan by personally assigning the RFC examiner who made the recommendations on the application.

"Unusual" Procedure

The friend is C. Edward Rowe, principal owner of the Harrington and Richardson Arms Company of Worcester, Mass. Rowe subsequently joined the RFC directorate and is now vice chairman of the board.

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill) asked Willett if he had not departed from regular procedure in personally assigning the examiner.

"Yes sir, it is very unusual," Willett said, "x x x I did it as a personal favor to Judge Rowe. Judge Rowe has been a personal friend of mine for years."

The loan was made to Harrington and Richardson last April 10. Willett said it was a good loan and already had been repaid in full.

Battle Raging Near Road Hub Of Hoengsong

U. N. Drive Slowed After 12-Mile Gain

TOKYO, Friday, Feb. 23 (AP)— A 100,000-man Allied offensive last night hit the main Chinese Red defense line in Central Korea and fierce fighting broke out.

Earlier the six-nation Allied forces had rolled ahead up to 12 miles at some points against little resistance.

The enemy's main defenses were found around the road hub of Hoengsong. One American force drove to the town's southwest edge, the U. S. Eighth Army's communique said.

A central front dispatch reported stiff enemy resistance against the U. S. Ninth Corps along a line east and west of Hoengsong.

The road hub, 10 miles north of Wonju, is a key objective of the Allies' "Operation Killer" because an estimated 15,000 Chinese are believed to be committed there under orders to hold or die.

West of Hoengsong, other Allied troops crossed the vital lateral supply road from Hongchon to Seoul at several points. Hongchon is 15 miles northwest of Hoengsong, and is an enemy massing point.

Fighting Near Chipyong

Two of the four U. S. divisions in the offensive, which opened Wednesday along a 55-mile front, battled in the Hoengsong area.

There was more heavy fighting northwest of Chipyong, the central front town saved last week by an encircled French and American combat team. Chipyong is 20 miles west of Hoengsong.

The Eighth Army communique reported "a heavy concentration" of enemy troops near Chipyong.

Air observers said there also were big enemy concentrations 10 miles west of Wonju and about an equal distance southeast of Chipyong.

The Allied troops, tanks and self-propelled guns moved along muddy roads or over rain-drenched mountains.

An Eight Army briefing officer said that despite the fighting there were signs that the main enemy forces still were withdrawing.

South Koreans of the U. S. 10th Corps engaged in a six-hour battle last night about 15 miles southeast of Hoengsong.

Allies Drive On Pyongchang

Farther east, American infantrymen and tanks today drove close to Pyongchang, a war-wrecked town which air observers earlier reported was being abandoned by the Reds. Pyongchang, 25 miles southeast of Hoengsong, is on the eastern flank of the 55-mile-long central front drive.

"Operation Killer" sent an estimated 60,000 American troops slogging northward through the Korean mud, together with Allied forces from Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

The first two days of the renewed U. N. attacks cost the Reds more than 2,000 casualties, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters announced.

The Eighth Army announced that Communist casualties Wednesday were 1,718 dead, wounded or captured in ground action alone. This brought the cumulative total of Red casualties from Jan. 25 through Feb. 21 to a staggering 117,575 through ground action alone.

Spaatz Urges U. S. Air Force Of 250 Groups

Whitehead Calls For More Bombers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP) — A huge American air force of 250 groups should be built up quickly Gen. Carl (Tooey) Spaatz said today, because if war comes Russia "must be strangled by air."

Such a force would be more than twice the size of the 95-100 groups now being formed. It would be about the number the United States had in World War 11, but the planes would be more powerful.

Spaatz, retired Air Force chief of staff and famous World War II leader, testified to the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee, studying the subject of troops for Europe and related issues.

Any war with Russia, he testified, would be won by air power, with the support of the Army and Navy, rather than by surface forces with the backing of air power. He said the present Air Force goal is "too low and the pace is too slow."

However, he backed the administration plan to bolster the defenses of Western Europe by sending four divisions of ground troops to join the two now there.

Spaatz said he thought the four divisions might produce the courage to build up strength over the next four of five years to a point where Western Europe ground and air forces would more nearly approximate the forces Russia now has.

He made it plain that he considered the main function of ground troops in Europe would be to guard U.S. air bases "so we can bring the mass of air power against the heart of Russia."

In addition to Spaatz, two other air generals took the witness chair, testifying that long-range bombers should be given priority in the nation's defense buildup because "they are the only thing that can deliver a knockout blow to Russia."

Lt. Gen. Ennis Whitehead, chief of the Air Defense Command, told senators that both the long-range striking arm and this country's own aerial defense forces need to be "beefed up."

Whitehead joined with Lt. Gen. Harold George, retired, former assistant chief of staff for war plans, in testifying before the committee.

Cars To Be Chained Until Fines Paid

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Feb. 22 (AP)—The old hitching post, or something akin to it, is scheduled for a comeback in Grand Island.

Hereafter, the City Council decided, cars found in the post-office service zone will be chained to rings anchored in the curbing and held until payment is made of a $2 impounding fee and a $1 parking fine.

Compromise Bill To Lower Draft Age Introduced

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP) — Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee today introduced a compromise bill calling for drafting boys of 18½ years. It bears tentative committee sanction.

However, another round of hearings on the bitterly debated subject opens up Monday. Final committee action is expected early next month. The present draft law expires in July.

The bill is designed to prevent any youth being sent into combat or overseas before his 19th birthday. It provides four months basic training. Leave and travel time is presumed to occupy the other two months.

Like a bill approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee and awaiting action in the Senate, the proposed House measure would stretch the present period of draft service from 21 to 26 months.

The Senate bill permits induction of youths of 18, provided all available young men in the 19 through 25 years bracket are called first.

Both bills differ from the original Pentagon proposal which called for lowering the draft age to 18, without restrictions, and providing for a system of universal training.

The problem of lowering the draft age has received gingerly handling by the legislators. Their mail has been flooded with angry protests. The floor debate will reflect this, but leaders expect some kind of 18-year-old draft to be approved.

Churchill Wants Briton To Head Pact Sea Forces

Conservative Leader Stirs Commons Storm

LONDON, Feb. 22 (AP) — Winston Churchill stirred the House of Commons today by charging Britain had been "brushed out of the way" with the nomination of an American admiral to command Atlantic pact sea forces.

The Conservative leader asked Prime Minister Attlee indignantly: "Was there not a British admiral capable of discharging these functions?"

Churchill's sharp questioning of Attlee roused the house to fever pitch. Other Conservatives and some Laborite members shouted queries across the chamber, cheered and booed.

Fechteler Is Nominee

The Prime Minister declined to disclose the man named, but it has been known here for some time that Adm. William N. Fechteler, now commander-in-chief of the U. S. Atlantic Fleet with headquarters in Norfolk, Va., is the nominee.

Churchill was Britain's first lord of the Admiralty at the outset of both world wars. Although he assured the house of his friendly feelings toward the United States, he could not resist the opportunity to compare the anti-submarine records of the British and American navies.

Will Reconsider Position

"It was possible not very long ago for one country to sink 525 German U-boats, compared to 174 by the United States," he said.

Obviously taken back by the storm his announcement created, Attlee finally had to promise Britain's position with regard to Fechteler's appointment would be reconsidered.

Churchill, at the top of his form, stormed that the Labor Government had allowed Britain to be treated like a stepchild.

Quadruped Chick

Britain Opposes N. Korean Drive

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—Britain is reported to have told the United States that it opposes any attempt by United Nations forces to reconquer North Korea.

But the British government, in expressing this view, has taken what amounts to a flexible position regarding the crossing of the 38th parallel.

Its views on the parallel may be roughly summarized this way:

The commander on the scene must have discretion to send troops across it as the military situation warrants. The line must not be regarded as one that cannot be crossed at all. It is conceivable that military requirements might be such as to cause a fixed front in some sectors would be north of the parallel.

The important consideration in the British view, informed diplomats said, is that United Nations forces should not again undertake a major operation designed for the conquest of all North Korea up to the Manchurian border. This would require troop commitments which the British with their emphasis on Western Europe obviously oppose and it would also, in their view, tend to lessen the chances for a negotiated settlement which they are anxious to get.

Member Of Pillsbury Family, Two Others Killed In Plane Crash

PAXTON, Neb., Feb. 22 (AP)—A member of the Pillsbury Milling Company family and two other prominent Minnesotans were killed today in a plane crash here.

The victims:

Edmund P. Pillsbury, 37, Minneapolis, vice president of Pillsbury Mills, Inc.

Alfred D. Lindley, 47, Minneapolis attorney, former Olympic skier and recently an unsuccessful Republican candidate for Congress from Minnesota's Fifth District.

Dexter L. Andrews, 38 secretary and director of the Earl Partridge Co., general merchandise wholesale firm at Minneapolis.

The men were en route from Minneapolis to Aspen, Colo., to ski.

Canadians See First Korean War Action

WEST-CENTRAL FRONT, Korea, Feb. 22 (AP) — Canadian troops, leading British commonwealth forces in a northeasterly wheeling movement, saw their first action of the Korean war today.

The Princess Pats fought their way through an estimated enemy company.

Tramping in rain-sodden clothing over slippery mountain passes, the Canadians jumped off at 8 a. m. and by 5:45 p. m. they were firmly entrenched after having reached their objective.

Posthumous Caesarian Operation Saves Baby

NASHVILLE, Ill., Feb. 22 (AP) — An expectant mother died today in an ambulance bound for a hospital 27 miles away and the family doctor ordered the ambulance turned back to his office, where the baby was saved.

A six-pound, nine-ounce boy, one month premature, was delivered in the posthumous Caesarian operation. It was the second child for the woman, Mrs. Mabel Haake, 33, Nashville. Her husband, Paul Haake, is employed by a coal mine shovel firm.

Lost Trio Guests Of Mo. Governor

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 22 (AP)—Three strangers appeared at the door of the Governor's manson last night.

The doorman thought they were members of the Legislature and let them in.

The strangers thought they were in a hotel and inquired about the possibilities of something to eat soon.

They wound up as guests of Gov. Forrest Smith at turkey dinner.

What did the guests, identified only as farm machinery salesmen, have to say?

"Well," commented the Governor, "they advised me to buy farm machinery while I still can get it."

Atomic Airplane Is Step Nearer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—New strides toward development of the first atom-powered airplane—a craft that might fly 80 times around the world on one pound of fuel—were disclosed today.

Climaxing four years of intensive research, the Air Force and the Atomic Energy Commission announced that the first phase in the program to produce an atomic plane has now been completed.

This was the top-secret "NEPA" project. The initials stand for "Nuclear energy for propulsion of aircraft."

Informants said the completion of "NEPA" marks the transition from slide-rule theory to the drafting board where blueprints will be drawn for construction of an experimental model of the atom-powered airplane engine.

Until now, the work has centered almost entirely on mathematical computations and theoretical possibilities.

Police, Court Should Know "Clothes Make The Man"

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 22 (AP)—Police and municipal court know well today that "clothes make the man."

They should. Police booked a woman as a man, questioned her as a man, locked her up in the men's section of the city jail and municipal court sentenced her as a man—to the workhouse, an all male institution.

It wasn't until she reached the workhouse and was ordered, along with other new arrivals, to "shower down," that officials returned to the proper gender. The "he" protested she was a "she."

And all the time the principal in the case, Carrie Bliss, 31, Pennington, Minn., made no attempt to hide her sex. A first offender, Carrie just wasn't acquainted with police procedure.

The hitch came because of Carrie's appearance. Everyone assumed she was a man because she wore blue trousers, a white shirt and mackinaw jacket, had a short, mannish haircut and a deep tan. Her hands were work-hardened.

Carrie explained she always wears men's clothes, because she does farm work and during World War II was a welder in Seattle ship yards.

Carrie was arrested Monday for writing two bad checks totaling $26.98.

The nature of her ailment was not disclosed. A gynecologist attended her.

Presidential Tenure Amendment Needs 3 More States' Approval

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP) — Approval of only three more states is needed to limit presidents to two elective terms in the White House. It may come within the next few weeks.

The Texas Legislature, the 33rd state to do so, completed ratification today of the 22nd Amendment to the U. S. Constitution. The amendment limits presidential tenure to 10 years.

Ratification by three-fourths of the states—36—is required.

Provisions of the amendment do not apply to President Truman. He was specifically exempted by the Congress.

New Hormone Grows Hair On Bald Pates In 5 Weeks

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP)—A new hormone has grown hair on two men who had been bald for five years, it was reported here today.

Starting five weeks ago, the hormone was rubbed on in a cream, daily for several days, and then intermittently.

Today, it was said, each man has hair about an inch long on the bald area—not fuzz but apparently normal hair—with a total of about 20,000 hairs on each head and signs that more may come. This count is about one-sixth of the normal amount for an average young man.

The report on the hormone's work was made at a news conference by Albert Roberts, president of the United Research Laboratories, Philadelphia. This is a family company, established about 10 years ago.

An earlier report was made in Philadelphia about two months ago, telling of the discovery of the new hormone and effects on white rats.

Roberts said today that two other research institutions are experimenting with the hormone on humans. He said these other experiments are favorable but did not further identify them.

Roberts reported that he discovered the hormone while extracting the new hormone, ACTH, about two years ago.

Effect Of Ceilings On Used Cars Won't Be Seriously Felt At Once

By DAVID J. WILKIE

DETROIT—(AP)—Ceilings on used car prices have been expected in automotive trade quarters for several weeks.

Their effect on used car dealers and individual car buyers and sellers probably will not be seriously felt for another couple of months when used car buying normally moves upward.

Some trade sources said the new ceilings imposed by the government probably will enable used car dealers to advertise their cars "at below ceiling prices." Most used car sales right now, they added, are being made at under the top figures in the guide books.

Trade quarters do not deny some new cars have been put on sale in used car lots at prices higher than the retail delivered listing. They do question, however, that the practice has been as widespread as indicated in the Office of Price Stabilization statement.

Most such vehicles, trade authorities add, have come from individuals rather than from franchised dealers. They explained that since new car prices were rolled back the factories have done more than the usual amount of policing of retail trade practices.

No passenger cars were made during the last war—at least not from February 1942 until July 1945—so none of them were sold on the used car lots. Bona fide used cars were under rigid price ceilings during that time also.

However, immediately following the war, after price ceilings were lifted, a lot of new cars appeared on the used car lots and brought fancy prices. The industry, short of materials and plagued by labor disputes, had trouble getting into volume production.

That automatically stepped up the demand for used cars, too, and late prewar models in many instances brought prices higher than the original 1940 or 1941 listing. Some car owners, with influential dealer connections, were able to obtain delivery of two, three and more new cars in one year—and sell them at premium prices.

The present situation doesn't nearly approach that of the immediate postwar days, auto trade analysts say. They point out that 6,326,438 new cars were sold at retail last year and that dealers now have on hand or en route from the factories about 435,000 new vehicles. Only the fear of a car shortage later this year, they say, is stimulating demand at this time.

Kelly Workers To Be Furloughed

Federal orders curbing production of white sidewall tires will take its toll of Kelly Springfield Tire Company employes this week.

Plant officials said 35 or 40 employes will be furloughed.

The federal ban on white sidewalls was issued Saturday and went into effect Monday. The government said the action would save about ten per cent of the supply of natural rubber which must be used in the white sidewall. The order should not cut down the amount of regular tires available to consumers, it was added.

At the Celanese plant, Harrison C. Givens, Jr., said yesterday that CA Department production went back to normal last week. Yarn production he said is being increased when possible but is still below normal.

Both the Kelly and Celanese were hit by the recent strike of railroad switchmen which tied up raw materials.

Osage Indians Bury Their Chief In Colorful Rites

HOMINY, Okla.—(AP)—Oklahoma's oil-rich Osage Indians this week buried their chief in colorful tribal rites.

John Oberly, 71, died of a heart attack Sunday after serving as leader of the tribe for only two years.

The burial, in conformance with the Indian's Peyote religion, was held at high noon. Oberly's body, clothed in purple shirt, black and red blanket, buckskin leggings and moccasins, was laid so it faces to the east and the rising sun.

The venerable chieftain's hair was carefully braided and the face painted with zig-zagged white, red and black lines on cheek-bones and forehead.

"We are now orphans," intoned the Rev. George Pitts, who preached the funeral oration. "We are without a leader."

Pitts himself wore his hair in braids. A flowered handkerchief was tied about his neck and a pink-bordered blue blanket hung from his shoulders.

After the services, more than 300 mourners feasted on barbecue steer, chicken and turkey.

Tribesmen said a new chief will be selected by a tribal council in the near future.

A single train long enough to carry a year's output of coal in the United States would stretch six times aound the earth.

The first patent for a refrigerating machine was granted to Dr. John Gorie, Apalachicola, Fla., in 1851.

Young German Anti-Reds Play Daring Underground Game In Russian Sector

By TOM REEDY

BERLIN—(AP)—The Russian zone of Germany is pimpled with daring bands of young anti-Communists playing a reckless game of tag against despotism.

The bands are organized like the old French Maqui which plagued Hitler's occupation chiefs and pecked at Laval's puppet Vichy regime a decade ago.

The young East Germans are set up in cells of three or four. They operate under false names. Few know their comrades by anything except the "cover names." This winter they have distributed a half million leaflets urging the German population to resist Communism and Soviet policies.

They leave their "sign" at times, just to irk the security police. The big "F" for "Freiheit" (freedom) painted on walls has appeared even on Russian troop installations.

The movement, which has its headquarters in West Berlin and in Frankfurt, calls itself the League of German Youth. It claims 25,000 members on both sides of the iron curtain.

East German Communist authorities acknowledge existance of the movement. They claim, however, that the young opponents of their regime are former Hitler Jugend or SS officers trying to "revive fascism."

The East Berlin press recently charged the anti-Red underground was headquartered in a house near the Berlin residence of U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy.

The report was almost accurate but missed the location by about two city blocks. Nevertheless, the young league officers moved to a new spot quickly for safety's sake.

A 22-year-old leader of the league, whose parents still live in the Russian zone, said in an interview:

"We want West German youth to see Communist terror in the Soviet zone as it is. We have organized ourselves in such a way that any East German youth who wants to oppose dictatorship knows he has some support."

A so-called youth parliament held in West Berlin two months ago touched off the movement. The leader said 60 delegates represented the Soviet zone and upon their return to their homes created the "cells" for the underground.

The biggest weapons the 60 carried back, he said, were the knowledge delegates were informed of actual political conditions in the east.

"This chance to compare hits the Communists where they are weakest. If the comparison is made by one German to another, the first German is ready and eager to believe it. They are interested in truth, not propaganda.

"We have comrades in all the bigger communities of the East German republic," the leader said. "They correspond with a cover address in West Berlin and receive information material by courier."

Funds have been provided by German industrialists on a voluntary contribution basis. The leader indicated some of the donors are in East Germany.

The young adventurers are living dangerous existences. The new Soviet zone law to "protect the peace" is the most formidable weapon yet contrived against them. It is so broadly worded that any member of the organization can be indicted immediately as an enemy of the state and is, therefore, subject to long prison sentences or even death.

Hermann Josef Flade, the 18-year-old Dresdener who was sentenced to death for passing leaflets against the Communist elections, is believed an active member of the league. A world protest against the death sentence apparently impressed the East German courts, for they commuted it to 15 years imprisonment.

Tax On A Wife's Salary

Married women without young children are being counted on to relieve much of the manpower shortage in the present defense emergency. Even the wife whose husband gets a good salary could be attracted by the high wages and salaries open to women these days. At the same time, the working wife will keep in mind how much of a cut the federal income tax will take out of her pay envelope or salary check.

Here, for instance, is a wife who takes a job that pays her $67.50 a week. Suppose that her husband earns $5500 a year, that neither of them has any other income or a dependent, and that they file a joint return taking the standard deductions.

Well, the income tax under the new rates proposed by the Administration would be $900 a year if the only family income were the husband's salary. The tax would rise to $1700—$800 ($15.25 a week) more—after the wife takes that job. In other words, the higher tax reduces her $67.50 gross to $52.25 a week, net, as far as the total family income is concerned.

Here is a wife who takes a part-time job at $40 a week. If her husband has an excellent position paying $8900 a year, the income tax under the Administration-proposed rates would be $550 more because of the wife's income. Her $40 a week is reduced to a little less than $30 net. Then if the part-time job develops into a full-time one paying $4000 a year, the additional income tax reduces the $4000 to about $2700, net. And all this takes no account of any state income tax.

Also, the working wife has outlays for transportation, lunch, probably clothing and laundry, perhaps some additional maid service, that she would not have as a stay-at-home wife. So if she decides to take a job in this emergency she will probably be influenced not only by the money but also by the patriotic principle of the thing.

Time For Economy

From the standpoint of consumer income 1950 was the best year in the nation's history. Receipts by individuals from all sources, as reported by the Department of Commerce, rose to the fantastic figure of $223,000,000. This exceeded the previous record set in booming 1948 by $13,000,000,000, and was an increase of $17,000,000,000 over the previous year.

Last year closed with income at a high level, with the figure for the month of December much higher than that for the previous month. Year-end payments of dividends, which reflected high corporate earnings for the year, boosted the total.

However, principal factors in the December increase were wage and salary increases, which were general throughout the nation. Military pay was boosted by the war and the preparedness program. Consumer incomes also include net income from unincorporated business, farming operations, rents, government and private pension receipts, relief payments and other sources.

All this indicates 1950 was an unusually prosperous year for the nation on a dollars-and-cents basis. To be sure, more than $2,000,000,000 of the income reported came from insurance refunds to veterans. Government spending was also a factor.

The unhappy feature of the entire situation is the fact that the total consumer income for the year did not equal the national debt by more than $30,000,000,000. The nation is still solvent, but the time has arrived when there is need for economy in government to keep it that way.

Twisted Thinking

Madame Kusum Nair, head of a publishing house in India, says:

"India is not convinced that the democracies are worth fighting for as against Russia or communism. India does not identify communism with Russian imperialism. The Indian does not believe that every country that goes communist must necessarily become a satellite of Russia or ape Russhia's obvious shortcomings.

"India interprets Red revolutions in Asiatic countries as inevitable national upsurges, mainly agrarian in nature, resulting from and directed against domestic reaction and foreign imperialism. Most Indian intellectuals believe Marxism to be peculiarly suitable to Asiatic conditions."

The belief is widely held in India, the woman leader continues, that the United States is not only helping to bolster old imperialist interests but is evolving a new inmperialism. Donating 2,000,000 tons of wheat to India is a manifestation of this imperialism, no doubt.

After what has happened in China, it is beyond comprehension that anyone can reason as this woman does. Here was a proclaimed "agrarian" revolution. But the Chinese Communists wound up in the arms of Russia. Russia and Red China are working together now to subjugate the remainder of Asia, including India.

If the Indian woman thinks India would be allowed to pursue its own Communist course without Russian overlordship she certainly can't be very smart.

New York Divorce Law

Gov. Dewey of New York has been asked by a committee of the New York City Bar Association to endorse a bill introduced in the state legislature by one of its women members. Her bill calls for a 23-member commission to study and report on the state's divorce law. But the Empire State legislators have backed away from every similar proposal in recent years as though it were the plague.

The only legal ground for absolute divorce in New York is adultery. In almost all the other states additional grounds are desertion or cruelty or conviction of felony or habitual drunkenness. South Carolina, which until 1949 was the only state where divorces were not granted, now sanctions them for adultery, physical cruelty, desertion, or drunkenness.

Collusion in obtaining divorces in New York is admittedly widespread. Past investigations have even revealed professional co-respondents, who for a fee will furnish the make-believe evidence of adultery which is sufficient for many judges as support for a divorce action. The New York "Herald Tribune" recently called the situation an "edifice of sham and racket" and a "scandal exposed to public nausea every few years."

Those who defend the present New York divorce law point out that grounds other than adultery are sufficient for annulment of marriage or for legal separation. The opponents of the law argue that it leads to collusion and fraud also in obtaining annulments.

A Modern Parable

IN A RECENT issue of the Medical Annals of the District of Columbia, there appeared a poem by Dr. Walter Freeman called "Psychological Plagues." These verses tell the story of the Master of Evil and the men of the machine age. The Master of Evil sees that Man is content with his power over all living beings and proceeds to plague him with germs that cause disease. Thru the tree of knowledge Man learns to conquer these "invisible enemies" with the antibiotics and other remedies, improvements in sanitation and the practice of cleanliness.

" . . . And he created machines
Whereby the strength and speed of his limbs were multiplied,
And his eyes and ears made keener;
And he fortified himself against the weather
And secured himself against hunger,
And depended no longer upon the sun alone for light."

• — • — •

Such progress perturbed the Master of Evil, so he called together his three sons, Hurry, Flurry, and Worry. He asked them to suggest measures to defeat Man's advances and "turn his prowess into misery." Hurry had a plan whereby he could make Man hasten to such an extent that he would lose the power of relaxation.

"'Tis well," said the Master of Evil.
"Go thou upon the earth and cause Man to speed and speed
And mayhap some of his best and fastest may kill or maim themselves in accidents.
Pay heed to his brain
That he work it faster and longer.
Let him resume work before digestion begins and before elimination,
That his bowels may be clogged and his body burdened."

Flurry decided that he, too, could vex Man by working thru his intestinal tract and other organs by making his heart beat faster, raising his blood pressure, and twisting his stomach. All this would harden Man's arteries and soften his brain.

• — • — •

Worry was the greatest of all the three sons and the Master of Evil knew it.

"Then said Worry unto him: 'All this of which my brothers have spoken can I do,
And more also in addition.
For I can work upon Man's imagination,
That same power with which he develops his theories and his machines.'"

Worry was an expert in his work. He could make Man suspicious of the actions of his friends, his family, and his wife. Moreover, he could cause him to fear to make decisions, to brood over mistakes, and make him lose sleep. As a result of the spade work of Hurry, Flurry, and Worry the Master of Evil says:

"Thus shall ye compensate for the lowly esteem in which we are fallen since Man gained power over natural forces.
Himself
He has not learned to control."

PAINFUL BACK

H. W. writes: Are there any exercises that will prevent arthritis of the back from becoming worse?

REPLY

It helps to keep the back muscles strong and in this respect, exercise is of value. But, because the majority of exercises include bending, care must be taken not to overdo or use too much force. This is avoided by increasing exertion gradually. Whenever soreness returns, this means that the gymnastics have been too vigorous. When backache is severe, rest is always preferred to activity.

Fighting Reported Between Chinese Communists And North Koreans; White House Intimates Note Change In Truman; Little Business Gets A Break

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Only fragmentary details have been cabled to the Pentagon, but open fighting has been reported between the Chinese Communists and North Koreans.

Generally these skirmishes have been discounted by American intelligence as accidental. It isn't unusual for trigger-happy troops to open fire on their own men by mistake.

However, at least one incident has been reported as a revolt against the Chinese. This was a shooting scrape between Chinese Communists and North Koreans on January 19 behind enemy lines. The Chinese quickly crushed the revolt after killing 150 North Koreans.

Meanwhile, hints of friction among our enemies continue to filter across the 38th Parallel. American intelligence officers do not believe a serious rift is imminent. However, they have detected a strange inferiority complex toward the Chinese among the Koreans—a combination of fear and hatred.

This is particularly true of South Korean troops, who fight fiercely against the North Koreans but seem to crumble under Chinese attack. Except for the South Korean wing that has advanced up the East Coast under the supporting guns of the U. S. Navy, the South Koreans have not won a major victory against the Chinese.

As a result, Lt. Gen. Matt Ridgway has now assigned South Korean patrols to count the Chinese dead. The psychological effect is to convince them that the Chinese are not supermen. Ridgway is also rotating South Korean units, integrating them with American units for a few weeks. The purpose is to bolster their confidence by experiencing victory over the Chinese.

Tense President

White House insiders are privately concerned by a dramatic change in Harry Truman. Once easygoing and warm-hearted, he is now tense and irritable. They attribute the change to the understandable strain of near war and the terrific burden placed on every President of the United States.

The President always had occasional moods of anger and bitterness. But, according to insiders, these have increased steadily in the past six months.

A visit with Mr. Truman used to be a real treat for a congressman or a visiting Elk. The President would greet him with a warm smile, put him at ease with a friendly comment, and listen sympathetically. Today, however, Mr. Truman is likely to drum the desk impatiently and break into the conversation with a savage denunciation of a real or imagined foe.

Recent visitors have been startled by the vigor and bluntness of his venom at Sen. Bill Fulbright, who hit at White House favoritism in the RFC.

The President's physician, Dr. Wallace Graham, is also worried by Mr. Truman's inability to relax and take those refreshing naps which helped him so much in the past.

Since the attempt on his life Mr. Truman has also shown an understandable reluctance to get out before the public. Congressional leaders and Democratic chieftains have been begging him to stump the country in support of his foreign policy. To this he recently replied:

"It's not up to me to go out. It's the responsibility of the Democratic party and our congressmen. They're laying down on the job and expect me to do everything."

Close friends of the President lay his irritability and tenseness to three factors:

1. The assassination attempt of the two Puerto Rican Nationalists. This left a deep scar. The President often talks among his intimates of this assassination attempt and what he would do if another attempt were made on his life.

2. The recent period of continued American defeats in Korea and the mass evacuation was more trying on Mr. Truman than even he cares to admit. The responsibility for this has weighed heavily on his mind.

During the critical days of the evacuation, the President slept little. On one particular evening he was told that Russian submarines and airplanes might menace most of the U. S. Fleet. Friends say it was at this time that all the pent-up feeling came out in the President's stinging letter to music critic Paul Hume.

3. The loss of Press Secretary Charley Ross was a heavy blow to Mr. Truman. Ross was an old and completely devoted friend who could soothe the President or give him common-sense advice.

This change in the President has convinced Democratic bigwigs that he definitely will not run again, but will retire in 1953.

Army Orders

This writer, who has sometimes griped about Army inefficiency, would like to congratulate Assistant Secretary of the Army Archibald Alexander for his efficient handling of the Army's procurement and munitions program.

Placing orders for armament is not an easy job. Furthermore, Congress was a little slow in allocating money. However, once the Army got its hands on a sizable appropriation, around the first of the year, it placed actual orders for 2½ billion dollars between January 2 and January 23.

Despite this record in January, it will probably be broken in February.

For example, within seven days after January 2, the Army had committed though had not drawn up all the contracts for 3½ billion dollars for heavy vehicles. This is the entire heavy-vehicle program up to now. Of the $12,530,000,000 that the Army has been authorized to spend for "logistical business," the Army has already committed $8,362,000,000.

Alexander should be especially congratulated for insisting that little business get a fair share of the contracts. While the figures are only available through November, at that time 75 per cent of all Army contracts — numerically — had gone to small business—defined as unaffiliated firms with 500 or fewer employes. Of course, only 30 per cent of the actual volume went to little business, because the heavy orders must go to firms big enough to handle them. Yet through subcontracts small business also gets a share of what the Army considers contracts for big business. For example, the average tank manufacturer lets out 3,000 sub-contracts and handles only 15 per cent of the dollar volume himself.

MATTER OF FACT

By JOSEPH And STEWART ALSOP

After The Victory

WASHINGTON.

SOBRIETY is a good mood in a war, and it is too early to ring the church bells because Lieutenant General Ridgway and the UN forces have now inflicted a bloody defeat on the enemy in Korea. Yet it is important to recognize that this defeat of the Communist offensive is a great and stirring event, which may prove to be a major turning point. To understand why, it is only necessary to consider the unhappy position of the Sino-Soviet high command in Korea.

The first thing to understand is that the Communist armies have suffered fearful casualties. The air force habit of counting corpses from the air, and making foolishly detailed claims, has given rise to skepticism on this point. Yet careful testing of the day-to-day claims, both of the air and ground forces, has revealed that current casualty estimates are, if anything, too low. There have by now been many such episodes as that at Namdae, where the air force claimed 75 enemy killed on January 16, and the next day advancing ground forces counted over 800 dead.

All kinds of evidence from within China have also confirmed that combat attrition, cold, hunger and disease are rapidly crippling the Communist armies. As of January 1, the enemy is believed to have had rather more than 450,000 men at the front, with another 450,000 to 500,000 men in reserve or in the original jump-off positions on the Yalu river. This overall total of almost a million men is now thought to be reduced to about 600,000.

Appalling Losses

In short, the enemy has been losing men at the staggering rate of 200,000 a month, and has seen one-third of his whole force melt away in this manner in the short period since the new year. These appalling losses are largely due to the fact that Chinese and North Korean armies have been fighting without tanks, without artillery and without air cover.

The North Koreans must recall with a certain bitterness the fact discovered from government papers captured at Pyongyang—that the Russians made the poverty-stricken North Korean state pay hard cash for every Russian weapon. The Chinese too must be embittered by the very limited help they have received from their Russian senior partners.

The Communist commanders tried to end their terrible losses by launching their great offensive, which was designed decisively to defeat the UN armies. It has failed, with even more terrible losses. There is little reason to believe that another such enemy offensive could succeed.

There are three ways out for the Communist high command, if the foregoing analysis is correct. The first is to attempt a different sort of offensive, using modern weapons to match ours. Tanks and artillery can be secured from Soviet Far Eastern stocks. But the Communists cannot bring them to the battlefield, and they cannot supply them with fuel and ammunition, unless they get air cover.

Two Alternatives

It is highly probable that the Mig jet fighters which have appeared near the Manchurian borders are actually flown by Russians, despite the Chinese markings. This is the most rational explanation of why these planes have not appeared directly over the battlefield. If the enemy's air problem is to be solved, this policy of caution must be changed. The Kremlin must order its Siberian air force to enter the Korean fighting, directly over the battlefield. In short, the first alternative open to the enemy is to

Developments In Moscow Ease Washington Tension

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—There's an easing of tension hereabouts. It isn't due to any one thing but to a number of circumstances—all of them, however, emanating from Moscow.

Beginning with the Stalin interview in Pravda, the world generally became aware that the Soviet Union wasn't thinking in terms of immediate war. But even before this—for several weeks now — officials have been wondering just why the Russian government has been so eager to bring about the four-power conference about which notes have been exchanged.

At first, at the instance of Russia, the scope of the conference was to be narrow. Then the Western Powers to whom the note was sent asked that the subjects be broadened so as to include all the major points in controversy. Instead of balking at this, the Russians have agreed to changes, and now it looks as if the conference will discuss not merely German rearmament but just about everything else that has been causing friction with Russia.

Not For Propaganda

In one breath, on the other hand, the spokesmen of the allied powers say they are glad to have such a meeting and in another they express doubt whether anything constructive can be accomplished. When it is asked what reason they have to explain why the Russians have insisted on the holding of the conference, the usual answer is that the Communists have in mind some sort of propaganda drive.

This explanation does not seem to fit the case. For the Communists have plenty of vehicles for propaganda. They could make speeches at the UN or they could start more propaganda blasts on the peace front and achieve as much publicity.

The real reason might well be sought in some other direction. The Russian dictatorship is fearful of the tension being created in the Western world. News of the program for rearmament of Germany must inevitably percolate through the iron curtain countries. Certainly it is being talked about in the satellite states.

While the "Great Debate" in the United States Senate is primarily domestic in its origin, the fact remains that any public discussion of how many American divisions are to be sent to Europe brings up the question of how many divisions the European countries are about to mobilize. And when there's any mobilization going on, European nations always feel nervous — and dictators particularly so.

The probability is that the Politburo is aware of the apprehensions being stirred among their own people generally as a result of the rearmament planning of the Western allies. To offset this, the Russian government must reassure its people that certainly there is no intention on its part to start a war. This means that more emphasis must be placed by the Russian rulers on the "peaceful intentions" of the Soviet regime, and no better way can be devised than to call a formal conference with the other powers and let the Russian people learn of the efforts to achieve peace which the Moscow envoys will try to make. Anyway, the record will soon show the Russian people, to the satisfaction of the Soviet government, that it is striving for peace.

It could mean that at the forthcoming conference some agreements might be made. Some minor points may be disposed of, and the conference may agree to meet at a later date. This might satisfy Russian public opinion.

May Slow Drastic Controls

The interview Stalin gave to Pravda stresses the belief that, at present, war is inevitable and places the blame for ultimate war on the aggressive groups in the allied countries. But, in the same statement, the Russian chieftain points out that the peoples of the Western countries do not want war either.

Despite the fact that these utterances are regarded as in the nature of propaganda designed perhaps to slow down our rearmament program, there is nevertheless a relaxing of pressure here. This does not imply any expected curtailment of the program as to size or scope, but it does mean that drastic controls may be slower in coming. Nobody is in a hurry, except in a crisis.

There still is a basic desire to impose the armament program on a civilian economy that is to be disturbed as little as possible. There is also talk of such increased capacity by 1952 as to meet both military and civilian needs.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

In The Family

PERHAPS you will permit me to say that mine is a very mixed family. We have in our home several regilions which are taken seriously. On the Passover, my family goes along with me at the traditional seder; and then we all go along with my wife to her Easter service. We maintain our differences, yet live a peaceful and even, if I may say so, a happy family life.

What brings that to mind is that religion plays so real a role in our lives and through it all pass our spiritual mentors, Rabbi Jonah B. Wise of Central Synagogue, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, minister of the Marble Collegiate Church, Bishop William A. Scully of Albany, Dr. Wilbur K. Thomas of the Congregational Church in Otis, Massachusetts. We somehow have accumulated a host of spiritual advisors and each exercises his influence upon some member of the family. Wilbur Thomas, who is a Quaker, has, for instance, made a lasting impression on a young son.

Perhaps we have found in our little family the secret of cooperation without compromise, a recognition that unity is under God but that each must be truly himself. While each moves in his own direction, we all do go together.

So, this week we shall all be celebrating a birthday on my side of the house—that of Rabbi Jonah Wise, who buried my first wife, a Chinese lady of rare nobility of character, and married me to the mistress of our home.

I can only know the quality of a man by his kindliness. I do not like secular or, if you please, civil marriages. I feel that marriages are not just contracts between two persons; that always a third party is present at a marriage and that makes it perfect, for the third party is God.

So when I asked my Rabbi whether he would unite us who are of different faiths, he not only was willing but invented a beautiful ritual for the occasion out of the Book of Ruth. It has not been forgotten by us because it was so graceful an introduction to the creation of a family.

Rabbi Jonah Wise was born in Cincinnati; his father being the distinguished founder of Reformed Judaism in this country, Isaac M. Wise, although an immigrant from Bohemia, loved this country and sought to establish here a ritual and a Jewish way of life that would be a union of the philosophy of his faith and the philosophy of America. He surely believed that so much of the feeling of America came from the Old Testament that we were here spiritually one people.

Out of his labors came the many reformed synagogues and temples throughout this country, the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, the Union prayer book in Hebrew and English, and the Americanization of the ancient ritual—an attempt to hold on to the hard core of tradition yet recognizing that the new world has a way of its own.

One of his daughters married an enthusiastic young newspaperman of Chattanooga, Tennessee, Adolph S. Ochs, who in time purchased the then faltering "New York Times" and made of it the most important newspaper in this country and perhaps in all the world. One of his sons is my rabbi, now celebrating his 70th birthday.

Our synagogue was founded in 1846 and its leader for a quarter of a century has been Jonah Wise, but that has been a small part of his career. For since Hitler came upon the scene, Dr. Wise has devoted himself to the rebuilding of wrecked lives through the United Jewish Appeal of which he is the national chairman. Trip after trip he took to Germany before the war, seeking means to rescue the frightened and hungry and broken in spirit. He risked much on these visits to Hitler's Germany.

Each year, on Thanksgiving Day, our synagogue holds union services with Christ Church Methodist and the Central Presbyterian Church, the three clergymen, Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, Dr. Theodore Cuyler Speers, and Dr. Wise, standing together in a union of gratitude for God's mercy.

Some clergymen are famous for their sermons; some are renowned as scholars; some are wonder-workers in public affairs. Jonah Wise is beloved. Little more can be said of any man who is moving into his seventies after a life of labor for humanity.

Fellowship Of Prayer

THE FELLOWSHIP GIVES

For they gave according to their means.
2 Corinthians 8:3 (R. S. V.).
Read Ephesians 4:28—32

We are continuing this subject one more day because upon the matter of giving depends the work which the Church is set to do. A church is rich, not because it has in it one or two or more rich members upon whom the people place the responsibility of keeping the institution financially solvent, but when every member from the least to the greatest gives according to his means.

The difference between a church moving out into a section of a city where it can build itself out of the community, and a church that builds itself into a run-down section of a city, is the difference between giving and not giving. All too many churches are moving away from their responsibility because changing conditions removed the well-to-do members, leaving behind the rank and file who were never taught how to give of their small means. Many downtown churches would not have folded their tents and moved elsewhere had the men and women of small means been trained in the grace of stewardship. No man is responsible for giving what he does not have, but only for what he has. It is the willingness that counts.

Let Us Pray: O Lord, teach us that we cannot hide in a napkin what we have, without peril to ourselves and to the kingdom of love and righteousness which thy Son came to build. Amen.

Good, Better, Best?

February 22, 1951

To the Editor of The Cumberland News

Sir:

It has come to our attention that, in the January 31, 1951, issue of "The Cumberland News," there appeared on page 14 an article about the Somerset County Maple Festival. In this article, a Mr. Herman E. Basehore, co-chairman of the festival, makes certain questionable claims regarding maple syrup. In his statement, Mr. Basehore seems to have allowed his enthusiasm for Pennsylvania to carry him somewhat beyond the realms of reality.

We appreciate Mr. Basehore's love for the State of Pennyslvania. We freely concede that it is a fine state. On the other hand, comparing Somerset County maple syrup in the same sentence . . . . nay, the same newspaper . . . . with Vermont maple syrup makes icky-sticky goo of the gilded lily!

Vermont producers did at one time purchase maple syrup from Pennsylvania. As a matter of fact, we understand they still do. But inasmuch as our town of St. Johnsbury is widely known as The Maple Center of the World, we believe our manufacturers of maple products should be in a position to know what happens to various grades of maple syrup. Pennsylvania syrup is never used by Vermont producers for candy or table use. Pennsylvania syrup, processed by Vermont maple companies, is used commercially only, in tobacco and similar products.

We do agree with Mr. Basehore when he deplores the uneducated taste of the thousands who purchase a so-called "blended product" which is only 15 per cent maple. However, such products made in Vermont use 15 per cent Vermont maple syrup . . . . the best maple syrup in the world. When it comes to that incomparable, unforgettable real maple flavor in syrup, Vermont takes a back seat to no one. We have the best, and laboratory tests have conclusively proved that the more northerly located sugar maples have a finer-flavored syrup.

In closing, though, may we strike a more friendly note? We salute Pennsylvania and Somerset County. We are sure you are all very nice people, and we admire enthusiasm for one's own community and community products wherever it may exist. But when it comes to maple syrup, one's thoughts synonymize Vermont. Our maple festivals may not be staged in the grand Pennsylvania manner . . . . our queens may or may not be less queenly. . . . and our lure may not hook anything more important than an assistant Secretary of Agriculture. In Vermont, we may have to take a back seat in some things. But in maple syrup, we ride in front.

Perhaps Mr. Basehore would like to share the seat with us . . . . but he'll have to come to Vermont to do it!

Yours truly,

ROBERT S. WEBSTER,
President St. Johnsbury, Vt., Chamber of Commerce.

Coal Field Violence

February 22, 1951

To the Editor of The Cumberland News,

Sir:

I am writing to give you some information on the . . . activities which have been going on in the western section of Garrett County and Preston County, W. Va. Roving pickets have taken the law into their own hands in preventing the miners from going to work at the non-union mines. Violence and mob rule have dominated the scene for the past four weeks.

The buses, cars and trucks, which carry the miners to work at the mines near Kingwood, have been stoned until nearly all the glass in the windows has been shattered; men have been injured so badly with the large stones that they have been treated by physicians. The size of the stones indicated that the throwers, who are supposed to be representing the United Mine Workers of America, intended to do more than scare. Furthermore, the pickets have gone to the homes of the miners who want to work, issuing threats of violence to them and their families if they come out to work. The company officials, in order to protect their employes who want to earn an honest day's living, have had to resort to placing corrugated steel over their bus windows and steel grills over their windshields. This is happening in America, I am sorry to admit.

For several days, the law seemed to close their eyes to the violence that was going on. Now, the state police have been traveling with some of the pickets. However, threats of violence are still going on. One case of mistaken identity was reported by a salesman who was stopped on the highway by this mob. If he would have been the company official he was first mistaken for, who knows how far their lawlessness would have gone? Personal violence and injury was undoubtedly their intention.

The FBI was called in after two railroad cars were derailed. B. and O. detectives were called in when the pockets were opened on three drop-bottom hoppers. An attempt to burn a barn which housed mine ponies also took place at a mine near Kingwood. A diesel motor owned by the B. and C. Coal Company, was also damaged when sand was poured into it. Appeals have been made to the judge and prosecuting attorney to take the necessary steps to stop this lawlessness at once. There have been about 25 arrests on felonious charges but this only represents a few of those men who have been behaving like gangsters.

I am not saying that miners do not have the right to negotiate, but I do say that they should do it peacefully. Pickets are not special citizens who are allowed to beat up their neighbors who want to work. Law must rule if we are to preserve our freedom. Each miner who wants to work should have the privilege of going to work without fear of his life. About 2,000 miners work in the non-union mines in Preston County and this roving band of pickets represents only about 300 out of this number. This minority should not be allowed special privileges to scare the majority into doing what they do not want to do. The tactics displayed in the past four weeks are gangster tactics. No one who knows the facts can deny this. Unpaid bills, cars being returned to dealers and hungry children, are but a few of the results of this mob violence. . . which has put fear into the lives of these American citizens.

The following quotation from a letter to the Preston County Journal, in Kingwood, W. Va., expresses the sentiments of many of us who believe in the constitutional rights of every citizen:

> "We speak with bated breath, and horror of the dictators of foreign countries, of the atrocities committed; the subjugation of the little countries by Hitler, Mussolini and Joseph Stalin; and are spending billions of dollars and thousands of our sons in trying to preserve liberty abroad and at home, and this sacrifice will have been in vain if we permit . . domination of our own lives at home. If this display of force and total disregard of human rights represents the policy of the UMWA, then the organization should be branded subversive and subjected to careful scrutiny of the federal government. If it is not, then the organization should clean house, stop its organizers from instructing its mob of hoodlums to stop the non-union workers regardless of law or decency."

If you think this is just a letter to be ignored, please check my story with the Oakland, Md., Republican, the Pittsburgh Press, the Preston County Journal of Kingwood and the Dominion News of Morgantown. A lot of miners who are being threatened are subscribers to your paper, so I do hope you will have the courage to print this.

Let's hope that law will see that these men are made to realize that mob rule and violence are not allowed in a democracy.

Yours truly,

About Higher Taxes

(The following letter submitted to The Cumberland News was written as an open letter to Eric Johnston, U. S. economic stabilizer.)

Sir:

I read in The Cumberland News that you propose higher taxes to drain off the surplus buying power. I wonder how much surplus buying power you would have if like me you were working four days a week, and keeping a family on the earnings, paying rent, fuel, light and all the other necessary expenses connected to a home. How much surplus buying power do I have?

If Truman hadn't wasted billions, throwing the money to the four corners of the earth, perhaps we would not need an increase in taxes.

Truman said we must all sacrifice. I wonder how much is he and his cronies sacrificing?

Where I work there is a shortage of rubber to work with. There seems that there is a shortage of everything, but the biggest shortage of all is the shortage of brains in Washington. Too many round pegs in square holes.

Delta Theta Chi Has Talk On Styles

To be better dressed, the importance of choosing a dress suitable to one's personality and colors complimentary to one's coloring rather than following a fad were stressed by Miss Ruth Colly in her talk to members of Delta Theta Chi sorority Wednesday evening. The sorority entertained with a dinner at Happy Hills Restaurant.

Miss Colly, member of the faculty of Fort Hill High School, talked on "Clothing," giving hints of what combinations to wear and how to make the best of what one has. She also discussed the Spring styles in shoes, dresses, coats, suits, pocketbooks, accessories and jewelry.

There are always high points and high lights in fashions every season, the speaker pointed out and they can neither be ignored or adopted entirely. She suggested buying clothing suitable and practical rather than extreme. The pyramidal shoulder coat is popular and practical to wear over a suit she said, and reminded her audience that if the American people will not accept extremes those styles will be thrown out. She urged being moderate in thinking and buying.

Miss Colly showed many ways to make large white collars to brighten a blue dress which is always good for spring as black is for fall. In concluding the evening she assisted members in cutting out patterns.

Thirteen members attended. Plans for April will be made at the March 14 meeting, at Central YMCA.

Home Group Hears Talk On Furniture

The historical background of the American Federal period furniture was given by Miss Ruth Clauson at the meeting of the American Home Group of the Woman's Civic Club, yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alvin B. Storey, Buckingham Road.

Miss Clauson explained that the period extended from 1790 to 1840, and the pieces are among the most cherished today, because of the beautiful lines. She said it reflects both the French and English influence and can be noted in the furniture of Hepplewhite and Sheraton, the two outstanding designers.

Speaking of the changes due to various crowned heads of Europe, Miss Clauson showed how the influence of Marie Antoinette was to get away from the types of both Louis XIV and Louis XV, and George IV of England was responsible for being the patron of the great English designers.

Miss Clauson exhibited two small tables, one of original Sheraton, made in 1790, which she brought with her from Europe; and a Hepplewhite reproduction. She went into detail about the authentic pieces and reproductions.

During the afternoon several piano selections were played by Mrs. R. C. Lord.

Mrs. Shorey presided and announced that the next meeting would be held at the home of Mrs. Alvin H. Wilson, Bedford Road, at 2 o'clock, April 26. There will be no March meeting.

Tea was served by the hostess at the conclusion of the program. Spring flowers were used throughout the house and centering the table. Approximately 50 members attended.

Demo Delegates Will Back Party Districting Plan

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 22 (AP) — Democrats of the House of Delegates pledged today that they will vote for a party plan to redistrict the state to provide a constituency for a seventh congressman.

Senate Democrats attempted to do the same thing in caucus, but two Baltimore City senators, Dippel of the Third and Preston of the Fifth, declined to go along until they gave the measure more study.

It is possible they may put in a redistricting bill of their own next week.

Maryland is entitled to seven congressmen because of its population gain in the last decade. It now has six.

Both the Republicans and Democrats are agreed that a new district should be formed, rather than elect a representative at-large in 1952.

Bills incorporating the plans of the two parties were introduced today.

As Democrats greatly outnumber Republicans in both houses, their party plan is the one likely to become law.

Under it, Baltimore City would get three districts entirely within its boundaries, leaving the other four to the counties.

The House marked Washington's birthday by giving tentative approval to a joint resolution which would ratify the 22nd Amendment to the federal Constitution.

Thirty-three states so far have ratified the amendment to limit the President to two elective terms.

The resolution may come up for a final House vote tomorrow or Monday. The Senate has yet to act on it.

The House Agricultural and Natural Resources Committee returned unfavorable reports on three bills which would give the State Game and Inland Fish Commission complete power to set fish and game seasons and bag limits.

Boys' Home Gets $1,200 In Bills Pinned Up In Bar

BISMARCK, N. D., Feb. 22 (AP)—Because patrons of a Bismarck bar pinned 1,192 greenbacks to the ceiling during the past year, Father Cassedy's "Home On The Range For Boys" soon will be $1,200 richer.

Al Klein, manager of the bar, plucked the money from the ceiling. The money, mostly $1 bills, was donated by visitors to the bar. It had been understood that the bills would be given to the "Home On The Range" when each piece of the ceiling tile had a bill fastened to it.

Two Students Jailed In Extortion Plot

PIKESVILLE, Md., Feb. 22 (AP) — Two university men were in jail tonight involved in a $2,500 extortion plot that blew apart in a carefully laid police trap.

The men, identified by Col. Carey Jarman, state police superintendent, as Edwin C. Riggin, 21-year-old University of Maryland student, and Warren Jackson Gore, 22, Johns Hopkins University engineering graduate. Both are from Baltimore.

No specific state charges have been placed against them. But they are to be arraigned tomorrow before the U. S. commissioner on a federal charge involving using the mails to send a blackmail letter.

The men were arrested last night by state police officers who accompanied the intended victim, Christopher C. Campbell of nearby Boring, Md., on the payoff ride.

Police Bullets Shatter Windshield Of Auto During Race With Stork

DETROIT, Feb. 22 & — A young salesman rushing his wife to a maternity hospital had the windshield of his automobile shattered by two police bullets today.

Donald Odom, 26, said he was "running all the red lights because I knew I was going to be a father any second."

Patrolmen Gene Gullion and Allan Cummings sa wthe speeding car, couldn't overtake it, and Cummings fired twice because he said he thought it was someone fleeing from a crime. The bullets went through the rear window and out the windshield.

Mrs. Odom was lying down on the back seat.

Odom stopped, shouted why he was speeding and the policemen escorted hi mto the hospital. They arrived five minutes ahead of the stork which brought an infant girl.

Attractive Salesgirl Halts Runaway Truck

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 22 (AP) — A 23-year-old salesgirl leaped aboard a driverless runaway truck today, stamped hard on the brake and halted its downhill course barely ten feet from busy Main St.

Afterward Miss Theresa Sullivan, an attractive brunette who works behind a hosiery counter, couldn't account for her deed.

"Why did I do it? I don't know," she said, "I just did it. And I'm still shaking."

Freedom Can't Lose–Bradley

VALLEY FORGE, Pa., Feb. 22 (AP) — Gen. Omar N. Bradley said today the United States and the other freedom-loving nations of the world have the strength—morally, politically and industrially—to "assure ultimate victory over Communism."

The five-star General, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, declared in a Washington's birthday address " there is little chance that the march toward freedom will ever falter."

Bradley came to Calley Forge—the historic field where Gen. Washington's tattered Colonial Army spent the bitter winter of 1776-77—to present the 2nd annual Freedoms Foundation awards for "outstanding contributions to freedom" in 1950.

The U. S. has "ample strength," Bradley declared, to share its production with its allies until they become "self-sufficient and independent of our aid."

The foundation awarded $100,000 to 416 individuals and organizations. Three hundred others received gold honor medals while an additional 200 received certificates of merit—all for voluntarily striving for freedom "and the American way of life" by what they wrote, did or said.

Meat Is Carted Away After Railroad Wreck

LOCKPORT, Ill., Feb. 22 (AP) — There was free meat all over the place today when 17 Santa Fe Railroad refrigerator cars were wrecked.

Witnesses said that before police arrived, residents of the vicinity had carted away hundreds of pounds of whole hams, beef quarters and canned lunch meats. Some even brought large meat hooks to assist them in the work.

Chinese Red Official Calls For Peace Pact

BERLIN, Feb. 22 (AP)—A deputy prime minister of Communist China today called for a peace pact between his nation, the United States, Soviet Russia, France, and Great Britain.

In the same breath the Communist official, Kuo Mo-Jo, told the pro-Soviet World Peace Council the United States is the "deadly foe of the Chinese and Korean people, as well as of the world peace movement" which the council claims to represent.

Kuo did not define the exact nature of the five-power treaty he had in mind, but his proposal was linked to yesterday's suggestion by Italy's Pietro Nenni that these nations meet to work out a peaceful settlement of Far Eastern difficulties.

WASHINGTON

THIS town may be full of unpleasant characters—but its also full of happy marriages . . . For that reason we're particularly glad to welcome the theatre's most successfully married couple—The Lunts . . . Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, co-stars for 26 years, will bow behind the footlights in S. N. Behrman's comedy of romance, "I Know My Love," which tells the story of a marriage that survived through 50 years. . .

AUSTINE

She should be able to play "how a woman keeps her man" better than any other actress. Because her own marriage has stuck . . . Interviewed on her ideas about how to be happy though married, Miss Fontanne doesn't mince matters:

"Happiness or unhappiness in marriage depends entirely on the details of daily living. A wife likes to have her husband tell her on the way home from the party that her dress was the best looking!

"A husband likes to have his wife express admiration for the suit he's just had tailored." And she added the tip that two people ought to give each other plenty time to be alone. That was important, too. To have and respect separate interests . . . She spoke frankly about how she and Alfred worked their lives in the theatre.

"We've always been careful to separate our personal and professional lives. Offstage we're together practically all the time. Once we enter the stage door, we're like polite strangers. There's no visiting between dressing rooms. We have work to do until the curtain falls at 11 o'clock. After that we always take up our other life. Generally go straight home to a supper of cereal and milk.

She believed also that too much party-going is bad for a marriage.

"We spend our summer holidays on our farm in Wisconsin. We enjoy reading, sometimes aloud. We like to take long walks, to work in our garden, to just sit and talk. We like nothing better than having a quiet dinner together. And we never have come to that unfortunate state where you run out of conversation. It sometimes happens to people who have been married a quarter of a century."

They don't see the same people over and over, either, so they're not hedged in by one little group. "Many of our friends are outside the theatre, as well in it," says Miss Fontanne.

"And beyond all this," she says, "a happy marriage is one of confidence and affection."

Rep. Albert Morano noting that the two pretty parakeets in his office make more noise in winter than they do in summer! . . .

Morano, formerly Clare Luce's secretary when she was in Congress, kept up one tradition his beautiful boss had started . . . When he came to Congress this January, he installed a pair of love birds just as lovely Clare had done back in 1943 . . . The new birds are nameless, so if you can think of a good name for a pair of chattering but loving parakeets, write or get in touch with Rep. Morano's office . . . Whoever thinks up the best names will get a surprise prize!

Speaking of prizes and contests, I initiated a contest in my column to find for Mr. Ralph S. Damon, president of TWA, a name for his new airline passenger club . . . The contest drew many suggestions . . . One reader, Mr. T. F. Marble of Olive Street Road, Chesterfield, Missouri, suggested "TWA — The Wherever Ambassadors" . . . The suggestion appeared in my column the week of June 7, 1949.

The idea that airline passengers are ambassadors of their own communities wherever they travel appealed to the name-judging group . . . For brevity's sake they shortened Mr. Marble's suggestion to "Ambassadors Club" . . . Apparently the airlines are slow about deciding these things.

Twenty months later I put in a long-distance call to Mr. Marble to tell him he's won a $100 U. S. Saving Bond and the No. One membership in the Ambassador's Club. He took the whole thing very calmly . . . Could hardly remember entering the contest . . . A machine operator for the Sterling Aluminum Company in St. Louis, 45-year-old Mr. Marble said he entered a lot of contests . . . Said he wasn't at all surprised he'd won one . . . Seems entering contests was sort of a hobby with this Marble man . . . So maybe he'll come across with a name for the love birds. . .

At the dinner former Sen. "Curly" Brooks and popular Mary gave for some of his ex-Republican colleagues in the Senate, belly laughs circled the table as well as world affairs . . . One GOP senator back from making Lincoln Day speeches in his home town said a craze had just hit his community. Now everybody could be divided into three classes.

SECRETS OF CHARM

By John R. Powers

IS anyone more admirable than the woman who recognizes her imperfections and seeks knowledge to turn them into assets? Because of such honesty and serious application, far more women appear perfect than ever were born so.

This is why I am happy, whenever I can, to answer reader requests such as this one which laments, "There are no two ways about it—my neck is too long and it's scrawny besides. Is there anything I can do about it?"

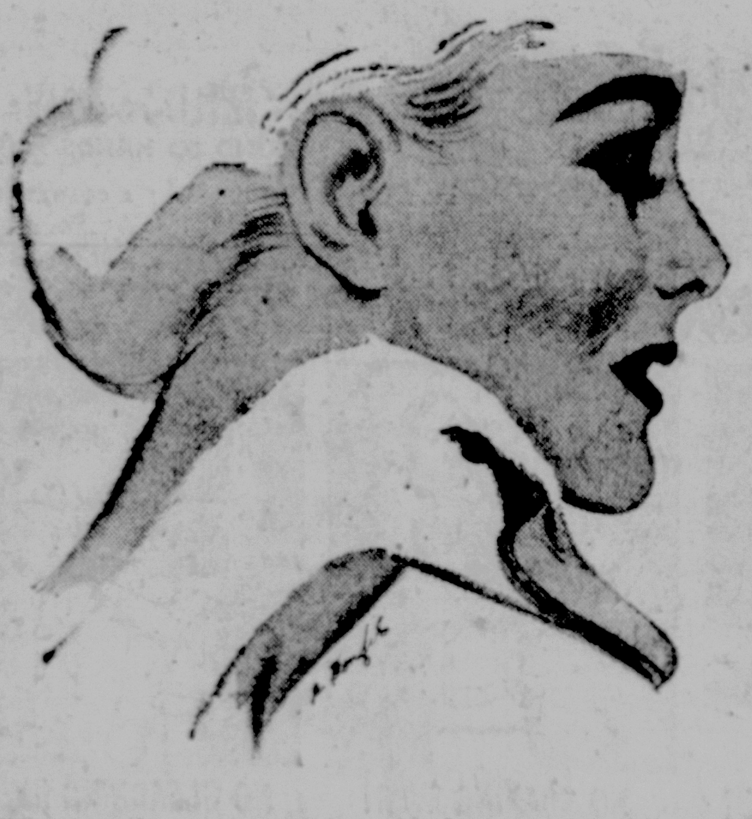
Transform with Cosmetics

Make-up can do wonders to disguise a neck that looks too thin and long. Simply use a foundation on your neck that is two shades lighter but with the same undertones as the one you use on your face.

The artifice will never be apparent to the critical eye nor on the dark collar, if you practice until your application is expert. All that will be noticed is a lovely head poised on a swan-like neck.

Apply a very sparing layer of the lighter foundation from your collar bones outward and upward to blend along the underside of the jaw bones and into the regular foundation already applied to your face. Be sure to get it well up behind the ears.

In the back, start at the top vertebra and work outward and upward to the hairline. Be very careful not to smear the hair with color. When you have the foundation evenly distributed all around, systematically smooth the entire area with the flat of your hands to make certain there is no line of demarcation anywhere. A rearview mirror is a handy gadget at a moment like this.



With cosmetics you can make a too-long and too-thin neck look perfectly proportioned. Here are directions.

Now, powder your entire neck very lightly and brush off the residue. Use the same powder you apply to your face. Because your face powder should be a close match to the skin tones of your face, it will naturally be some darker than the foundation you use on your neck—just what you need to blend the two foundations together.

When you wear a decolletage, include your shoulders in your powdering. Usually they are a shade lighter than your face except at tan time, and your face powder will bring the whole exposed area into a one-tone relationship.

Although no official vote was taken, those present at the meeting last night evidenced approval of the work done by Wood and agreed that activities of his office were well worth the funds expended for that purpose.

Power Plant Advance Crew Due To Arrive

Work On Albright Station To Begin

KINGWOOD, W. Va.—With the start of construction on the new Albright power station only a few weeks off, temporary offices will be opened next Monday by the builders, Monongahela Power Company and the Potomac Edison Company.

The offices will be located in the Albright National Bank building in Kingwood.

A skeleton force will be assigned to the office, with more to be added once ground is broken for the $25 million project.

First arrivals will include R. S. Harp, general construction superintendent, and W. P. Robert, office manager and assistant purchasing agent, Harp comes to the Monongahela-Potomac Edison organization from a recent construction assignment in Baltimore.

Roberts, a veteran of Monongahela, transfers to Albright from Rivesville where he had similar duties in connection with the construction of a new generating unit at Monongahela's power station there. Harp will establish his residence near Kingwood.

Members of Roberts' office staff will include Harold Butler, and John E. Morgan, both of Fairmont; James L. Thompson, Morgantown, Betty Martin Elsey, Kingwood, and Bittie Hoffman, Cadell.

Permanent offices will be set up at the plant site when weather conditions permit construction there.

Date for actual start of work has not yet been set. The plant is scheduled for completion by the end of 1952, with the first of two 75,000-kilowatt units going into service about August, 1952.

Miss Cumberland

"It is wonderful here at school and I never dreamed there was so much to learn after graduating from high school," she said. "I new feel that when I finish this course I'll be able to take my place in the world and follow any career I choose."

Scholarship Worth $400

She laughingly admitted she "can't even buy a pencil here—they won't let me. This scholarship is worth approximately $400 and covers everything in my tuition."

Remembering the many guest appearances she made on television, radio and at clubs and organizations Barbara remarked how the poise she learned while training for the contest helped her "meet the public, make many friends and travel anywhere without fear."

"I've been on television, met girls from all over the state, traveled to Baltimore, Annapolis and New York and met the President of the United States at Friendship International Airport in New York. My picture was taken with Governor Lane who presented me with a bouquet of flowers at the Elks convention here in Cumberland and I've enjoyed every association I have had since winning the title. It's been fun and glamorous and I liked it," Barbara noted.

Advising all girls who would like to enter future contests to work hard and early on their program, especially talent, Barbara said she believed it worth while for every girl to enter if just to earn a scholarship and learn poise and personality and meet people. All contestants should remember the judges try to choose an all-around girl who is attractive, with poise, personality and talent, she said.

To Study Modeling

Admitting she has gained some modeling experience and already has offers of several jobs, Barbara said she plans to take a course at the John Powers Modeling School in New York when she finishes her present schooling but beyond that her future is undecided.

Praising the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce for their work during the contest Barbara said she plans to help in any future pageant the organization might sponsor.

She noted the Maryland Jaycees are sponsoring this year's Miss Maryland review and said she believes it will be an excellent affair.

Marean Refuses Engineering Job

William L. Marean, special assistant city engineer, has turned down the position of building engineer offered him by order of the Mayor and Council on February 12.

Marean reported yesterday that he informed the Mayor and Council by letter yesterday morning of his refusal to accept the post.

On February 12, the Mayor and Council unanimously amended the City Building Code Ordinance to empower the city fathers to appoint either the city engineer or the special assistant city engineer as building engineer.

City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer has been acting as building engineer since the ordinance was amended on July 6, 1948, combining the duties of the two positions.

At the meeting two weeks ago, Marean, in a council order, was made building engineer at a salary of $341 monthly. In another order, Rizer was given just the duties of city engineer at a monthly salary of $363.

Several applications for building permits have been hanging fire pending Marean's acceptance of the position.

Improperly Secured Switch Caused WM Train Wreck

The derailment of a coach on Western Maryland Railway Train No. 2 on February 14 near River Avenue in the South End was caused by an improperly secured switch, according to Joseph M. Miller, superintendent of the Elkins Division of the line.

Miller said an exhaustive investigation has been conducted in an effort to learn the cause for the mishap and the reason for the improperly secured switch has not been determined.

Damage in the derailment is estimated at $10,000 by Miller, who said approximately $9,000 of this total was due for batteries beneath the car. These batteries are used in working the air conditioning unit on the coach.

Ten persons were injured when the coach, attached to the end of the two-car unit hauled by a steam locomotive, ran upright for some distance after being derailed only to topple down a 20-foot embankment.

The train, traveling eastward to Baltimore had left Cumberland a short time before. It crossed a bridge over the Potomac River and then a short distance further on passed over the switch. The locomotive did not leave the tracks, but a mail car was derailed although still coupled to the engine.

The injured were treated in Memorial Hospital, where they were taken by four ambulances. The derailment brought hundreds of spectators to the scene.

New Role For Hamburger

BARBECUED MEAT BALLS . . . Thrifty and satisfying

Here's a new recipe for thrifty beef and pork. These meat balls come with a savory barbecue sauce that rings a change on the old hamburger flavor. Accompany them with plenty of mashed potatoes, a big salad, and bread and butter, and your family will have a hearty delicious meal that won't be too hard on your budget.

If your salad is to be a tossed green one add some carrot curls for taste and color. If you use a razor-like kitchen slicing gadget you'll be able to shave the carrot strips very thin; then soak the strips in a little ice water and they'll curl a bit. Drain the carrot curls well before adding them to the salad. Use a French dressing with which to toss the salad. A particularly good French dressing I tasted at a friend's house recently was made the standard way but had some dried dill seeds soaked in it for an hour or so to add a delectable flavor. Strain out the seeds before using the dressing on the salad.

BARBECUED MEAT BALLS

Ingredients: ½ pound chopped beef, ½ pound chopped pork, 2 tablespoons finely diced onion, ¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ⅛ teaspoon thyme, 1 egg, ¼ cup milk, 2 tablespoons fat, 1 teaspoon kitchen bouquet, 1 cup water, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 tablespoon prepared mustard, 2 tablespoons tomato paste, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, ½ teaspoon chili powder, 1 tablespoon savory brown meat sauce, 1 small clove garlic (minced)

Method: Place beef and pork in mixing bowl. Add onion, crumbs, salt, pepper, thyme, egg, and milk. Mix together thoroughly. Shape into 12 rounds. Arrange in shallow greased baking dish. Blend together fat and kitchen bouquet. Brush mixture over the tops of the meat balls. Bake in moderate (350° F.) oven until meat is lightly browned. Meanwhile, mix water, vinegar, mustard, tomato paste, brown sugar, chili powder, savory brown meat sauce, and garlic. Bring to boil and pour over meat. Continue baking until meat balls are thoroughly done and sauce has cooked down, about 30 minutes longer. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Braised Lamb Steaks

2 lamb shanks
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon fat
¾ cup water
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon crumbled rosemary
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon onion salt
4 whole carrots
4 medium cooked potatoes
1 cup cooked peas

Dredge shanks with flour. Brown in fat in large heavy frying pan. Add water, salt, pepper, rosemary, garlic and onion salt. Cover and simmer until meat is tender—about 1½ hours. Add carrots and simmer ½ hour longer. Remove shanks and slice meat from bones. Place in center of serving platter. Arrange carrots and potatoes around edge. Make gravy from stock in pan — adding more water and thickening with flour if necessary. Add peas. Pour over meat. Serves 3-4.

Korean Dish Adaptation For Leftovers

Perhaps you are one of those homemakers who has always marveled at the manner in which the Oriental peoples put the tiniest morsel of meat to such taste tempting use. If you are, you will want to serve San Francisco Spaghetti at the first opportunity. It uses that little remnant of roast pork in a most delightful manner.

The recipe for San Francisco Spaghetti is adapted from a Korean dish. A bit of shredded cooked pork along with a small amount of ground beef and vegetables is simmered to perfection in a soy sauce. At the last minute canned bean sprouts and shreds of fresh pear are added to the mixture for just the right amount of pleasing crispness. Characteristically, the meat combination is served over a food from the grain group. This time spaghetti is the carrier for the meat and vegetables.

Three corner cutters are included in San Francisco Spaghetti to help you put a little "give" in your food dollar—a wise use of leftover meat, inexpensive spaghetti, and thrifty fortified margarine.

San Francisco Spaghetti

3 tablespoons fortified margarine; ¼ cup mushroom pieces; ¼ pound ground beef; ½ cup shredded cooked pork; ½ cup chopped onion; 1 garlic clove, minced; ½ cup shredded celery; Dash Worcestershire sauce; 2 tablespoons soy sauce 1 teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; 1 tablespoon sugar; 1 cup spaghetti, 3-inch pieces; 1 cup canned bean sprouts; 1 firm pear, shredded.

Melt margarine in saucepan over low heat. Add mushrooms and brown slightly. Add ground beef, shredded pork, onion, garlic, celery, Worcestershire sauce, soy sauce, salt, pepper and sugar. Cook until beef is well done, stirring occasionally. Cook spaghetti in raipdly boiling salted water until just tender. Drain. Place spaghetti in large platter. Add bean sprouts and shredded pear to hot meat mixture. Arrange meat mixture over spaghetti.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

New Main Dish Interest

Fish and seafood, either fresh or canned, offer many possibilities for interesting main dishes. Many good fish dishes are made with milk and cheese.

Try this tasty combination of shrimp with a creole sauce baked in a casserole and topped with puffy mashed potatoes—all you need to complete the meal is a beverage, bread and butter, a tossed salad, and a simple dessert.

Shrimp Creole with Potato Puff

4 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, chopped
3 stalks celery, cut fine
⅔ cup grated raw carrot
2 cups cooked tomatoes
1 bay leaf
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
Few dashes red pepper
1¼ teaspoons salt
1 lb. cooked shrimp

Melt butter in sauce pan, add onion and celery, and simmer about 5 minutes. Add carrot, tomatoes, bay leaf, green pepper, red pepper and 1¼ teaspoons salt. Simmer uncovered, about 20 minutes or until much of the liquid has evaporated. Clean cooked shrimps and add to creole sauce. Pour into a buttered 2-quart baking dish and top with Potato Puff.

Potato Puff

6 potatoes (2 lbs.)
1 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter
¾ cup milk
1 cup grated cheese

Cook peeled potatoes until tender. Drain, mash; add salt, butter and milk; whip until light and fluffy. Add grated cheese. Place potatoes by heaping spoonfuls over shrimp. Brown under the broiler or in a hot oven, 425°F., for about 10 minutes. Serves 6.

Lenten Dish Cheese Soufflé

A cheese souffle is a menu must during Lent, as it is on other important occasions through the year, and you can be sure of success with your souffle if you follow a time-tested successful recipe.

The recipe we're giving will turn out a perfect "top-hatty", velvety textured souffle if you follow it—a souffle that will set off a chorus of appreciative "ohs" and "ahs" when you bring it in, and an encore of admiration when it is tasted.

There are three keys to its success. First, pasteurized process sharp flavored cheese for perfect melting and blending, and for tantalizing flavor. Second, the spoon trick that makes the top hat effect—running the tip of a teaspoon around the mixture in its baking dish, one inch in from the edge. And third, the long, slow baking time.

Cheese Souffle (4-egg)

2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 2 tablespons flour, ¾ cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of cayenne, ½ pound sharp pasteurized process cheese, sliced, 4 eggs.

Make a sauce with the butter or margarine, flour, milk and seasonings. When thickened and smooth add the sliced cheese, and stir until the cheese is melted. Remove from the heat and add the beaten yolks of the eggs; mix well. Slightly cool the mixture, then pour it slowly onto the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs, cutting and folding the mixture thoroughly together.

Pour into an ungreased 1½ quart casserole. Run the tip of a teaspoon around in the mixture one inch in from the edge of the casserole, making a slight "track" or depression. This forms a "top hat" on the souffle as it bakes and puffs up. Bake one hour in a slow oven, 275 degrees. Serve at once.

Plentiful Pork For Buffet Supper

A breath of spring in midwinter menus is sweet-sour pork served in fluffy white rice nests. The tender chunks of flavor-rich pork combined with golden pieces of pineapple make a taste treat you can't afford to miss. The pieces of green pepper and the subtle seasoning of soy sauce add intriguing flavor, too.

Sweet-sour pork is a good way to make use of the plentiful pork on the market. If you're one of the smart homemakers who has a special love for buffet supper entertaining

Sweet-Sour Pork

1 pound lean pork shoulder
Fat, salt, pepper
1 cup bouillon
2 medium sized green peppers
3 tablespoons chopped onion
4 slices canned pineapple
3 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup vinegar
2 teaspoons soy sauce
½ cup pineapple sirup (from canned pineapple)
4 cups boiled rice

Heat a little fat in a skillet and in it thoroughly brown the pork which has been cut in ½ inch cubes. Sprinkle well with salt and pepper. Add bouillon and cook, covered, over low heat for 20 minutes. Cut green peppers into 1 inch pieces and add; also add onions and pineapple slices cut into eighths. Cook another 10 minutes. Blend cornstarch with sugar, vinegar, soy sauce and pineapple sirup and add to mixture. Stir constantly until thickened. Cook 5 minutes longer, and add extra salt and pepper, if necessary. Serve in individual rice rings, or nests of boiled rice. For a buffet supper party, use one large bed of rice. Serves 4.

Keep the present good supply of pork and juicy pork shoulder staks, tender roasts such as pork loin and the less expensive Boston Butt, should be included often.

Speaking of pork chops, have you ever tried them ranch style? Westerners like to brown thick chops, place them in a shallow baking dish, cover with sliced onions, pour lots of chili sauce (mixed with a little water) over the top and bake, covered, in a 325 degree F. over for about 1½ hours.

Meat pies always inspire hearty eating and a pork pie is another attractive way to serve nutritious pork (with all its wonderful B vitamins). To prepare this cozy, old fashioned favorite, simmer cubed lean pork until tender and reserve the broth. Then cook diced carrots, potatoes, celery and onions. Make a gravy using the meat stock. Mix this with the meat and vegetables, adding some drained canned peas or string beans. Season with a little minced parsley, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Pour into a greased casserole and top with biscuit dough to which a little poultry seasoning and curry powder has been added, also a few drops of tabasco sauce. Make a few slits for the escape of steam and bake in hot oven, 450 degree F., for 20 minutes.

A good way to use up leftover pork is in a casserole with sweet potatoes and an orange honey glaze.

Frozen Foods OK

While it's recommended that canned foods be kept from freezing, there's no truth to the notion that freezing makes them unwholesome. Some canned foods of creamy consistency look curdled after freezing, but heating usually restores their normal appearance. However, repeated freezing and thawing injures the texture of delicate fruits, berries, and vegetables.

The controversy persists regarding the value of antihistaminic drugs in controlling the common cold. Proponents contend that these drugs are helpful only during the first 24 to 48 hours of the cold and that they must be given in sufficiently large amounts. According to reports, the antihistaminics certainly do not cure colds, but they may be helpful to check them if properly used.

Cereal Breakfast Makes A Good Party

Breakfast is a party any time you want to make it one. It's an easy party, too, and thrifty when you make it a cereal breakfast party.

Build your menu around a basic breakfast pattern of fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter. Add other items, if you like. But for a well-balanced meal include each one of these basic foods. They lend themselves to party dress and they offer wide variety. There are over a hundred different breakfast foods to use in this pattern. Your main dish—the cereal serving—is the leader for versatility. You have more than two dozen distinctly different varieties of breakfast cereals to choose from. There are rich corn breakfast cereals and mellow wheat ones; you have rice cereals and many made from oats. You can serve this main dish hot, with just a few minutes preparation, or pour crisp ready-to-eat breakfast cereals from the package into your party cereal bowls.

Because of their bland flavors, breakfast cereals lend themselves to all sorts of delicious toppings. Today's suggestion is to top brown granular wheat cereal with a red cherry sauce. To make this topping, you need 2 cups of canned red cherries, 2 tablespoons of cornstarch, and 1 tablespoon of sugar. Drain the syrup from the cherries and heat to the boiling point. Thicken with cornstarch blended with sugar. Boil gently over low heat for 10 to 12 minutes, stirring to prevent burning, until mixture becomes very thick. Cool the syrup to warm and pour over the drained cherries a half hour before serving. The cherries become plump and rich as they absorb the sauce.

The fruit course of this cereal breakfast party is a banana boat filled with tokay grapes. For bread, make melba toast bars and tie with a red ribbon. Or, slice very fresh bread in thin narrow strips and tie into loose knots. Toast in the oven until lightly browned. The party dress for your hot chocolate is a malt-flavored whipped cream topping.

Diet And Eat According To Simple Rules

You can eat three complete meals a day and still be on a diet, losing weight without your family ever being aware of what's going on, according to the "Never-Hungry" diet. The new diet is based on omission of certain foods within the framework of six simple rules:

1. Broil hamburgers and chops. Don't coat them with flour. Make gravy for the family, but don't eat any yourself.

2. When making stew trim all fat from the meat before cooking. Don't brown it. Cover it with water and cook very slowly. Serve in the broth. If the family likes thickened gravy, take out your portion and thicken the rest. Whenever a sauce is needed for variety, a portion of food for the person on a diet can be set aside and served plain.

3. Poach, boil, or steam fish. Don't coat it with batter and fry; don't bake it in a rich sauce. Serve it simply with lemon, parsley, or egg garnish.

4. Cook vegetables in a covered pan in a little water. Remove cover, let water boil almost off. Add skim milk to your portion, if you like, and bring almost to a boil.

5. Serve fruit as dessert. It is best for those trying to lose weight. The family can have ice cream, cake, cookies, sauces for variety.

6. Mix a quart of dried skim milk just for yourself. Keep in the refrigerator and use generously whenever milk is part of the meal. In addition, there are five general health suggestions for a guide in losing weight:

1. Don't skip any meals. Eat three meals every day. This will keep you from wanting to nibble between meals.

2. Get eight hours of restful sleep every night.

3. Drink plenty of water and juices.

4. Get plenty of exercise. Walk at least a half-hour every day.

5. Do your marketing with your diet in mind.

Cultivate a taste for the non-fattening foods. However, if you are suffering from an illness, do not attempt any diet without first consulting your doctor.

The giblets, neck, wing tips and back of a broiler make good stock. Cook them in a cup or two of water with bay leaf, peppercorns, salt, a whole clove, a slice of onion and some celery leaves.

Homemakers who have been enjoying the quick-preparation advantages of pre-cooked rice will be glad to know there is a new 15-ounce package of the rice on the market. The new 15-ounce package furnishes three times as much of the rice as the small 5-ounce package does, and offers a saving in price. Now available in some communities, the new package will be on grocery shelves over the country soon.

For a different salad serve cole slaw topped with a whole canned tomato; drain each tomato well in a slotted spoon before putting on the salad. To make this into a hearty luncheon salad add sliced hard-cooked egg and extra mayonnaise.

Iron Curtain Queries For Radio's Answer Man Help Tell Of U. S. Aims

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK—(AP)—The "answer man" of American radio has become international in scope and has discovered that asking questions is even popular behind the iron curtain.

Bruce Chapman, boss of a long-time favorite program currently broadcast in 30 U. S. cities, reports that 40 per cent of the questions received by an "answer man" program in Germany come from the Russian zone. A heavy volume of mail also turns up with return addresses in Poland and Czechoslovakia.

The European operation was started some months ago in co-operation with the Economic Co-operation Administration as an aid in telling the story of America and its aims. Forty transmitters, including Armed Forces Radio Service stations, broadcast the question and answer sessions across Europe in English, French, German, Dutch, Austrian, Polish, Turkish and Greek.

Each of the programs is specialized, as in the U. S., to answer queries received from a particular region in order to intensify its appeal.

The questions, many of which reflect Europe's different standards of living, concern household matters, life in general, social problems, governmental matters, world problems and much curiosity about America. Some skepticism is expressed, too, as in this question: "How do the working men in America get automobiles, if they really do?"

Bruce Chapman's New York headquarters in a midtown skyscraper is crammed to the ceiling with books, files and other sources of information. He has recourse to something like 20,000 authorities on almost any subject as well as public and private libraries.

Chapman has been on this job close to 14 years. The idea was originated by Albert Mitchell, now in retirement at Tucson, Ariz. The New York staff is made up of about 40 to 50 girls and women. They do most of the researching, letter writing and program preparation.

In the actual broadcasts, in both this country and Europe, local announcers take the parts of questiner and answer man, most of the programs being put on live to keep them as up to date as possible. European programs are in the language of the particular zone to which they are directed.

Headquarters for Europe is in Paris which, because of the many languages used in the daily processing of the questions, takes on the atmosphere of a United Nations. For instance, a question in Turkish will be translated into English, or even German, and then back to Turkish. Paris has about the same size staff as New York. Other offices are in London, Berlin, Vienna, the Hague, Ankara, and Athens.

Mail that comes from the eastern zone of German and other nearby Soviet-controlled territory gives evidence, Chapman said, of having been carried across the borders before mailing. In sending replies, the answers are put on plain paper and otherwise safeguarded in the hope they will be passed on to the right persons through the allowable mailing facilities.

Even obviously planted questions, Chapman said, always get an answer, often over the air. But the replies are phrased to give a true picture and avoid propaganda traps.

Last-Minute Rush To Build Or Buy Homes Sends Prices Over Boom Record Peaks

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK—(AP)—A last minute rush to build or buy homes is speeding construction to boom peaks in many parts of the country.

Bankers and observers see families, who have waited in vain for building costs to come down, now rushing in convinced that higher prices are here to stay.

Fears of building materials shortages and further credit curbs are inspiring a demand for houses that is pushing up prices of all dwellings, new and old, in most communities.

A national survey by the Associated Press shows home building activity now at record levels in 29 major areas where credit restrictions, which require larger cash payments and shorter mortgage terms have had no noticeable effect.

In several states, home building for the first six months of this year is expected to exceed the all-time highs set a year ago.

On the other hand, residential construction is slowing down in 20 important districts, including all of New York State, where it is off 50 per cent from a year ago.

Yet the need for homes built up by the stoppage of construction during World War II and the increase in marriages in the last decade remains far from satisfied.

This is reflected in prices being paid for older houses. A man in Hartford, Conn., paid $3,500 for a house in 1930. When he offered it for sale recently the lowest of six bids was $9,000.

A Long Island house purchased from the builder in 1938 for $13,800 now brings $40,000. Almost every community offers similar examples.

Backlogs of mortgage commitments, arranged before credit curbs became effective, are enabling many builders to produce even more homes than they were building in last year's boom.

But the day of reckoning is due. While 21 areas find the supply of such commitments already exhausted and blame credit restrictions for their slowdown in building, the turning point in most of the 29 booming areas is expected around April. A few observers put the date as far away as June or July, but they are in the minority.

In spite of the recent relaxation of government restrictions on copper tubing in homes, the threat of building material shortages is stressed by many builders and bankers as far greater than that of credit curbs.

Builders in Maine find shortages already slowing up "a market that could be as brisk as 1950." A Portland, Maine, builder says "we can't complete some houses we started last summer."

Other areas expect shortages to develop at any time. The result is summed up by North Carolina officials, who report builders throughout the state "in an evident rush to get housing jobs under way."

In the meantime almost fantastic records are being set.

Activity around St. Louis, Mo., is reported up 166 per cent from the January-February level of last year. Ohio finds it up 130 per cent; Omaha 129 per cent; Baltimore 127 per cent; Seattle and suburbs up 126 per cent.

Home building in 63 California communities is averaging 82 per cent over a year ago. In 60 Connecticut cities and towns home building has doubled since this time last year.

But conditions are generally conceded to be fluid. While Sarasota, Fla., shows a 53 per cent gain, and a ten-county area in Florida average nine per cent up, Orlando reports a decided February slackening from its record January building.

A clue to the real force behind this rush is offered in Iowa where 15 cities show an increase of 115 per cent over January 1950. An Iowa observer reports "this current home building is largely by individuals building for themselves, rather than by firms building houses for sale. Builders, who might under normal conditions be planning developments of 50 or 100 homes, are moving cautiously, putting up a few at a time."

Bankers call the trend a grass roots rebellion.

The Valley National Bank of Phoenix, largest in Arizona, reports a consistent increase in applications for mortgage loans with about 95 per cent being made to individuals constructing homes for their own occupancy.

Attempt To Smuggle $40,000 Worth Of Gold Into Germany Is Disclosed

FRANKFURT, Germany—(AP)—An attempt to smuggle gold worth $40,000 at black market prices into Germany in cans marked "kosher meat" was disclosed in an American court. Officials said they suspected it might be part of a big smuggling operation with links in New York.

A man identified in court as Arthur Gershon, an American official of the International Refugee Organization, was arraigned in Bremen and ordered held under $10,000 bond after U. S. agents testified he received the gold.

U. S. District Attorney James F. Phelps, Houston, Tex., told the court Gershon was arrested in possession of 40 pounds of illegally imported gold and that he was preparing charges against him. Formal and specific charges are not made at preliminary hearings under the U. S. courts' system in Germany.

The gold, concealed in the meat cans, was intercepted as the result of an anonymous letter received by U. S. Customs officials in Frankfurt.

Col. George B. Buell, Charleston, S. C., chief of the U. S. Customs unit, recalled that an attempt recently had been made to send gold to Europe concealed in the body of an automobile. The car was seized in New York as it was being loaded on a ship.

Officials also speculated that these gold shipments might be linked with diamond smuggling operations recently uncovered with arrests in New York of persons attempting to bring concealed jewels into the United States. Their theory is that perhaps the gold is sent to Europe in exchange for diamonds.

U. S. agents testified at Gershon's arraignment that he was arrested after he had picked up several of the gold-filled cans at the U. S. Army postoffice in Bremen. The cans were in packages addressed to apparently fictitious names at Camp Grohn, a center for displaced persons near Bremen operated by the IRO.

Gershon was administrative service officer and postal officer at the camp, officials said, a job which permitted him to collect mail addressed to persons in the camp.

Thirty per cent of the population of the United States is concentrated in 93 cities.

Many Nurses Request Hadacol

HADACOL Helps Folks Suffering Deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron

Registered nurses, in increasing numbers, are showing a keen interest in HADACOL and in the results that are being secured with this great modern formula. Requests have been received from many of these nurses for professional samples of HADACOL and many of them indicated that they recommend the HADACOL formula to their patients. For example, Mrs. Kathleen C. Marquess, a registered nurse, who lives at 519 West 2nd St., Hopkinsville, Ky., says this about HADACOL:

"Your HADACOL has already improved my appetite, and I am sure I'll regain my fifteen pounds soon. Those patients to whom I passed on your professional samples are all continuing to take HADACOL and most of them are now trying it in the family size bottle. All have been helped. Some are much, much better from an emotional standpoint. I saw one yesterday sitting on the porch of the next-door neighbor, chatting and smiling. She had only been able to walk around in the house. Just imagine that—after only three bottles of HADACOL!"

Mrs. Marquess and her patients, whom HADACOL has helped, were suffering deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

By FRED HAMPSON

HONG KONG—(AP)—Suspicion is growing here that an old friend of the United States may try to ride back into power in Thailand at the head of a Communist coup d'etat.

The name of Pridi Phanaomyong, former Siam premier, head of the U. S.-sponsored underground in Thailand in World War II, is beginning to throw fear over troubled Southeast Asia.

Such a coup against Premier Pibulsonggram's pro-western regime would turn over to the Communists one of the richest rice-producing areas of Southeast Asia.

Pridi last May was reported secretly rallying his followers inside Thailand. He had fled the country when Pibilsonggram's military coup d'etat overthrew the regime Pridi headed as premier.

Pridi is reported on highest authority to have gone to Shanghai last October. He is believed to be there still, presumably dickering with the Chinese Communists for terms on a return to power.

Anonymous leaflets recently have been distributed in Thailand's capital of Bangkok proclaiming that Pridi will return this spring.

Added to this is the fact that for the past week Chinese Communist propaganda has been going full blast against Pibulsonggram's government.

Thailand's premier is known to have made numerous attempts in Hong Kong to locate Pridi. It is understood that he wanted to offer Pridi a place in the government in order to remove him from the ranks of the opposition.

Astute observers contend that Pibulsonggram never has been as popular in Thailand as Pridi. Pibulsonggram declared war against the Allies in World War II, was premier under the Japanese, and was tried by his own people as a war criminal. He returned to power by a military coup.

Pridi, on the other hand, directed underground efforts of the U. S Office of Strategic Services during the latter stages of the Japanese war. He has been associated in the mind of the average Thailander who is strongly pro-American, with efforts of the western powers.

Statue Covered Due To Protests

NEW ORLEANS, (INS) — Until two fig leaves can be found, a larger-than-lifesize statue before the municipal court building in New Orleans will be covered with heavy canvas.

The canvas was drapped on the statue of a man, woman and child after city officials received a storm of protests from the citizens of the far-from-Puritan-minded city.

Ray Scheuring, executive secretary to the mayor, said that Sculptor Enrique Alferez has agreed to provide a figleaf, "loin cloth or something" for the man and boy in the group.

Judge Harold Moore, who must see the sculpture every day, commented:

"I have been trying to figure out what connection there is between that thing and justice.

"Unless it's titled 'bare facts and naked truth," I don't know what it's doing at the courthouse."

Communism, Whether Tito Or Stalin Brand, Held Enemy Of Free World

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va.—(AP)—Three former state leaders in present bastions of Communism—Kerensky of Russia, Mikolajczyk of Poland and Gafencu of Romania—declare that Communism is the enemy of the free world whether it bears the Tito or Stalin label.

And they agreed in a joint interview at the University of Virginia that the western nations would do well to exercise caution in building up the Yugoslavian dictator lest the free world lose more than it gained.

Alexander Kerensky, president of the provisional government of Russia in 1917 until exiled by Lenin and the Bolshevik revolution, put it tersely:

"Tito is without any future," he said.

"The internal regime of Tito is the same as that in the Soviet Union. . . Of course I can see that it may be useful to use Tito now. But a new peace-loving world will be possible only after the liberation of all Communist subjugated nations."

He said he could foresee the possibility of "some kind of Tito" succeeding Stalin if the Russian dictator died. And this, he added, would mean the same oppression, the same denial of human rights.

How about reported plans for a possible attack on Tito's Yugoslavia by bordering satellite nations that have held to the Kremlin line of Communism?

"Certainly a possibility that can't be ignored," said Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, former Polish prime minister before and after the war and now an exile.

But Grigore Gafencu, foreign minister of Romania until the Nazis seized control of the nation before the outbreak of war in Europe in 1939, broke in quickly to say:

"It would be dangerous to send Romanians against the Serbs (of Yugoslavia) because Romanians and Serbs have been always friendly. The Romanians won't fight the Serbs. They've never fought one another in history. They won't fight one another now."

Gafencu added here that there was a danger to the free world in utilizing Marshal Tito's armed strength. He said that if Tito were represented as a focal point of resistance the Serbs of his nation might be lost in any future resistance to communism.

North Korean Irregulars Fight Red Overlords

ON THE CENTRAL FRONT, Korea — (INS) — The most feared anti-Communist guerrilla force in Korea today had new recruits—anti-Communist North Koreans who slipped south to Pusan and then to the central front to join famed Guerrilla Fighters Kim Sung Kie and Capt. Robert Rice's Raiders.

Rice's Raiders, who also go by the name "The White Tigers," consist of three Americans and more than 100 North Koreans who volunteered to fight their Red Overlords.

For two months now, in mountainous Central Korea, they have contributed mightily to smashing of the Red infiltrating threat. Recently they have been used to reconnoiter the roads, valleys, and hills ahead of the fighting 7th Division.

Capt. Rice, a tall, dourly handsome man from Evansville, Ind., and Kim Sung Kie, whose life has been devoted to fighting Communists since they seized his home in 1945, commands the group whose fame has spread so fast that Korean refugees have clamored to join the outfit.

The saga of the unit began when the Seventh Division was fighting toward the Yalu River last fall and Rice, an intelligence officer, collected anti-Communist North Koreans to gather information about the enemy.

Before he knew it he had a powerful anti-Communist guerrilla striking force. When the Seventh pulled out of Hungnam, the irregulars went along.

With a bare minimum of equipment—and not much of anything else—the North Korean irregulars have a reputation for fighting more furiously than any other Korean unit with the United Nations.

Each member of the unit is issued a pair of green fatigues and underwear, two blankets and a summer sleeping bag, whatever weapons Capt. Rice can scrounge and "C" rations when they cannot live off the land or buy their own food.

The United States leather industry uses about 50 million goat skins a year, most of which have to be imported.

Antoine of Paris, world-famous hairdresser, once was a sculptor, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

The Old Second Guesser

The Quail-Hunting Monkey

ONCE I owned a beautiful, big going setter dog, named Lennie, who was tops on both birds and Communists. He must have been sired by the FBI. If a visitor with only a slight taint showed up at the farm, bingo, he would get a nip in the quarters without warning—no growling and no barking. At first, I did not realize the significance of this until I began to put one and one and two and two together. It was really his only bad habit, if it could be called such. Some have suggested it would make a wonderful strain if it could be bred into pups, but old Lennie has now passed on.

There was a lady who stopped to see us one day, and I was down at the barn when she walked up, dressed in slacks and looking pretty glamorous. The setter rushed right up to her and grabbed her where her pants were broadest. I apologized.

"That's funny," I said. "He generally only bites Communists." She gave a faint laugh. Six months later, I learned her card had dog's teeth marks on it. He seldom made a mistake.

A piece I wrote on quail shooting de luxe brought quite a response, and one thoughful reader sent in the following letter about a bird-hunting monkey:

At a U. S. Navy Base.

Dear John:

I tried to talk Bill into taking me duck shooting and wound up on one of the darnedest quail hunts on record. There is an ex-general attached to the station here who is now a lieutenant (jg). His home was close to mine and he used to spend, and does spend, a lot of his time hunting even here. It seems like that when he came back from his last cruise he brought a young monkey.

Shortly thereafter he acquired a pointed pup which he began to train on quail as there are plenty of birds over here. The monkey used to go along, became friends with the pup and eventually got interested in quail hunting himself. His owner claimed that the monkey was as good as most dogs on quail and "he could prove it."

So this is all over the bar at the officers' club on a Saturday night. We took him up on his statement because we know him, and a quail hunt was arranged for the following morning, to consist of the three of us and the monkey. They furnished me with a gun and the necessary clothing.

After the usual amount of backing and filling that would be normal on a Sunday morning, complicated by the fact the monkey insisted on riding in the front seat, we got started. The quail country is quite rugged with 6 to 12-inch grass and many low bushes. We fanned out three abreast and the monkey (after a few runs up and down a nearby tree to get limbered up), preceded us by 50 to 60 yards, sprinting back and forth, jumping the low bushes, very much like a springer in high grass.

Pretty soon the monkey goes down on a point—three feet on the ground and tail straight out. Bill was the nearest, so he went in and flushed a covey about 10 feet ahead of the monkey. He got two birds, the monkey ran around in circles making monkey noises (denoting extreme happiness, I suppose), and after Bill and I had paid off our bets, we started on again.

About a mile further on, the monkey pointed again, about 60 to 70 yards ahead [illegible] us. As it was my side, I [illegible] in, but his owner stopped me.

"Look at the monkey closely," he said.

I did—three feet on the ground with the tail straight out as before; but the fourth foot, I guess you would call it the left front paw, is waving about in the air and clearing indicating "stop." I did. The monkey then started racing about an area 40 to 50 feet in diameter. This went on for two or three minutes and then all was quiet. He told me to "go in," so I started.

I got about 20 feet from where the monkey was last seen and up got a single. I shot and missed. As I was reloading, up got another single. I shot and hit. This went on until I had shot at ten singles and got six. I walked over to where I could see the monkey's tail sticking up out of the grass and found him lying on a gopher hole. He had chased the whole damn covey of quail down the hole, lay down on top of it, and was then letting the quail out one by one.

His owner says that if the monkey figures the hunter coming in is a good shot, he lets out doubles, but if he is only an amateur, he lets out singles. I wish I knew where I stand now. Yours, BILL.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 22—(INS)—Cary Grant and Anne Baxter get the leads in "The Doctor's Diary," which Darryl F. Zanuck will personally produce, and Joseph L. Mankiewicz will direct from his own script.

Cary Grant

A say "own script" because the original German play, "Dr. Praetorius" by Kurt Goetz, has been completely rewritten. The original was a stark melodrama about a doctor whose selfless love for a girl seemingly destroys and then saves him. Mankiewicz, with Cary's fine sense of comedy in mind, has changed the story into a comedy drama of considerable sophistication.

This will really be an Academy combination—Zanuck, whose "All About Eve" is up for consideration; Mankiewicz's direction, and Anne's performance in the same picture, have all been nominated.

• — • — •

I am not in the least surprised that Garson Kanin and Ruth Gordon put in a big pitch for George Cukor to direct "Rock-A-Bye Baby," their play, at 20th. And so, by the time this is in print, George will have been borrowed from MGM to direct Susan Hayward in the Kanin-Gordon drama.

This story tells in flashback of a girl who was adopted and what happens after she grows up.

George has really had a wonderful year. "Born Yesterday" was nominated as "best picture," and his "Adam's Rib" has nominations to its credit too.

The most sophisticated entertainment Hollywood has ever had was the smart sketches the Screen Writers' Guild gave at their awards dinner. When people can laugh at themselves I think that's a healthy sign, and, believe me, no one was spared.

Jerry Wald and Norman Krasna got a big round of applause for their quiz stint with Groucho Marx. They certainly were good sports kidding themselves. The combination of "All About Eve" and "Sunset Boulevard," a sketch written by George Oppenheimer, was screamingly funny, with Claire Trevor Nancy Davis and Eddie O'Brien. The latter was the author who kills rather than accept talking pictures.

"The Three Little Maids From The Hinterlands," a song written in Dorothy Parker's inimitable style, was sung by Arlene Dahl, Jane Russell and Marie Wilson. There were many other amusing sketches, and I certainly want to go to the Screen Writers' Guild party every year.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

George Raft is concentrating these days on Betty Binder. Last night they were a twosome at the Windsor and other places.

Bob Cobb gave Ann Sheridan a big birthday cake made in the shape of a hat. Sally (Mrs. Cobb) was hostess at a surprise birthday luncheon for Toni Lanier Mannix at the Beverly Hills Brown Derby.

Mike Connolly of Variety escorted Lillian Ross to the Screen Writers' Guild awards dinner, and she looks wonderful.

Jean Darling, once of the "Our Gang" comedies, was with Norman Krasna and Stan Rubin, good looking young RKO producer brought his fiancee, Coleen Gray. Just about everyone was there.

Abbe Lane, Xavier Cugat's much publicized girl friend, goes into "Casa McCluskey" on the stage for Lester Grady. Cugat's writing the words and music.

Mrs. Tom Brenneman was a guest at Don McNeill's breakfast club show here and Don gave her his biggest orchid.

The Duchess of Windsor, who is Russell Nype's sponsor and great admirer, was not present when he opened at the Maisonette room at the St. Regis. She was in Harkness Pavilion Hospital. Some of our Hollywood people who were there to applaud young Nype were Robert Taylor (stag), Celeste Holm and Joan Bennett with her brother-in-law and his family.

Lili St. Cyr, who opens at Ciro's tomorrow night, is apparently impressed that she is opening at Mr. Hover's night club. She is refusing to be identified as a strip tease artist and has requested Herman to book her as an "ecdyiast." According to Mr. Webster, that's an insect which sheds its outer shell.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

ON THE LINE
By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK (INS)—PARDON MY fascination with the whole question of the A-bomb and what makes it tick. Happen to agree with those who feel that if we didn't have more of them than Russia now has we'd be engaged in history's most exhausting war on half a dozen fronts.

Gordon Dean, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, recently outlined the type of man and woman the commission tries to hire (AEC has perhaps 100,000 workers) and the types against whom the vast engineering empire of the bomb and its by-products must be protected.

You can't get a job with AEC if you are "emotionally unstable, an excessive drinker, or congenital gossip," assuming you have passed the long and exacting loyalty tests and F.B.I. checkups. Dean also lists five categories of persons who are potential trouble-makers, in warning that AEC is the primary espionage target of any enemy of the U. S.

1. The mentally deranged, the fanatic, the assassin. They are kept away by "clever diagnosis . . . steel fences and guards."

with education. No party cards for

2. "Includes the ideological types who for one reason or another are detractors of our democratic institutions, but who unlike the fanatic simply want an outlet, an opportunity to speak and most of all an audience. For these people the Hyde Park treatment and the soap-box audiences usually suffice. Many of the professional joiners will be found in this category." There is always a question, Dean says, whether these "do-gooders" are dangerous.

3. "The category that we will always have with us and certainly the most difficult ones to detect. These are drawn by an ideology to find that spot from which they can most effectively commit a traitorous act. They are smart and blessed them; no foolish acts; no rules and regulations other than the rules and regulations and loyalties of their own creed.

"These are the people who can do us the most harm. These are the people whom we are least likely to detect. Being smart and composed and plausible, they will quietly seek their places in the program and bide their time."

4. The paid spy. No ideology motivates him. He is a traitor for pay.

5. The dupes and stooges of the people in categories three and four. "They will be recruited from the ranks of the minorities — racial, religious and economic minorities. We might call them 'the sheep.'"

Other A-notes:

The atomic power plant for Navy submaries is partly built and its mountain of blueprints have been completed. About 50 tons of metal shielding must guard potential A-sub crews from the radiation of the new power plant, whose great advantage will be that it will provide perhaps months or even years of propulsion without re-fueling.

Considering the appalling dangers involved with working with working with fissionable material, AEC's safety record is one of historic importance.

Only one death has been traced to work on the A-bomb and its related activities since 1946. The man was among nine scientists and lab workers accidentally exposed to radiation. Two suffered injuries and six others, though still being studied, apparently are okay.

Of the five A-workers hurt or ray-burned since 1948, four were injured during the 1948 tests at Eniwetok.

One of the great problems of A-work is protecting the workers from radioactive dust, "ashes of nuclear furnaces" and waste products. The Columbia River, for instance, must be massively protected from the effects of using part of it to cool the "piles" in the plutonium plant at Hanford, Wash. The "pile" at Brookhaven, on Long Island, is air-cooled and the air that comes off it is cleansed and freed of particles which upon exposure to the neutrons in a reactor would become radioactive and filter out over the heavily-populated countryside.

Clothes worn by workers and contaminated cannot be disposed of by burning. For burning the clothes would not get rid of the poisoned gasses within their texture.

Big topic, Mac. Wouldn't surprise me a bit if somebody wrote a book on it one of these days.

Bedford County Farm Group Has Annual Election

200 Attend Meeting Held In Bedford

BEDFORD, Pa.—Officers elected at the annual meeting of the Bedford County Agricultural Extension Association held last week in Bedford were, Sam Baker, Waterside, president; S. A. Koontz, Bedford, vice president; Mrs. Chester England, Everett, secretary; and J. A. S. Beegle, Bedford, treasurer.

Reports from leaders covered a wide range of farm and home activities. Gordon Hull, Osterburg, described experiences in controlling army worms and similar efforts by other farmers in the county. Several thousand acres of corn, hay and small grains were sprayed including 1,000 acres by airplanes. Reports were also given by Reid Hackney, Bedford, on the county's first feeder calf sale; Mrs. George Snyder, Everett, bread making; Mrs. Elwood Hollinger, Woodbury, 4-H clubs in home economics; Ernest Claycomb, Schellsburg, 4-H clubs in agriculture and Mrs. Sam Baker, Waterside, told of the food projects which had been completed.

County Agent L. R. Mollenauer showed a map of Bedford County indicating progress in some soil conservation practices. It indicated 225 farmers had been helped establish contour strips to prevent soil erosion, some 200 had planted 800,000 forest trees seedlings and 12 miles of tile drains had been laid in addition to blasting many miles of open ditches. The map also showed the distribution of 20 farm ponds established with the help of the Agriculture Extension Association. The county agent also referred to seeding of new pastures, improvement of old pastures and better grass legume hay crops as effective erosion prevention measures.

Miss Crystal Summers, home economics worker, spoke of furniture repair, household management and foods, and Paul Edinger, Pennsylvania State College, spoke of the wide participation of farm people of all ages in the program.

Principal speaker was Rev. Harry Richwine, Annville, Pa., who described the essentials of success in any organization. President Baker introduced F. Pressly Shannon, the new assistant county agent.

Six prizes have been selected totaling approximately $140. Team captains and contest rules will be announced within a few days.

House Adjourns After Passing Fire Boss Bill

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—The House passed the "Fire Boss" bill 51-43 after 45 minutes of additional debate and sent it to the governor late today.

Majority Leader Davis (D-Kanawha) moved immediately for adjournment, apparently shutting off a move for reconsideration of the vote. It appeared that Delegate Kidd (D-Gilmer), a leader of the floor fight for the bill was about to offer such a motion when Davis' adjournment motion prevailed.

The reconsideration procedure is a parliamentary move designed to cement tightly actions of the legislative body.

Delegate Maroney (D-Kanawha) at the beginning of debate made an unsuccessful move for adjournment.

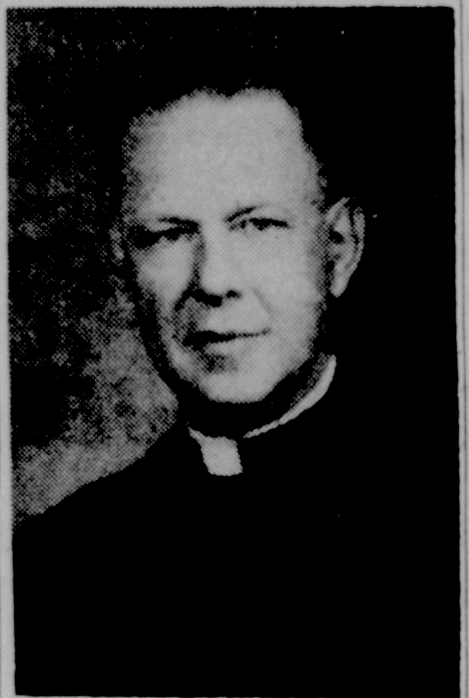
Former Frostburg Pastor To Be Memorial Day Speaker



REV. WALTER V. SIMON

FROSTBURG — Rev. Walter V. Simon, Petersburg, Va., a resident of Frostburg from 1931 to 1945 while serving as pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, has accepted an invitation of the Board of Governors of the Frostburg Memorial Park to deliver the principal address at the annual Memorial Day exercises to be held at the Park Thursday, May 30.

Offers of assistance in promoting an impressive Memorial Day service this year has been received from the town's servicemen's organizations, Boy Scout troops, various church groups and others, including the Arion Band, which has donated its services for many years, playing sacred concerts at the graves of their former leaders.

The Board of Governors are also planning to have the Maryland Singers take part in the program, under direction of Dr. Maurice Matteson.

The new management, who acquired the old Allegany Cemetery April 19, 1950, have been making many improvements to the property. Mrs. Elsie Williams, office manager, reports nearly 100 burial plots, have been placed under perpetual care and that many of the roadways have been hard surfaced during the past 10 months.

Organized as a non-profit community cooperative association, the new owners, according to Henry Rank, park superintendent, are receiving the helpful co-operation of practically every plot owner in the park.

A spokesman for the Board of Governors stated plans are now being completed to have the avenue from the new Grahamtown entrance hard surfaced its entire length through the burial park, the work to be completed by May 15.

Work has also been under way for the past six weeks by Superintendent Rank and Richard Truly, his assistant, in removing all the old trees and bushes from the McCulloh-Green Streets section of the park which was used last summer as a playground for children of the Green and Blair Streets section of town.

Area Teacher's Article Printed

FROSTBURG — "Folklore in the Schools," an article by Dr. Dorothy Howard, instructor at Frostburg State Teachers College, has been published in a recent issue of the New York Folklore Quarterly by the New York Folklore Society.

Dr. Howard cites examples of the place of folklore in areas of teaching, including dramatic play, rythmic movements, creative writing and social studies. She states that pre-school experiences such as chanting rhymes can be used by the teacher when the child enters school to stimulate further learning.

She mentions the work of Frostburg State Teachers College in preparing the teachers to use folklore as a method of bringing children's backgrounds into their school work, and cites the work of the sixth grade of the College Laboratory School as an excellent method of using folklore in social studies.

Under the supervision of Miss Angela Brady, supervising teacher, and Miss Peggy Carter, student teacher, a folklore museum was begun by contributions of old materials from the homes of the pupils, the article states.

Dr. Howard emphasized the "justifiable place" of folklore in the schools since it begins directly with the child's experience and knowledge.

The article may be read in the periodical which is now in the college library.

Outbreak Of First World War Kept Hoover From Fat Engineering Fees

NEW YORK—(AP)—Herbert Hoover recalls that only the outbreak of the First World War prevented him from earning "the largest engineering fees ever known to man."

He would have made the money—he did not say how much—by continuing to develop mines in Russia, the ex-President writes in his autobiography now appearing in Collier's magazine.

But with the advent of war in 1914, Hoover resigned his engineering connections to become director of Belgian relief. He never again returned to his chosen profession.

At the time he headed a highly successful engineering firm "connected with concerns producing hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of useful materials and employing over 150,000 people" in 11 different countries.

Hoover was then only 40.

One of his firm's greatest successes was achieved in mine development work in the Altai Mountains in Siberia.

". . . We developed," he recalls, "probably the greatest and richest single body of ore known in the world."

The mine yielded copper, lead and zinc sulphides as well as large amounts of gold and silver of a quality which "had hitherto existed only in museum specimens."

Commenting generally on engineering as a profession, Hoover says:

"There is the fascination of watching a figment of the imagination emerge through the aid of science to a plan on paper. Then it moves to realization in stone or metal or energy. Then it brings jobs and homes to men. Then it elevates living standards and adds to comforts.

The great liability of the engineer is that his works are out in the open where all can see them. He cannot bury his mistakes in the grave like the doctors. He cannot, like the architects, cover his failures with trees and vines. He cannot, like the politicians, blame his opponents and hope that the people will forget."

GI Gets 36-Foot Letter From Girl

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Feb. 22 (AP)—Pvt. Ray Sroke of Camp Carson received a 36-foot long letter from his girl friend in Milwaukee yesterday.

The letter had candy bars pasted to it "in case you get hungry while reading."

It had feathers pasted to it, to use as ticklers, "in case you get drowsy."

And it had pin-up style bathing beauties attached here and there.

Reason for the 25,000-word curiosity was that Sroke had written his girl, Dolores Hart, that her letters were getting too brief.

More than half of the world's mass is made up of neutrons, yet they are the most difficult of all nuclear particles to detect, say scientists.

White Record Is Wiped Out

Bill Mlkvy Holds Lead Ninth Week

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP)—Another basketball honor—the national major college scoring leadership—was taken from Long Island University's Sherman White today as a result of the fixing scandal.

For weeks the lanky White, considered a certain All-America player, had been trailing Temple's Bill Mlkvy in the race for individual scoring honors.

This week, White overtook Mlkvy, and swept into the lead with an average of 27.7 points per game, the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau reported. That was on the basis of games through last Saturday. Mlkvy dropped to second, with 26.7 average.

Then White, with two other LIU players, was arrested Monday. The NCAB, making note that White had taken the lead with a record-breaking average, said that the same time his performance would be stricken from the books.

Thus for the ninth week in a row, Mlkvy is the leader in this department. In 21 games, Mlkvy has scored 561 points. Scorers:

Clark Grabs Lead In Houston Open

HOUSTON, Feb. 22 (AP)—Jimmy Clark, young Laguna Beach, Calif., pro, sank a 14-foot putt on the eighteenth green today for an eight-under-par 64 that gave him the first-round lead in the $10,000 Houston Open.

Clark's final putt permitted him to edge out Jim Deal, former Southwest Conference shotput champion at Rice Institute, by one stroke. Deal took four fewer putts than Clark for the 18 holes but finished with a 65.

Par-breakers had a busy time on the 6,967 - yard Memorial Park course. Forty-eight players finished under par 72 and 13 others closed at regulation.

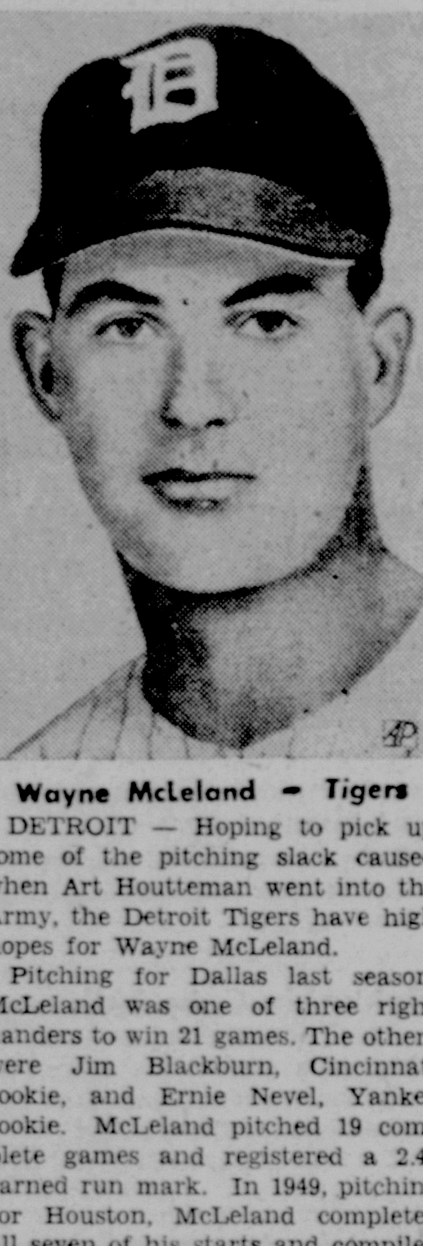
Max Evans, Detroit, Mich., trailed Deal by one stroke at 66.

Grouped at five-under 67 were Larry Glosser, Columbus, Ohio; John Barnum, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore.; Amateur Dick McCreary, Houston, and Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill.

Ransom with a 31 on the par 36 front nine, had been given the best chance to beat out Clark but he played even par on the back nine.

Seven withdrawals, including that of defending champion Cary Middlecoff, Memphis, Tenn., cut the first day's field to 163.

Tigers Pin Hopes On Rookie Hurler



Wayne McLeland — Tigers

DETROIT — Hoping to pick up some of the pitching slack caused when Art Houtteman went into the Army, the Detroit Tigers have high hopes for Wayne McLeland.

Pitching for Dallas last season, McLeland was one of three right handers to win 21 games. The others were Jim Blackburn, Cincinnati rookie, and Ernie Nevel, Yankee rookie. McLeland pitched 19 complete games and registered a 2.49 earned run mark. In 1949, pitching for Houston, McLeland completed all seven of his starts and compiled a 9-11 mark and had a 2.98 earned run average.

Hunters Ask Changes

Boys Play Too Rough

By C. V. BURNS

Two legislative measures of interest to hunters in this section of the state have been passed by the House of Delegates.

One allows the reporting of deer kills at any time during the open season. This is House Bill 199.

The other, HB 200, provides that no game regulation be adopted which would open the squirrel-hunting season before October 10 of any year.

Both bills pertain to hunting in Garrett county.

The section of the deer hunting laws relative to registration is very explicit and says:

"Every person killing a deer in the wild state, shall immediately report to a designated checking station with the said kill."

The suggested change was inspired by hunters who maintain camps far back in the wild and to whom the reporting of each kill immediately meant hours of arduous labor.

Last season the squirrel season extended from September 15 to September 30 and, as in previous years, there were numerous reports of mother squirrels still suckling their young being killed.

The squirrel hunting issue, which has been kicked around like a football for several years, is to be taken up at the next session of the State Game and Inland Fish Commission.

Carl Hartman, Ridgeley High's sharpshooting forward, now has an all-time high of 25.3 points per game for the first 20 games played by Ralph Poling's Blackhawks. His 62 points against West Virginia School for the Deaf on Tuesday night skyrocketed his season's total to 506 points.

Ridgeley concludes its regular 21-game schedule Tuesday night by playing host to Fort Hill.

•—•—•

And while speaking of the school across the Potomac, we might add that Randall "Skeets" Starkey, Ridgeley High alumnus, won his third straight bout in the New York area on Saturday night when he belted out Harry Daniels, of Harlem, in 44 seconds of the second round at the Ridgewood Grove Sporting Club.

It was the West Virginian's 18th consecutive victory since he turned pro and it was his 13th win via the K. O. route.

Starkey's handlers have been asked to have "Skeets" in readiness for tonight in case a lightheavyweight substitute is needed for one of the prelims at Madison Square Garden on the Tony Janiro-Jimmy Flood card.

A Morgantown (W. Va.) sports writer says Zigmund "Red" Mihalic is the best basketball referee in the tri-state district.

Louis, Walker Fight Tonight

Heavies To Clash At San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22 (INS)—Joe Louis makes what he hopes to be the last whistle-stop on his comeback campaign to regain the heavyweight championship when he fights Andy Walker in a 10-round bout tomorrow night at the San Francisco Cow Palace.

The match will be Louis' fourth since he lost his title to Ezzard Charles and the once mighty Brown Bomber would like it to be his last before luring his conqueror into the ring again.

Louis is balding at 36 years and seemingly without the punch which made him the most feared man in boxing for more than a decade. But old Joe still has power to draw the fans through the turnstiles.

A standing-room-only crowd of more than 17,000 is expected to jam into the Cow Palace and produce a gate of nearly $100,000. Louis' share is expected to be about $30,0000.

The great interest in the fight has astounded the promoters. Walker is simply a 28-year-old home town boy who holds the California state championship. Hardly anyone believes he can beat Louis and there is virtually no betting on the fight.

The promoters' only explanation of the stampede for tickets is that "Joe Louis still has the punch at the gate."

There are about 12,500 fire alarm boxes in New York City.

Sentinel Loss, Barton Victory Will Tie Race

Barton Visits Beall, Catamounts On Road, Two Sectionals Open

Allegany and Fort Hill will clash tonight at Campobello in what looms as one of the most important games of the 1951 W. M. I. League campaign.

If Fort Hill wins it's all over but the shouting. However, if Allegany wins, and Barton whips Beall at Frostburg the race will end in a deadlock between Fort Hill and Barton on the final day of the season, thus necessitating a playoff for the league title.

Fort Hill's Sentinels were undefeated until Tuesday when they were spilled at Barton. The Hilltoppers had won 17 consecutive games, including eight in the league up to that one.

Whether Coach "Bobby" Cavanaugh's outfit will rally from that sock on the kisser tonight remains to be seen.

AHS Lost Opener, 40-32

Allegany gave the Sentinels an interesting game at Fort Hill earlier in the season but lost out 40-32. Out of the championship race, Allegany with 8 wins and 10 losses is eager to finish out the season with a .500 record and could do it by beating Fort Hill and Westmont at Johnstown. The Campers' home record is six wins and four losses which were administered by Somerset, the Alumni, LaSalle and Keyser.

Fort Hill has bagged the county Class "A" title and the city championship and a win tonight would give the Greenway Avenue quint another honor.

Meet For 32 Time

It's the 32nd of the series between these schools. Allegany has won 20, Fort Hill 11 in the 31 games played to date.

Clifton Van Roby and Eddie Diehl will officiate.

Barton swamped Beall by the score of 85-40 in Barton and the Braves are hopeful of sweeping the series in the Mountain City tonight. Hull and Farney will be the officials.

In the third W.M.I. League game of the night, Bruce High will play Central in Westernport. Hahn and Pence will be the officials.

Potomac State School opens a two-day road trip at Montgomery, tonight when the Catamounts will meet West Virginia Tech, the No. 1 team in the West Virginia Conference. Coach "Horse" Lough's cagers will tackle Morris Harvey College at Charleston on Saturday night.

Sectionals To Open

Two Class "B" sectional tournaments open in nearby West Virginia tonight.

At Wardensville, Capon Bridge plays Wardensville at 7:30 and Paw Paw opposes Berkeley Springs at 9 o'clock.

The opening round of the tournament at Parsons High tonight finds Kasson playing Bayard at 7 and Davis battling Thomas at 8:15.

Oakland Legion Wins

ACCIDENT, Md., Feb. 22 — The Oakland American Legion defeated the Accident Legion quint by the score of 100-39 tonight in a Bi-State Basketball League game.

Cecil Nicola of Oakland scored 17 field goals and 40 points for Oakland while Kelly had 22 and Tracy 21.

Maryland Racing Officials Oppose Delay Of Results

Anne Arundel State's Attorney Favors Ban

BALTIMORE, Feb. 22 (AP) — Maryland Racing Commission and Jockey Club officials said today they oppose any plan for a 20-minute delay in the transmission of results from race tracks.

The step was advocated before the legislature today by James C. Morton, Anne Arundel county state's attorney, as a method of discouraging illegal off-track betting.

It would be similar to a ban on the transmission of race results from Florida tracks until 20 minutes after the running of a race.

Morton announced he will seek passage of county bills requiring the board of county commissioners to license all subscriptions to racing-wire services.

His proposal met with disfavor from H. Courtenay Jenifer, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, and Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, newly named president of the jockey club, which operates Pimlico race track.

Jenifer said he believes the commission should be left to decide whether the 20-minute delay would be advisable.

Reckord called the proposal "most unfortunate" and said "matters of track administration should be left to" the racing commission.

Harman High School of Randolph county, W. Va., has protested to the state athletic association over the failure of Kasson High to use a registered official for a recent game at Kasson in which five Harman players are reported to have suffered injuries and one starting forward was knocked unconscious for six minutes.

Coach Ellyson of Harman withdrew all his regular players at the half and allowed Kasson to score at will in the last half.

The state association rules provide that after a game is started there can be no discontinuance or cessation of playing.

Principal Meadows of Harman states that the object is to obtain a ruling which would protect players and teams in similar situations.

Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

How To Win An Audience

John Crosby

YOU know what a rating is? Well, sir, you sprinkle 1,500 audimeters around the country; these gadgets listen in on the radio habits of that many people and automatically determine the radio habits of the other 149,998,500 people in the country. Or you call a few hundred people in New York and, by mathematical extension, acquire deep insight into the television tastes of the 11,000,000 viewers in the metropolitan area.

You may well argue that a 1,500 person sample, a ratio of 1 to 100,000, is entirely too small to provide anything like an accurate picture of what 150,000,000 people are listening or not listening to. It's an old, old argument, and you'd pick up a lot of company among radio or TV people to debate it pro and con. Those in favor of ratings, you'll find, have good ratings. That man on the left who says ratings are a lot of blankety-blank x$"&%$ nonsense probably has a rating of .02. A year from now, let's say, his rating climbs to 23. Then you'll find him on the other side of the fence, passionately defending the Hooper and Nielsen ratings like an ex-Socialist who has just inherited $14,000,000 defending the capitalist system.

Four or five years back, NBC raided CBS and picked up most of that network's most popular programs. The CBS ratings dropped like bandits in front of Hopalong Cassidy. The maledictions heaped upon the head of C. E. Hooper around the CBS corridors in those days would have delighted Falstaff, that great master of invective. Then CBS did a little cattle-rustling on the NBC range and picked up Jack Benny, Edgar Bergen, Amos 'n' Andy, and a lot of other prime beef. NBC's ratings sank like rocks. Now NBC, which once regarded Mr. Hooper as a statistical divinity, looks upon his successor, Mr. Nielsen, as an amateur tea-leaf reader whose ratings are about as accurate as a straw in a windstorm.

And so it goes. No matter what you think of the ratings, the advertiser still depends on them and that means the listener is still going to get a high-rated comedian thrust down his throat, no matter how awful the listener thinks he is. Now television comes along and with it come the rating boys with their glittering figures.

• — • — •

If ratings were debatable in radio, they are wildly misleading in television. The man with the highest rating in television is still Milton Berle. Well, Berle has almost the absolute limit of television stations on which to display himself and he also has an excellent time. If you're on 63 TV stations, you're going to get a higher rating than a man on 16 stations, even if you're reciting the classified telephone directory.

The big thing is to get on the air in as many cities as possible. Sammy Kaye, with a perfectly dreadful show, got ratings in the 80s, which is very, very high, in St. Louis. Well, St. Louis has only one TV station. You either took Sammy Kaye or you turned the set off. In its current issue, "Time" magazine surveys local television shows around the country and concludes sadly that people will look at anything. "Fireside Theater," which has maintained an amazingly consistent level of mediocrity, leads all television dramatic programs in popularity—if you believe the ratings. There are at least seven other dramatic programs which are far better, have higher budgets and greater box-office names in the cast.

• — • — •

"Television Magazine" points out that "in both the variety and dramatic categories, the programs with the lower cost per thousand (viewers) are those that have been the longest on television." In general, the oldest programs grabbed the best stations (or the only stations) and the best times. You can hardly avoid them and they can hardly avoid a good rating.

And because they have good ratings, the advertiser assumes that these are the types of programs the public is deeply devoted to and strives to imitate them, no matter how bad they are. It has always seemed immoral to me to set a standard of taste through the manipulation of numbers as the ratings did in radio. In television, the rating system strikes me as not only immoral but as downright lousy arithmetic.

NO UNIMPORTANT CARDS

TO THE fine and observing player, everything is important. In fact, the exact size of every card played is noted, to help him learn anything he can from it. Even the difference between a deuce and a trey can be the key to the play of some hands. It is only the rank and filer, who has not learned that contracts sometimes depend on apparent trifles, that does not try to notice everything presented to his view.

West was definitely the villain of the piece on this deal. Most disastrous of his moves was that double of 4-Diamonds, which he could have lambasted if he had closed the auction by passing. Of course he shouldn't have had such an opportunity, but South had decided that North's two bids of hearts followed by one each of clubs and diamonds indicated five hearts and four each in the minors, whereas North never would have made his bids in that order except with cue-bids of first-round controls. North was plenty lucky to have West's double give him a chance to sashay into the 4-Hearts.

East's club K lead was won by the A. The heart A, K and Q were followed by the spade 10 finesse to the K. West's club J was overtaken by the Q, the 10 scored and the diamond K returned because West had doubled that suit. North ruffed this, then led the spade 9 to the A, felling the Q and assuring success of the contract.

How did North know he should try to drop the Q instead of finessing the spades a second time? That's what West wanted to know. North said he had noticed East's spade plays, the 2 on the first round and the 3 on the second, advertising three of them instead of two or four. After the 3 play, North knew each defender had a spade left. Which was more likely to hold the Q? North decided that, since East had shown such honor strength in the minors, yet West had enough to double the 4-Diamonds bid, West was the more likely holder of any missing honor. He proved right, a reward for noticing the 2 first and 3 later.

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Matter Of Fact

transform the Korean War into a general war.

The second alternative is for the enemy to stay where he is, to go on expending his manpower at the same dreadful rate, and to hope for the best. It seems difficult to believe that either the Chinese or North Korean commanders will feel much enthusiasm for this particular choice. As for the third alternative, it is of course to break contact with the United Nations forces, and to attempt to reach some sort of settlement.

It is entirely probable that the choice between these three alternatives have already been made. Mao Tse-tung's reported mission to Moscow was no doubt undertaken precisely for the purpose of forcing a decision. And it should not be overlooked that there were some menacing hints in Stalin's recent statement, to the effect that a general war might ensue if the Western powers did not knuckle under to Mao Tse-tung's demands.

Yet the State Department feels hopeful enough so that serious consideration has already been given to the form which an acceptable settlement might take. The British who have access to Peking, have already been informally sounded out on the possibilities of acting as honest brokers in the negotiations which might lead up to a settlement. In short, the situation in Korea has been radically and basically altered by the crushing defeat of the Communist offensive. And this in turn, for reasons which will be examined in a forthcoming report, may also have radically altered the whole situation in the Far East.

Area Highway Loads Limited

The State Roads Commission yesterday imposed emergency weight restrictions of 12,000 pounds the axle-load limit on the following highways in Allegany County:

State Route 55 from Clarysville to Midland, State Route 36 from Mt. Savage to Frostburg, State Route 638 from Eckhart to Morantown and State Route 47 along the Barrelville Route. Last week a similar limit was put on Route 53.

Roads in Garrett County affected by the 12,000 pounds limit include U. S. Route 219 from Red House to Keyser's Ridge, State Route 560 from Gorman to Loch Lynn Heights, State Route 41 from Loch Lynn Heights to State Route 38 and State Route 42 from U. S. Route 219 to the Pennsylvania State Line.

As in the case of similar emergency weight limits announced last week, the new restrictions have been necessitated, a spokesman for the Commission explained, by the unusually variable weather conditions of the last few weeks in which freezing temperatures have alternated with thaws and rainy spells.

Approximately 200 miles of highway in the western and central section of the State have been affected by the restriction. Restrictions announced yesterday like those of last week will remain in effect for 60 days unless bettering weather conditions permit the mto be lifted sooner.

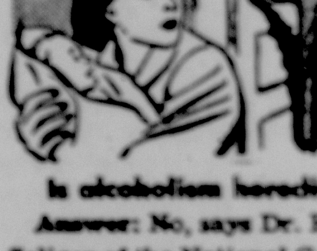
MIRROR OF YOUR MIND

By LAWRENCE GOULD
Consulting Psychologist

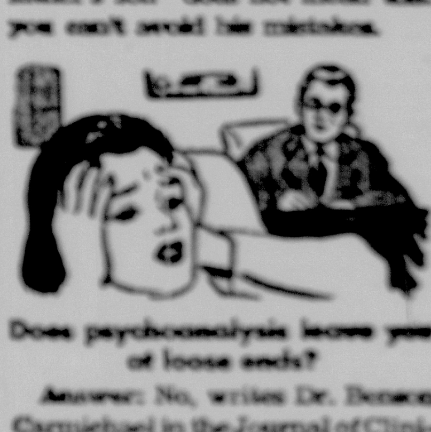
Is it good for a child to earn money?

Answer: Yes, and for an even more important reason than to help him "learn the value of it." The extent to which a child will willingly do useful work after he grows up depends on how far he has learned to associate work with some sort of reward or satisfaction. It is true that your approval or the sense of being useful and important are real satisfactions but nothing quite equals a tangible reward which he can use as he pleases. It is often a good plan to have a child earn the money for his good times and depend upon you only for necessities.



Is alcoholism hereditary?

Answer: No, says Dr. Robert V. Seliger of the National Committee on Alcohol Hygiene in his booklet "Alcoholics Are Sick People." The idea that anyone has a hereditary weakness for alcohol is a "virulent fallacy." "No one is born an alcoholic. It is probable that a person can inherit an inability to handle alcohol and, because of his physical and constitutional makeup, he never has any business using alcohol. But there is nothing in his heredity that forces him to use it." The fact that you are "your father's son" does not mean that you can't avoid his mistakes.



Does psychoanalysis leave you at loose ends?

Answer: No, writes Dr. Benson Carmichael in the Journal of Clinical Psychopathology. Psychoanalytic treatment is not merely a matter of dissecting the patient's emotions leaving him confused and puzzled. If successful, it gives him the power to reorganize his feelings and ideas and he goes on doing this long after the actual treatment ceases. It is your secret fears and childish feelings that prevent your thinking clearly and once you are freed from these, you can use your intelligence for the purpose for which Nature gave it to you.

County Industrial Committee Gets Progress Report From Wood

Says Eight Contacts Showing Interest

Richardson Wood, industrial consultant for the Allegany County Industrial Promotion Committee, made a report on his activities during the six-month term ending February 15 at a meeting of the committee in the employment office, 301 South Mechanic Street Wednesday night.

Wood reported on the so-called "pilot operation" he has conducted during his term. The operation consisted of an effort to interest manufacturing companies to locate in this area, and was the forerunner of a major, three-year plan to be undertaken if the pilot operation proves successful.

Interest Shown

The consultant reported that plans for the location of the Berkowitz pajama factory in Frostburg were well under way and he is currently working on 15 other prospects, eight which are definitely interested in locating in this area. Those interested represent a variety of industrial operations, Wood said. He also mentioned that a large number of firms had been contacted, but many had not shown an inclination to build here.

In the course of the meeting the problem of public financing of industrial promotion was raised. Wood's reaction to public financing of such projects was favorable. He said that many communities will probably have to undertake financing plans in order to further industrial development.

Hancock Man Loses Only One Day In 25 Years At Celanese

Emory McClung Booth, machinist in textile engineering at the Celanese Corporation was presented with a pocket watch yesterday by H. C. Givens, plant manager for twenty-five years service with the firm.

He was also presented a certificate and twenty-five year emblem by W. J. Elvin, plant engineer.

In accepting the awards the sixty-four year old Hancock resident estimated that he traveled about twenty-five thousand miles a year to and from work. He said he put over 300,000 miles on his 1939 Buick and decided it was time for a new motor.

Booth worked for eleven years with the Southern Pipe Line Company at State Line, Pa. before he came to the Celanese. After learning his trade at the Pennsylvania Pipe Company, he became an employ at the Celanese, February 22, 1926.

He accounts for only one day's loss at work and that was last December 11 when a trailer truck slid backward into his car while he was enroute to Cumberland.

Booth who was born and raised in Hancock lived on a farm on Town Hill until six months ago when he moved into Hancock.

He is an honorary member of the Cumberland Vets Club; I.O.O.F. Local 601, Warfordsburg, Pa: Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles; and is the oldest member of the Hancock Band in age and membership.

$95,000 Needed In Civil Defense Work In County

Estimates Are Sent To Delegate Driscoll

Civil Defense officials here have notified state officials that some $95,000 will be needed to meet the principal Civil Defense needs of Allegany County.

Arthur B. Gibson, Civil Defense director for Cumberland, submitted the above estimate at the request of Delegate Fred B. Driscoll, a member of the House Civil Defense committee.

The estimate includes the cost of equipment for fire fighting, communications, emergency lighting and warning facilities for the county.

The list of needed materials includes 28,000 feet of 2½ inch fire hose at a total cost of some $56,000.

Another 14,000 feet of 1½ inch fire hose, at a cost of $15,000 is included.

Fifteen portable pumping units, at a cost of $6,000 have been included.

For communications, officials estimate 10 mobile radio units, costing about $3,000 will be needed.

Several portable generators, which can be placed in immediate use in case of power failure, have been included.

Sirens, to be placed in strategic spots to warn of air attacks or other civil emergencies, would cost another $5,000.

The hose estimates includes 6,000 feet of hose to outfit additional fire fighting units in Cumberland.

City Recreation Dept. Expecting To Meet Budget

Auditor Reports Balance Of $672

The City Recreation Department reported yesterday that receipts forthcoming within the next few months should enable it to meet its budget in spite of the expenditures of nearly $20,000 on a playing field and playground.

The January 31 financial report issued yesterday by Arthur B. Gibson, city auditor, showed the department has a balance of only $672.59 of its $39,000 appropriation, which must run the department until the end of June.

Salaries To Be Met

Edmund P. Hoey, recreation director, said that all is in readiness for the opening of the spring playing season June 25 and that salaries and office expenses will be the only obligation which must be met.

These needs, he added, should be met through sale of fence advertising at the Penn Avenue baseball field, advance sales of season tickets and gate receipts from May and June softball and baseball games.

Receipts from the Constitution Park swimming pool, he added, are expected to cover the full operation of that recreation center.

Hoey said the department has been running a shortage for several months due to extensive work on the Penn Avenue ball park.

Spent $18,000 On Park

All of the expenditures for the field, totaling some $18,000, have been met from the department's current budget, he said, and do not represent the use of a cent of the $150,000 recreation bond issue passed in 1946.

The $18,000 has been sufficient to put the field in playing condition only. Plans are being made to add dressing and shower rooms and to provide top soil so the field can be seeded. Another 1,200 bleachers will be added this year.

During six weeks of operation in 1950, the department received $800 fence advertising fees and some $2,950 from gate receipts. He said advertising fees are expected to reach $1,000 this year, with gate receipts should add another $6-8,000.

Eventually, the receipts from this field will be used to build anoher similar play center, Hoey said, so that the program will be self liquidating.

It will take time to place the program on a self-sustaining position, but it can be one eventually, Hoey said.

Plan Additional Areas

The department hopes to use the $150,000 bond issue as a rotating fund to provide the city with top notch facilities.

The year's appropriations also include $1,000 to purchase ground for

Miss Cumberland Of 1950 Says Winning Beauty Pageant Title Aided Her Career

Cites Value Of Scholarship And Other Awards Offered

By JOHN KNOWLTON
News Staff Writer

"The scholarship which is enabling me to take this secretarial course has been my most valuable gift," Miss Barbara Lee Fulton said yesterday as she paused between school classes to relate some of her experiences as "Miss Cumberland of 1950."

The tall, willowy, hazel-eyed beauty, captured the title in competition against seven other girls in a Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce-sponsored contest at Fort Hill High School June 12, 1950 and represented the city in the state finals at Baltimore June 24, 1950.

Although she didn't win the "Miss Maryland" contest which would have enabled her to go to Atlantic City for the "Miss America" competition, Barbara says she has never regretted for a moment the day she entered the contest.

Didn't Enter At First

"I didn't enter until I had learned of the advantages offered the contestants," she reminisced, "but I would do it again if the opportunity could present itself."

"Bobby" as she is more affectionately known to her many friends is now studying a secretarial course in Catherman's Business School, Baltimore Street, and her teachers all regard her an excellent student and pleasant, charming girl.

"I was going to study to be a teacher and had completed all my plans, even reserving a room, to enter college last fall but the scholarship which was awarded me after winning the Miss Cumberland title changed all my plans," the attractive Allegany High School graduate related.

At first she did not intend to use the scholarship but was persuaded to do so at the bequest of her many friends.

"I had my choice of any course with my scholarship," Barbara related, "but I think secretarial training is most essential and helpful.

Industrial Coal Price Increase Expected Here

Dealers Say Trend Not Yet General

The price of industrial coal has increased slightly in some mines in the Tri-State Area but domestic coal prices have remained stable, local dealers and purchasers revealed yesterday.

Mine operators were permitted to increase the price of a ton of coal after coal miners were given a wage hike of $1.60 per day recently but increases have varied and are not stable generally it was reported.

One large coal dealer in Cumberland said prices vary quite a bit now but that nothing definite has come about. Small operators are fighting to remain in business and industrial coal prices have fluctuated some, the dealer said, but the domestic price has remained unchanged. This is primarily because of coal supplied by small operators and family affairs.

The dealer expected a hike of from 20 cents to 45 cents in the near future in industrial coal.

Loyd F. Keller, purchasing agent of Kelly-Springfield Tire Company related that some mines have upped the price of industrial coal but the increase is not general. Mine owners and operators apparently are still endeavoring to find out how much the wage increase will affect costs before making a move, he said.

The price probably will depend on the demand for coal, Keller stated, remarking that if the price goes too high the industrial plants of the area might go outside the immediate area in an effort to get lower priced coal. He expects a general rise in the price of industrial coal of about 25 cents in the near future but thought domestic coal prices might remain stable.

Local 26 Opens Contract Talks

Contract negotiations between Local 26, Rubber Workers Union (CIO) and the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company opened here yesterday.

Ralph C. Beard, vice president of the union, said the meeting was a preliminary one, devoted chiefly to setting up a schedule for the opening of actual negotiations.

The pact talks will get under way at meetings set Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 9:30 a. m. at the tire plant.

The union is seeking changes in working conditions, seniority and hours of work in the pact which expires on April 1. All issues except pay may be discussed.

Other union negotiators are Leo Barkman, for maintenance workers, and Earl Johnson, for the production units.

Work To Begin On Frederick Street Flood Project Mar. 5

Valley Street Crews Work 24-Hour Days

Army engineers reported yesterday that crews are working 24 hours a day to complete work on the Valley Street portion of the Cumberland-Ridgeley flood control project and indications now point to the beginning of work on Frederick Street about March 5.

With the advent of spring engineers believe excavations will be filled rapidly and work speeded up considerably as the contractors put more crews to work.

J. C. Malloy, representative of the Thomas Earle and Son, Contractors, of Philadelphia, Pa., has been conferring with officials here regarding a sub-contract to George and Lynch for the Frederick Street portion of the project. The Philadelphia company probably will have its equipment on hand to begin work about March 5, Thomas E. Dickson, project engineer said yesterday.

Excavations will be made for a pressure conduit, six feet by six feet, which will empty into Wills Creek at Bedford and North Mechanic Streets. The conduit will be placed between the former Fulton Myers American Legion Post home and 104 North Mechanic, turn down Mechanic toward Baltimore Street to Frederick then up Frederick Street to Henderson Avenue with a branch turning off at Henry Street.

A 52-inch storm sewer at Bedford Street will be re-routed beside the conduit to empty into the creek, Dickson said.

The excavation will cross under the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks at Frederick and Henderson Avenue and the temporary tresle bridge now in use at Valley Street will be moved to the crossing to permit train traffic to be uninterrupted during the flood project work, Dickson noted.

Two large catch basins will be placed on either side of Henderson Avenue at the crossing, extending four feet into the roadway with grating on top, the engineer related, and a regulating chamber will be built there to separate storm sewers and sanitary sewage lines.

The Henry Street conduit will continue to the spur railroad track at George Street with another regulating chamber to be placed in the vicinity of the B & O freight station and the ice plant. Tunneling and laying of pipe has already been completed under the Louis Stein Funeral Home on this portion of the project, Dickson related.

Fifteen More Arrested In Mines Flareup

Violence Ebbs In Preston County

Warrant's were sworn out yesterday for 11 pickets who stoned a bus Wednesday carrying non-union workers from Crellin, Md., to a coal mine of the Kray Coal Company near Howesville in the Preston County mine field. A hearing will be held Monday at 3 p. m. before Magistrate F. W. Pritt.

The Preston County Journal last night said that the eleven involved include Glen Dale Bolyard, Leroy Bolyard, Edward Martin, Victor Hauger, Clarence Friend, Frank Weaver, Clint Shaffer, Dale Strawser, Elwood Cannon, Joe Sedrick, Paul Morgan and Donald Poland.

Each defendant has posted bond of $1,000. The charges against the pickets is injuries and defacement of the Kray Coal Company bus. Sedrick was previously identified by Sheriff J. H. Benson as a U.M.W. representative of Grant Town.

Benson said that four other pickets were arrested yesterday for spreading nails and tacks along the road between State Route 26 and 50 near Tunnelton. The road is used by workers going to and from work at a Tunnelton Cooperative Mine. These four were released on $500 bond and will also appear for hearing at the magistrate's office.

According to Sheriff Benson there have been between 35 and 40 arrests made since the flareup began about a month ago between union pickets and non-union workers in the Preston County coal fields.

There was little violence reported yesterday on the coal front. About 100 to 150 pickets were out again during the morning with state police nearby to keep order. One picket is said to have tossed a stone at a passing truck but police immediately placed him in a squad car for safe keeping. The pickets broke up around noon after which the 11 warrants were sworn out for the arrest of those involved in Wednesday's stoning.

Jury Service For Women Is Asked By Kimble

Plan Is Subject To Referendum

A bill to provide that women may serve on juries in Allegany County, subject to a referendum, was introduced yesterday by Senator Robert B. Kimble.

The measure, SB229, was referred to the Judiciary committee.

The bill is one of two items of legislation being asked by women's groups of this county.

Cards were recently sent out by the Civic Group of the Woman's Civic Club asking groups throughout the county to discuss action on jury service for women and the appointment of a woman on the county school board.

A meeting has been called for Friday, March 2, at 3 p.m. in the Council Chamber of City Hall to discuss the legislative program.

Plans for the legislation have been endorsements of the American Association of University Women, Business and Professional Women's Club, the Democratic Women's Club and the B. and O. Ladies CTP.

The GOP Women's Club will discuss the program at its meeting March 1.

Petitions are being signed, addressed both to the Allegany County Delegation and Senator Kimble asking that a bill be drawn up to legalize jury service for women in Allegany County.

Informed sources said plans being made for such a bill did not include a referendum, which would defer the effective date for several years.

Delegate Fred B. Driscoll advised yesterday that House Bill 221, setting present pay of city employes as the minimum, was sponsored by the entire Allegany County Delegation.
